Part 1 General Provisions

33-30-101. Definitions.

Compiler's Comments

1991 Amendment: In definition of health services inserted reference to licensed acupuncturist services.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 362, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to disability insurance policies issued or renewed and to health service corporations organized or operating in this state on or after October 1, 1991."

1987 Amendment: In (2) inserted "licensed professional counselor" in list of health service providers.

1983 Amendment: In (2), after "nursing services" inserted "licensed social worker or psychologist".

Not Codified: Section 40-5901(4), R.C.M. 1947, defining "commissioner" was not recodified in the MCA because it was redundant with same definition at 33-1-202. This clause has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 1, Ch. 319, L. 1975. See 1-2-208, stating that amendment to codified provision is given effect over uncoded provision.

Attorney General's Opinions

Health Service Corporations Versus Insurance Companies: In a pre-1987 amendment decision, the Attorney General held that Blue Cross and Blue Shield were nonprofit corporations pursuant to section 15-1401, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), and its successor provisions and operated nonprofit plans as set forth in 33-30-101. Therefore, they were not health insurance corporations under the Montana Insurance Code but rather were a special legislative creation, health service corporations, exempt from the Insurance Code. 37 A.G. Op. 151 (1978).

1995 Amendment: Chapter 379 in (1) substituted "33-17-101; Title 33, chapter 17, parts 2 and 10 through 12; Title 33, chapters 1, 15, 18, 19, and 22, except 33-22-111; and 33-3-701 through 33-3-704" for "33-17-212 through 33-17-214 and chapters 1, 15, 18, 19, and 22, except 33-22-111"; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 99, Ch. 379, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

1987 Amendment: In (1) inserted last sentence listing other provisions of Title 33 that apply to health service corporations. Amendment effective January 1, 1988.

Attorney General's Opinions

Payment for Services of Psychologists: In a pre-1983 amendment opinion, the Attorney General held that Montana Physicians Service (Blue Shield) and Blue Cross of Montana could pay for services rendered by psychologists but were not required to do so. 37 A.G. Op. 151 (1978).

33-30-103. Purposes of health service corporation.

Compiler's Comments

Code Commissioner Correction: Section 1, Ch. 713, L. 1989, a short form amendment, directed the Code Commissioner to change references in this section to "agent" to "insurance producer". The obvious intent of the amendment was to replace references to insurance agents with the new term. The Code Commissioner has not made the change in this section to references contained in this section that obviously are to an agent within the meaning of a principal and agent relationship.

Compiler's Comments

1989 Amendment: Substituted references to insurance producer for references to insurance agent or agent. Amendment effective January 1, 1990.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (7) requiring payment for examinations. Amendment effective January 1, 1988.

1981 Amendment: Inserted (2) requiring an examination every 4 years.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 385 (Ch. 452, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for House Bill 385 to explain the purpose of the legislature in approving the increase in the fee for filing of annual report by health service corporations. This bill raises the fee for each individual or family unit covered, from 20 cents to 50 cents, to finance the performance audits required on each health service corporation at least once every 4 years and to carry out other duties imposed on the Insurance Department. The Insurance Department estimates it will require one additional FTE plus a necessary appropriation to cover additional related costs such as actuarial fees, travel expenses, office space, benefits and office equipment for the FTE. The intention of the legislature is to collect the increase in the fee only if the additional FTE and appropriation are authorized."

33-30-107. Annual statement.Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 380 inserted (3)(c) requiring health service corporation to pay all fees and costs of preparing and submitting filings. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 227 in (1) in first sentence substituted "national association of insurance commissioners" for "N.A.I.C." and in second sentence after "in accordance with" substituted "the annual statement instructions and the Accounting Practices and Procedures Manual of the national association of insurance commissioners" for "the national association of insurance commissioners' annual statement instructions". Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 472 in (1) near middle of first sentence after "year on" substituted "the N.A.I.C. health blank form" for "form No. 13 N.A.I.C." and inserted third sentence requiring that an actuarial opinion accompany the statement; in (3)(a) in first sentence after "electronic" deleted "diskette", at beginning of second sentence after "The" deleted "filing" and after "statement" substituted "electronic filing" for "diskette", and at beginning of third sentence after "The" deleted "filing" and after "dates for" substituted "submission of the quarterly statement electronic filing" for "the other three quarterly statements"; and in (3)(a)(i), (3)(a)(ii), and (3)(a)(iii) after "quarter" substituted "filing" for "statement". Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 379 in (1), at beginning of first sentence, inserted "On or before March 1 of each year", after "statement" inserted "for the preceding year", and after "on" deleted "a form containing substantially the same information as that contained in" and inserted second sentence concerning completing the statement in accordance with national annual statement instructions; inserted (2) concerning information in a health service corporation's statement; inserted (3) concerning the filing of electronic diskette versions of annual and quarterly financial statements by health service corporations; and made minor changes in style.

33-30-108. License required.Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 227 in (2) substituted "The commissioner may issue a license after the person has complied with the applicable provisions of this title and has submitted an application on a form prescribed by the commissioner" for "A license may be issued by the commissioner only after the person has complied with the applicable provisions of this title"; and in (4) substituted "The commissioner may revoke or suspend any license issued under this section for violations of this title" for "A license issued or continued under this section may be revoked or suspended by the commissioner for violation of this title." Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 379 in (3) deleted reference to subsection (1)(i) of 33-30-204 and inserted "on or before March 1 of each year"; and made minor changes in style.

33-30-202. Annual report by certified public accountant.Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 379 in (1) substituted "June 1 a financial statement audited by a certified public accountant pursuant to rules promulgated by the commissioner" for "March 1 of each year, a report under oath setting forth"; deleted former (1) that read: "(1) the name of the corporation"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) the address of its registered office in this state and the name of its registered agent at that address"; deleted (3) that read: "(3) the names and addresses of its directors and officers"; deleted (4) that read: "(4) a brief statement of the character of the affairs which the corporation is actually conducting"; deleted (5) that read: "(5) the amount of all dues or fees collected from members in the last fiscal year, the amounts actually paid during that year for health services for the members or beneficiaries, and the amounts placed in reserves"; deleted (6) that read: "(6) a balance sheet and statement of income and expenditures for the most recent fiscal year of the corporation, prepared and verified by two officers of the corporation and certified by a certified public accountant"; deleted (7) that read: "(7) a statement of any other facts or information concerning the financial affairs of the health service corporation which may be reasonably required by the commissioner"; inserted (2) concerning rules established by the Commissioner governing the content and preparation of the report required by subsection (1); and made minor changes in style.

Code Commissioner Correction: Section 1, Ch. 713, L. 1989, a short form amendment, directed the Code Commissioner to change references in this section to "agent" to "insurance producer". The obvious intent of the amendment was to replace references to insurance agents with the new term. The Code Commissioner has not made the change in this section to references contained in this section that obviously are to an agent within the meaning of a principal and agent relationship.

33-30-204. Fees.Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 380 deleted former (1)(a) that read: "(a) filing any statement or report $1"; deleted former (1)(c) that read: "(c) for a certificate with affixed seal $10"; in (2) required deposit of fees in state special revenue fund of state auditor's office rather than deposit in general fund; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 379 deleted former (1)(a) that read: "(a) insurance producer's license:

(i) application for original license and issuance of license ... $15

(ii) annual renewal ... $15

(iii) examination for license, for each examination ... $15"; in (1)(a), after "any", deleted "other"; in (1)(f) substituted "annual statement" for "annual report, other than as part of application for original license"; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 99, Ch. 379, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 351 in (2), before "all fees", substituted "general fund" for "insurance regulatory trust account provided for in 17-2-121". Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Chapter 713 substituted references to insurance producer for references to enrollment representative. Amendment effective January 1, 1990.

1987 Amendment: In (1)(a)(i), after "original license", deleted "including examination" and increased fee from $10 to $15; in (1)(a)(ii) increased fee from $5 to $15; inserted (1)(a)(iii) setting fee for examination for license; in (1)(d) increased fee from $1 to $10; in (1)(e) increased fee from $10 to $25; in (1)(f) increased fee from $25 to $100; in (1)(g), after "report", substituted reference to application for original license for "a fee of 50 cents for each individual or family unit the corporation covered at the close of the year to which the annual report is applicable, except that the minimum fee payable upon filing of an annual report is $100"; inserted (1)(h) setting fee for issuance of health service corporation license; inserted (1)(i) setting fee for continuation of license; and in (2) provided for deposit of fees in the insurance regulatory trust account instead of the general fund. Amendment effective January 1, 1988.

1981 Amendment: Increased the filing fee in subsection (1)(g) from 20 cents to 50 cents.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 385 (Ch. 452, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for House Bill 385 to explain the purpose of the legislature in approving the increase in the fee for filing of annual report by health service corporations. This bill raises the fee for each individual or family unit covered, from 20 cents to 50 cents, to finance the performance audits required on each health service corporation at least once every 4 years and to carry out other duties imposed on the Insurance Department. The Insurance Department estimates it will require one additional FTE plus a necessary appropriation to cover additional related costs such as actuarial fees, travel expenses, office space, benefits and office equipment for the FTE. The intention of the legislature is to collect the increase in the fee only if the additional FTE and appropriation are authorized."

33-30-301. Forms — filing, approval.

Compiler's Comments

1987 Amendment: Near middle, after "filed with", substituted "and approved by the commissioner of this state and the insurance regulator of the state of domicile of the health service corporation in accordance with chapter 1, part 5" for former language that read: "the commissioner at least 30 days before that form is first used. When a form does not comply with the requirements of this chapter, the commissioner shall notify the corporation in writing of that failure and include the reasons for his opinion. Unless the corporation requests a hearing within 10 days, notice by the commissioner disallows use of this form by the corporation. If the corporation challenges the commissioner's disallowance of a form it shall request a hearing on that issue. The commissioner shall schedule a hearing as soon as practicable but not less than 15 days from the date of the request. If the commissioner finds, after the hearing, that the form is not in compliance with this chapter, he may disapprove the form and issue a final order to that effect. Notice of disapproval, including the grounds for disapproval, shall be presented to the corporation not less than 30 days after the hearing. The final order is effective 30 days after the hearing."

(2) A corporation whose forms have been ordered discontinued by the commissioner may appeal, within 15 days after an order, to a district court of the state. The court, upon filing of the proper petition, shall cause the forms and orders of the commissioner to be brought before it, and upon hearing of the case, the court shall either affirm or reverse and vacate the order of the commissioner.

(3) The court may suspend or stay a final order of the commissioner under this section pending trial of the issues or the appeal." Amendment effective January 1, 1988.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "at least 30 days before" for "within 30 days after" in the first sentence of subsection (1).

Case Notes

Statute of Limitations Applicable to Subrogee in Insurance Claim: St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Company (St. Paul), as subrogee, sought to recover from Glassing a payment made to its insured Lynn for underinsured motorist coverage, interest, and costs. Montana has no statutory authority extending the statute of limitations for subrogation claims in such cases. Because an insurer's claim is derived from that of the insured, St. Paul's claim was subject to the same defenses, including the statute of limitations, as though the action were sued upon by the insured and St. Paul had no claim for its damages independent of Lynn's claim. An insurer's right to subrogation attaches upon paying an insured's loss; thus, the 3-year statute of limitations in 27-2-204 applied to St. Paul's claim in the same manner that the original action brought by Lynn and, when raised after the 3-year limit, was time-barred. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Glassing, 269 M 76, 887 P2d 218, 51 St. Rep. 1437 (1994), followed in Nimmick v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 270 M 315, 891 P2d 1154, 52 St. Rep. 208 (1995). Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 450 in definition of basic health care services inserted (j) concerning outpatient self-management training and education for diabetes; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2002.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 450, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] is effective January 1, 2002, and applies to all policies, contracts, plans, or certificates issued or renewed on or after that date."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 434 in definition of basic health care services substituted (j) concerning treatment and medical foods for inborn errors of metabolism for "treatment for phenylketonuria. "Treatment" means licensed professional medical services under the supervision of a physician and a dietary formula product to achieve and maintain normalized blood levels of phenylalanine and adequate nutritional status." Amendment effective January 1, 2000.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 6, Ch. 434, L. 1999, provided that this section is effective January 1, 2000, and applies to all policies, contracts, plans, or certificates issued or renewed on or after that date.

1997 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 165 inserted definitions of point-of-service option, provider panel, and purchaser; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 413 in definition of health maintenance organization, in first sentence after "prepaid", deleted "or other financial" and inserted last sentence concerning method of provider payments; in definition of provider, near middle, substituted "advanced practice registered nurse" for "nurse specialist"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1998.

Chapter 416 inserted definition of affiliation period; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Style changes in the chapters were slightly different. In each case, the codifier chose the most appropriate.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 165, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] [33-31-102 and 33-31-306] applies to health care service agreements purchased or renewed after January 1, 2000."

Section 52, Ch. 416, L. 1997, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), [sections 1, 5 through 8, 17 through 40 [section 29 is 33-31-102], and 42 through 45] apply to group health plans and health insurance coverage offered in connection with group health plans for group health plan and group health insurance coverage contracts issued or renewed after June 30, 1997.

(2) [Section 36] [33-22-142] applies to events occurring after June 30, 1996."

1991 Amendments: Chapter 437 deleted definitions of Department of Health and Director, meaning the Director of the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 663 inserted (1)(i) relating to minimum mammography examination.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 663, L. 1991, provided that the amendments to this section apply to policies or contracts delivered or issued for delivery or renewed in this state on or after January 1, 1992.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 34 at end of definition of Director substituted "2-15-2101" for "2-15-2102"; and made minor change in phraseology. Amendment effective February 24, 1989.

Chapter 80 in definition of basic health care services inserted provision concerning treatment for phenylketonuria.

Chapter 713 substituted references to insurance producer for references to insurance agent or agent. Amendment effective January 1, 1990.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 6, Ch. 34, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to a director of health and environmental sciences appointed on or after January 2, 1989."

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 80, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies to policies or contracts delivered or issued for delivery or renewed in this state on or after January 1, 1990."

Attorney General's Opinions

Competitive Bidding Requirements Inapplicable to Health Maintenance Organizations, Except When Entering Preferred Provider Agreement: Definitions applicable to the Preferred Provider Agreements Act (PPA Act) under Title 33, ch. 22, part 17, and the Montana Health Maintenance Organization Act (HMO Act) under Title 33, ch. 31, are distinctive in the methods by which health services are contracted for in a preferred provider context and the traditional HMO context. The PPA Act applies to a limited class of provider agreements, not including those typically entered into by HMOs. By its passage of the PPA Act and the HMO Act, the Legislature provided two alternative health care delivery systems that would maximize options for health care cost savings. The two acts are independent. Nothing in the applicable statutes supports mandatory application to HMO provider contracts of an otherwise voluntary competitive bidding process under the PPA Act. Therefore, a health maintenance organization is not bound by the competitive bidding requirements of 33-22-1704 in contracting with health care providers, except when entering into a preferred provider agreement. 46 A.G. Op. 9 (1995).

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 457, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because:

(1) it authorizes the commissioner of insurance of the state of Montana (commissioner) and the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services] to adopt, after notice and hearing, reasonable rules necessary or proper to effectuate sections 1 through 29 [Title 33, ch. 31];

(2) section 3 [33-31-201] authorizes the commissioner to make reasonable rules exempting a health maintenance organization from having to file a notice with the commissioner describing material modifications of information required in an application for a certificate of authority if the commissioner considers the information unnecessary; and

(3) section 5 [33-31-221] authorizes the commissioner to make reasonable rules exempting a health maintenance organization from having to file a notice with the commissioner before exercising the powers granted in subsection (1)(a), (1)(b), or (1)(d) if the commissioner believes exercising those powers will have de minimis effect. The legislature expects the commissioner to make only reasonable rules necessary to effectuate or aid the effectuation of sections 1 through 29 [Title 33, ch. 31]. The legislature does not authorize the commissioner to adopt rules that extend, modify, or conflict with either any law of this state or any reasonable implications of those laws. If reasonably possible, the commissioner shall set forth a proposed rule or amendment to a rule in or with the required notice of hearing. No rule or amendment to a rule by the commissioner is effective until it has been on file in the commissioner's office for at least 10 days.

Any rule promulgated by the commissioner in regard to advisory boards of health maintenance organizations must require the membership of those advisory boards to include multidisciplinary representatives."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 577, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature is firmly committed to a managed care system for the delivery of public mental health services in an efficient and cost-effective manner and to ensuring access to services and quality of care; and

WHEREAS, in order for mental health managed care to be successful, care management must be carefully monitored and any contract for services must be enforced; and

WHEREAS, the state, service providers, and service recipients and their families must work cooperatively to ensure that the public mental health delivery system is successful; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature is committed to a transition from the existing contract to a competitive procurement of mental health managed care services."

Saving Clause: Section 72, Ch. 472, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 590 in (1)(b) inserted second sentence concerning health care services by a health maintenance organization; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: Deleted former (1) and (2) that provided: "(1) Upon receipt of an application for issuance of a certificate of authority, the commissioner shall transmit copies of the application and accompanying documents to the department of health. The department of health shall determine whether the applicant for a certificate of authority, with respect to health care services to be furnished, has:

(a) demonstrated the willingness and potential ability to assure that it will provide health care services in a manner assuring availability and accessibility of adequate personnel and facilities and enhancing availability, accessibility, and continuity of service;

(b) arrangements, established in accordance with the rules made by the department of health, for an ongoing quality assurance program concerning health care availability, accessibility, and continuity of service; and

(c) a procedure, established in accordance with rules of the department of health, to develop, compile, evaluate, and report statistics relating to the cost of its operations, the pattern of utilization of its services, the availability and accessibility of its services, and any other matters as may be reasonably required by the department of health.

(2) Within 60 days of receipt of the application from a health maintenance organization for issuance of a certificate of authority, the department of health shall certify to the commissioner that the proposed health maintenance organization meets the requirements of subsection (1) or shall, after notice and hearing, notify the commissioner that the health maintenance organization does not meet those requirements and specify in what respects it is deficient. The director may extend by not more than an additional 30 days the period within which he may certify to the commissioner that the proposed health maintenance organization meets or does not meet the requirements of subsection (1) by giving notice of the extension to the commissioner and the health maintenance organization before the expiration of the initial 60-day period"; near beginning of (1), after "180 days", substituted "after he receives the application" for "of receipt of the certification from the Department of Health"; deleted former (3)(b) concerning certification by Department of Health of health maintenance organization's plan of operation; in (1)(e), after "commissioner", deleted "or the department of health"; and deleted former (3)(g) concerning correction of deficiencies identified by Department of Health. 33-31-221. Powers of health maintenance organizations.

Attorney General's Opinions

Competitive Bidding Requirements Inapplicable to Health Maintenance Organizations, Except When Entering Preferred Provider Agreement: Definitions applicable to the Preferred Provider Agreements Act (PPA Act) under Title 33, ch. 22, part 17, and the Montana Health Maintenance Organization Act (HMO Act) under Title 33, ch. 31, are distinctive in the methods by which health services are contracted for in a preferred provider context and the traditional HMO context. The PPA Act applies to a limited class of provider agreements, not including those typically entered into by HMOs. By its passage of the PPA Act and the HMO Act, the Legislature provided two alternative health care delivery systems that would maximize options for health care cost savings. The two acts are independent. Nothing in the applicable statutes supports mandatory application to HMO provider contracts of an otherwise voluntary competitive bidding process under the PPA Act. Therefore, a health maintenance organization is not bound by the competitive bidding requirements of 33-22-1704 in contracting with health care providers, except when entering into a preferred provider agreement. 46 A.G. Op. 9 (1995).

CHAPTER 36 MANAGED CARE PLAN NETWORK ADEQUACY AND QUALITY ASSURANCE

Chapter Compiler's Comments

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 413, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 12, 13, and 22] [33-36-105, 33-36-201, and 33-36-213] require rules to be adopted by the department of public health and human services.

The rules adopted by the department must establish state network adequacy and quality assurance standards for managed care plans that amplify [sections 8 through 29] [Title 33, ch. 36] and must provide greater detail regarding specific means by which a health carrier meets the requirements of [sections 8 through 29] [Title 33, ch. 36].

A managed care plan accredited by a nationally recognized organization is not required to meet some of the provisions of [sections 8 through 29] [Title 33, ch. 36], but the legislature acknowledges that small managed care plans may not be capable of meeting all of the accreditation requirements of national accrediting organizations.

In order to promote uniformity of standards applicable to all managed care plans, state quality assurance standards for small managed care plans must consist of standards that are appropriate for quality assurance in Montana.

The department may refer reports of noncompliance by a health carrier to the commissioner for corrective action. Under the department's rulemaking authority, the department shall specify network adequacy and quality assurance review processes.

[Section 19] [33-36-210] designates the department of public health and human services as the place for insurance carriers to file documents related to managed care provider network adequacy and quality assurance. The department shall adopt rules establishing procedures for filing these documents and shall adopt rules specifying processes for amending or withdrawing documents already filed that relate to network adequacy and quality assurance."

Saving Provisions: Section 219, Ch. 368, L. 1991, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), the repeal of a statute by [sections 1 through 181] [sec. 216, Ch. 368, L. 1991] does not affect:

- (a) the operation of the statute or any action taken under it before its repeal;
- (b) any ratification, right, remedy, privilege, obligation, or liability acquired, accrued, or incurred under the statute before its repeal;
- (c) any violation of the statute, or any penalty, forfeiture, or punishment incurred because of the violation, before its repeal;
- (d) any proceeding, reorganization, or dissolution commenced under the statute before its repeal, and the proceeding, reorganization, or dissolution may be completed in accordance with the statute as if it had not been repealed.

(2) If a penalty or punishment imposed for violation of a statute repealed by [sections 1 through 181] [sec. 216, Ch. 368, L. 1991] is reduced by [sections 1 through 181] [Title 35, ch. 1], the penalty of punishment if not already imposed shall be imposed in accordance with [sections 1 through 181] [Title 35, ch. 1]."

Severability: Section 220, Ch. 368, L. 1991, provided: "If any provision of [sections 1 through 181] [Title 35, ch. 1] or its application to any person or circumstance is held invalid by a court of competent jurisdiction, the invalidity does not affect other provisions or applications of [sections 1 through 181] [Title 35, ch. 1] that can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of [sections 1 through 181] [Title 35, ch. 1] are severable."

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

No Right of Individual Guarantor to Sue on Behalf of Corporation: Under Rule 17(a), M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), an action must be brought by the person who is entitled to enforce the right according to the governing substantive law and will not necessarily be brought in the name of the person who will ultimately benefit from the recovery. In the case of corporations, neither the Montana Business Corporation Act nor the Montana Close Corporation Act provides for an individual guarantor to sue on behalf of the corporation. Therefore, the District Court did not err in determining that claims for misuse and misappropriation of corporate funds could not be brought by individual plaintiffs. Kondelik v. First Fidelity Bank of Glendive, 259 M 446, 857 P2d 687, 50 St. Rep. 874 (1993).

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Use of Corporation by Individual as Subterfuge — Piercing Corporate Veil to Hold Individual Liable for Breach of Lease: Defendant formed a corporation to render dental services and leased a building for a dental practice with two other dentists, including plaintiff. After the practice became successful, defendant demanded possession of the entire property by letter. When plaintiff did not respond, defendant vacated the building on behalf of the corporation and discontinued paying rent, but the decision was never documented in the corporation's records. Plaintiff sued for breach of the lease contract. Following trial, the District Court concluded that defendant was the alter ego of the corporation and the real party in interest under the lease and that it would be inequitable to allow defendant to use the corporation as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience or justify wrong. Thus, the corporate veil was pierced, and defendant was held personally responsible for damages arising from the breached lease. On appeal, the Supreme Court applied the test in Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180 (1994), to determine whether circumstances were appropriate for piercing the corporate veil. The court noted that the veil may not be pierced simply because an individual is the alter ego of a corporation and the true party in interest. There must be substantial evidence that the corporate entity was used as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or commit fraud, but bad faith alone may be a sufficient cause for piercing the veil. Here, the corporation was unable to satisfy the judgment because it was undercapitalized from its inception, suggesting defendant acted in bad faith. Further, it was inequitable for defendant to personally profit from renting property to the corporation and protect himself from liability with the undercapitalized corporation. The judgment was affirmed. Peschel Family Trust v. Colonna, 2003 MT 216, 317 M 127, 75 P3d 793 (2003).

Previously Raised but Unlitigated Alter Ego Claim Not Barred by Res Judicata: Following a dispute over the sale of irrigation equipment, H-D Irrigating and Lane sued Kimble Properties and Kimble for false representation of the irrigation equipment and damages. Kimble Properties and Kimble counterclaimed for the balance due on the equipment, alleging that H-D Irrigating was a sham and the alter ego of Lane. The alter ego claim was never pursued. The Supreme Court eventually decided the case in H-D Irrigating, Inc. v. Kimble Properties, Inc., 2000 MT 212, 301 M 34, 8 P3d 95 (2000), and remanded for judgment in favor of Kimble. In an effort to collect, Kimble sought to compel Lane to testify regarding the assets of H-D Irrigating, but rather than appear, Lane filed bankruptcy and received a stay on further proceedings. Kimble then filed an action to collect from Lane personally, again raising the alter ego issue. Lane asserted that the issue had been already decided in the prior litigation and sought supervisory control on res judicata grounds. After accepting supervisory control, the Supreme Court decided that res judicata did not bar Kimble's litigation of the alter ego claim. The action to pierce the H-D Irrigating corporate veil was neither previously adjudicated in District Court nor were the facts upon which the claim was based known to Kimble at the time that the counterclaim was filed or at any other time during the course of the previous action. The case was thus remanded for further proceedings on the alter ego claim. Lane v. District Court, 2003 MT 130, 316 M 55, 68 P3d 819 (2003), applying Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180 (1994).

Piercing of Corporate Veil Inapplicable Against Sole Proprietorship: Piercing is used to eliminate an individual's corporate liability in cases in which one establishes that the shareholders are the alter ego of the corporation. Piercing is an equitable remedy and applies only to fraud or to achieve equity. The theory of piercing the corporate veil is inapplicable against a sole proprietorship and thus may not be applied in piercing the entity veil. Jerry Martin & Associates, Inc. v. Don's Westland Bulk, 267 M 464, 884 P2d 795, 51 St. Rep. 1119 (1994).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Dual Prongs for Piercing Corporate Veil — Evidence of Fraud Sufficient: There are two prongs to piercing the corporate veil. First, the person purporting to represent the corporation must be found to be the corporate "alter ego". Second, there must be a showing that the corporate entity was used as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or perpetrate either actual or constructive fraud. Drilcon, Inc. v. Roil Energy Corp., Inc., 230 M 166, 749 P2d 1058, 45 St. Rep. 114 (1988), followed in Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180, 51 St. Rep. 569 (1994).

Commonality of Interests Insufficient to Justify Disregard of Corporate Separateness: On appeal from a declaratory judgment that a proposed transaction to merge into a subsidiary triggered preemptive right and resignation provisions of a venture agreement, the Supreme Court found that evidence did not establish a commonality of interests between defendant corporations sufficient to justify disregard of their corporate separateness. Meridian Minerals Co. v. Nicor Minerals, Inc., 228 M 274, 742 P2d 456, 44 St. Rep. 1516 (1987).

Grounds Found for Piercing Corporate Veil: The Supreme Court found the following elements to be sufficient indicia of control and domination of E.C.A. Environmental Management Services, Inc. (E.C.A.) by Montana Merchandising Incorporated (MMI) for the purpose of piercing the corporate veil and finding that MMI and E.C.A. were one and the same corporation: (1) MMI owned 100% of the capital stock of E.C.A.; (2) virtually all corporate formalities had been abandoned by E.C.A. prior to execution of the contract that was the basis of this litigation; (3) each of E.C.A.'s directors was also a director of MMI; (4) MMI routinely transferred funds from E.C.A. to its own account; (5) E.C.A.'s bank account was managed by MMI; (6) the contract was first discussed at an MMI Board of Directors meeting; (7) at the time the contract was made, E.C.A. was undercapitalized, owed MMI almost $1.5 million, and had pledged its assets to MMI as security; and (8) E.C.A.'s operations were financed by MMI. The court further held that the "subterfuge to . . . justify wrong" requirement necessary to pierce a corporate veil is satisfied by a showing of bad faith on the part of the controlling corporation, and that there is no requirement of a positive showing of fraud. E.C.A. Environmental Mgmt. Serv., Inc. v. Toenyas, 208 M 336, 679 P2d 213, 41 St. Rep. 388 (1984).

Banks: The requirement of section 15-808, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that a corporation "commence the transaction of its business or the construction of its works within 1 year from the date of its incorporation" was not applicable to banks which are governed by section 5-207, R.C.M. 1947 (now 32-1-321, MCA). First Nat'l Bank in Billings v. First Bank Stock Corp., 306 F2d 937 (9th Cir. 1962).

Corporations Organized Prior to 1895: When a mining corporation organized under the Compiled Statutes of 1887 never elected to do business under the Code of 1895 or subsequent legislation, the powers of its board were determined by the provisions of section 15-121, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Kleinschmidt v. Am. Min. Co., Ltd., 49 M 7, 139 P 785 (1914).

Eminent Domain: Section 15-1201, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), relating to scope of corporation laws, furnished no authority for the exercise of the right of eminent domain by a foreign corporation. Helena Power Transmission Co. v. Spratt, 35 M 108, 88 P 773 (1907).

ABA COMMENTS TO MODEL BUSINESS CORPORATION ACT (1960)

Historical: In England, the early corporations received their charters from the crown or by special Parliamentary bill; however, in the United States the granting of corporate franchises has from the beginning been regarded as a prerogative of the legislature. At the outset American corporations were formed by special legislation, but abuses of this method led to adoption of general statutes under which corporations could be formed. The forerunners in the adoption of such general enabling legislation were North Carolina (1795), Massachusetts (1799) and New York (1811).

New or very substantially revised general acts relating to business corporations have been adopted in more than half of the American jurisdictions in the last few decades:

1927 & 1955	Ohio	General Corporation Act
1928	Louisiana	*Business Corporation Law
1929	Indiana	*The Indiana General Corporation Act
1929	Idaho	*Business Corporation Act
1929	Tennessee	General Corporation Act
1931	Arkansas	Business Corporation Law
1931 & 1947	California	*General Corporation Law
1931	Michigan	*Michigan General Corporation Act
1933	Illinois	*The Business Corporation Act
1933	Minnesota	*Minnesota Business Corporation Act
1933	Pennsylvania	*Business Corporation Law
1933	Washington	Uniform Business Corporation Act
1939	Kansas	*The General Corporation Code
1941	Nebraska	The General Corporation Law of the State of Nebraska
1943	Missouri	*The General and Business Corporation Act of Missouri
1946	Kentucky	General Corporation Law
1947	Oklahoma	*Business Corporation Act
1951	Maryland	General Corporation Law
1951	Wisconsin	*Wisconsin Business Corporation Law
1953	Oregon	*Oregon Business Corporation Act
1953	Florida	General Corporation Law
1954	Dist. of Columbia	*D.C. Business Corporation Act
1955	Texas	*Texas Business Corporation Act
1955	North Carolina	*Business Corporation Act
1956	Virginia	*Virginia Stock Corporation Act
1956	Puerto Rico	General Corporation Law
1957	North Dakota	North Dakota Business Corporation Act
1957	Alaska	*Alaska Business Corporation Act
1958	Colorado	*Colorado Corporation Act
1959	Iowa	*Iowa Business Corporation Act
1959	Connecticut	*Stock Corporation Act
1959	Alabama	*Alabama Business Corporation Act

The corporation acts marked with an asterisk bear the short title prescribed in the statute. Under statutes entitled "General Corporation" Act or Law, provision is often made for incorporation of non-profit as well as profit corporations, for example, Delaware General Corporation Law. Where the statute is entitled "Business Corporation" Act or Law, or "Stock Corporation" Act or Law, usually only corporations for profit may be formed thereunder, for example, Alabama Business Corporation Act. Many jurisdictions have special statutes applicable to certain types of stock corporations other than business corporations. New York has both a General Corporation Law, applicable to public corporations, stock corporations, and non-stock corporations, and a Stock Corporation Law, applicable to stock corporations, especially business corporations, except as to matters for which provision is made in any other corporate law. The former contains no incorporation provisions; the latter provides for the incorporation only of business corporations, that is, stock corporations other than banking, insurance, railroad, transportation and cooperative corporations and corporations chartered by the regents, but otherwise applies to all stock corporations to the extent not in conflict with other corporate laws, such as the Banking Law, Insurance Law, Railroad Law, Transportation Corporations Law, Cooperative Corporations Law, and Educational Law. In many jurisdictions, non-profit corporations are formed under separate non-profit corporation acts or laws.

Model Business Corporation Act: The Model Business Corporation Act prepared by the Committee on Corporate Laws (Section of Corporation, Banking and Business Law) of the American Bar Association was patterned largely on the Illinois Business Corporation Act of 1933 and was first published in 1946.

The Committee on Corporate Laws presented the Model Act as a modern statute that preserves in proper balance the interest of the state and the rights and interests of corporations, shareholders and management, and expressed the hope that the act will be of benefit to various jurisdictions in modernizing their business corporation statutes, perhaps to the extent of eventual achievement of greater uniformity among the jurisdictions. The Model Act does not define the term "business corporation", but its definitions of "corporation", "domestic corporation", and "foreign corporation" limit its application to corporations for profit. [See ABA comments under 35-1-102.]

The Model Act is not designed for particular application to large or small corporations but on the premise that a corporation statute, properly drawn, could and should serve equally the requirements of large and small corporations and the fair treatment of the shareholders of each.

Uniform Business Corporation Act: There has been some confusion between the Model Business Corporation Act of the American Bar Association and the Uniform Business Corporation Act (later called Model Business Corporation Act) adopted in 1928 by The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (9 ULA 49). The Uniform Business Corporation Act was enacted in Louisiana (1929). About half of it was enacted in Idaho (1929). Next it was enacted in Washington (1935). Finally, the Kentucky revision of 1946 used a substantial portion of it. Meanwhile, in 1943 the Conference withdrew the act as a Uniform Act and renamed it "Model Business Corporation Act," having reached the conclusion that the subject was one upon which uniformity between the states is not necessary or desirable but that it would be helpful to have legislation which would tend toward uniformity where enacted. Subsequently, in 1958, the Conference withdrew the act completely.

While the Uniform Act was not widely adopted, it did have a broad effect by supplying model provisions for consideration in the enactment of new corporation laws.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-108 [now repealed]. Note that MCA §35-1-108 [now repealed] grants corporations power to have perpetual existence unless a limited period is specifically provided for in the articles of incorporation. See also MCA §35-1-202(1)(b) [now repealed]. The RMBCA allows for corporate seals at §3.02(2) [subsection (2) of this section]. Although the distinction between sealed and unsealed documents is abolished (MCA §1-4-204), some attorneys believe it wise to authorize a seal in case another party to the contract requires it.

MCA §35-1-108(b) [now repealed] specifically addresses the use of credit to assist employees. This provision has been intentionally eliminated from the RMBCA because the wisdom of such actions should be judged under general fiduciary standards and the resultant benefits to the corporation.

The RMBCA has been revised by the Committee to continue the current Montana law allowing donations for religious and war activities (see §35-1-108(13) [now repealed]).

The ABA Official Comments state:

"The general philosophy of §3.02 [this section] is thus that corporations formed under the Model Act provisions should be automatically authorized to engage in all acts and powers that an individual may have." Recognizing, however, that this state limits the powers of corporations in certain regards (i.e., election laws), the words "unless adherence prohibited by law" have been added to the introductory language.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Error in Modification of Rate for Legal Work: The partnership agreement of a limited partnership included a limitation on the general partners' ability to incur legal expenses, but provided that two of the partners could be employed to perform legal services for the partnership, and limited compensation to reasonable hourly rates in an amount not to exceed a total of $60,000 a year without approval. A dispute between partners resulted in a claim that the attorneys had charged excessive rates of $225 an hour and thus should be removed as directors. The District Court found that the attorneys overcharged and required repayment based on a reduced hourly rate. The Supreme Court disagreed and reversed. The contract language clearly allowed for employment of the attorneys, and the partnership was aware in advance of the attorneys' hourly rate. The fees were reasonable given the complexity of the specialized work and the fact that other attorneys in that field charged even higher rates. The District Court erred in modifying the rate for legal work. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

2004 Annotations to the MCA

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Reverse Piercing of Corporate Veil Not Allowed: The plaintiffs sued the defendant for attorney malpractice. The Supreme Court affirmed the lower court's decision, holding that the plaintiffs, as shareholders of a corporation, could not pursue an action on their own behalf when the cause of action accrues to the corporation. Stott v. Fox, 246 M 301, 805 P2d 1305, 47 St. Rep. 2040 (1990).

Listing Property as Corporate Property to Secure Loan — Estoppel to Deny Corporate Ownership: In a conversion action by a bank against its corporate president for selling, in his individual capacity and retaining the proceeds, property that he had knowledge of and acquiesced to being listed as corporate property to secure a corporate loan, he could not, under the provisions of 26-1-601, allege that the corporation did not own the property. Farmers St. Bank v. Johnson, 188 M 55, 610 P2d 1172 (1980).

Loans by Officers Contrary to Resolution — Estoppel to Deny Loan: Even though a corporate resolution stated that the president, vice president, and secretary or any two of them were empowered to act in the name of the corporation, a note and security agreement signed only by two vice presidents was enforceable because if a corporation receives and retains the fruit of a loan, impliedly ratifying it, the corporation is estopped to deny the authority of the vice presidents to borrow the money. Farmers St. Bank v. Johnson, 188 M 55, 610 P2d 1172 (1980).

De Facto Corporation — Capacity to Contract: A de facto corporation has the same capacity to contract as a de jure corporation. Proof of de facto corporate existence is sufficient when the validity of a contract by a body of men claiming to be a corporation is in issue in a suit between third persons. Mont. Ass'n of Underwriters v. Dept. of Administration, 172 M 211, 563 P2d 577 (1977).

Eminent Domain Power: Legislature under 35-1-108 (now repealed) has empowered utility companies to acquire property by eminent domain. Mont. Power Co. v. Bokma, 153 M 390, 457 P2d 769 (1969).

Determination of Nature of Association for Federal Income Tax Purposes: Although under state law at the time of the decision a corporation could not be organized to practice medicine, yet an association that has the criteria of a corporation could be considered a corporation for federal tax purposes. The determination of the nature of associations for federal tax purposes is not by the state criteria but rather by the special criteria sanctioned by the tax law, the regulations, and the courts. U.S. v. Kintner, 216 F2d 418 (9th Cir. 1954).

Corporation Not Authorized to Practice Law: Nothing contained in section 15-104, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorized a corporation to practice law. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937), overruled on another point in Rae v. Cameron, 112 M 159, 114 P2d 1060 (1943).

Power to Issue Notes: In the absence of a state statute prohibiting ordinary industrial corporations from borrowing money on promissory notes or a showing that a particular corporation by its articles of incorporation or its bylaws is prohibited from so doing, a mining corporation, under section 15-801, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), impliedly granting such power when necessary to be exercised in the transaction of its ordinary affairs or for corporate purposes, may do so. Alley v. Butte & W. Min. Co., 77 M 477, 251 P 517 (1926).

Power to Sell Assets: Under the common-law powers reserved to corporations under section 15-901, et seq., R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and enumerated in a general way in sections 15-401 and 15-801, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the Board of Directors of a going corporation could, in the proper pursuit of its business and within the purposes of its creation, against the dissent of a minority of its stockholders, sell a leasehold interest in realty with improvements thereon, and when such sale was made before plaintiffs had judgment against the selling corporation, they acquired no title under execution sale, and nonsuit was properly granted in their action in ejectment against the purchaser. Wortman v. Luna Park Amusement Co., 61 M 89, 201 P 570 (1921), explained in N. Min. Corp. v. Trunz, 124 F2d 14 (9th Cir. 1941).

Supplying Water to Public: Section 15-104, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorized the formation of a corporation to supply water to the public; and section 15-109, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), gave further recognition to the same right. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912).

Power to Condemn Generally:

The provisions of section 15-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and 69-14-531, 69-14-532, 69-14-533, 69-14-539, 69-14-552, 69-14-558, and 69-14-561 (formerly 72-201 and 72-205, R.C.M. 1947) are exceedingly liberal, but they must be interpreted in the light of 70-30-111 (formerly 93-9905, R.C.M. 1947), and the rule of necessity must be determinative of the right to take in each instance. N. Pac. Ry. v. McAdow, 44 M 547, 121 P 473 (1912).

The changing of the channel of a stream which would otherwise have to be crossed by a railway to conform to the route selected by it, when necessary to make the road secure for life and property, is a part of the construction of the road, and authority is granted to secure the necessary amount of land to make such change by means of condemnation proceedings. State ex rel. Bloomington Land & Live Stock Co. v. District Court, 34 M 535, 88 P 44 (1906). See Archer v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 41 M 56, 108 P 571 (1910); N. Pac. Ry. v. McAdow, 44 M 547, 121 P 473 (1912); Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. of Am. v. Nolan, 53 M 129, 162 P 169 (1916).

Acquisition of Stock in Another Corporation: At the time of the case, the only provisions concerning merger of corporations were found in sections 15-104, 15-620, and 15-1603, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorizing one corporation to acquire shares of stock in another. United Missouri River Power Co. v. Yoder, 41 M 245, 108 P 912 (1910).

Right of Eminent Domain by a Foreign Corporation:

By section 15-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the Legislature intended to give foreign corporations the same power in respect to eminent domain as domestic corporations enjoy. Spratt v. Helena Power Transmission Co., 37 M 60, 94 P 631 (1908).

Section 15-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), furnished no authority for the exercise of the right of eminent domain by a foreign corporation. Spratt v. Helena Power Transmission Co., 37 M 60, 94 P 631 (1908); Helena Power Transmission Co. v. Spratt, 35 M 108, 88 P 773 (1907).

Storage of Goods: Under section 15-104, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), a corporation could be organized for the purpose of storing goods in a warehouse for shipment. Orient Ins. Co. v. N. Pac. Ry., 31 M 502, 78 P 1036 (1905).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Organization Holding Itself Out as Corporation Estopped From Denying Legality of Its Corporate Existence: The plaintiffs sought to bring an action for attorney malpractice on their own behalf, arguing that the corporation had ceased to legally exist. The Supreme Court ruled that since the corporation had continued to act as a corporate entity after it had expired, the plaintiffs were estopped from challenging its corporate status. Stott v. Fox, 246 M 301, 805 P2d 1305, 47 St. Rep. 2040 (1990).

Grounds Found for Piercing Corporate Veil: The Supreme Court found the following elements to be sufficient indicia of control and domination of E.C.A. Environmental Management Services, Inc. (E.C.A.) by Montana Merchandising Incorporated (MMI) for the purpose of piercing the corporate veil and finding that MMI and E.C.A. were one and the same corporation: (1) MMI owned 100% of the capital stock of E.C.A.; (2) virtually all corporate formalities had been abandoned by E.C.A. prior to execution of the contract that was the basis of this litigation; (3) each of E.C.A.'s directors was also a director of MMI; (4) MMI routinely transferred funds from E.C.A. to its own account; (5) E.C.A.'s bank account was managed by MMI; (6) the contract was first discussed at an MMI Board of Directors meeting; (7) at the time the contract was made, E.C.A. was undercapitalized, owed MMI almost $1.5 million, and had pledged its assets to MMI as security; and (8) E.C.A.'s operations were financed by MMI. The court further held that the "subterfuge to . . . justify wrong" requirement necessary to pierce a corporate veil is satisfied by a showing of bad faith on the part of the controlling corporation, and that there is no requirement of a positive showing of fraud. E.C.A. Environmental Mgmt. Serv., Inc. v. Toenyes, 208 M 336, 679 P2d 213, 41 St. Rep. 388 (1984).

Piercing Corporate Veil Doctrine — Refusal to Apply: The doctrine of piercing the corporate veil to avoid fraud or injustice was not applied in a suit for damages arising from defects in a modular home manufactured and installed by defendant where there was no evidence that the corporation was defectively formed or formed to avoid personal liability on the part of the officers. Little v. Grizzly Mfg., 195 M 419, 636 P2d 839, 38 St. Rep. 1994 (1981).

Public Policy Against Personal Liability of Agent: As a matter of public policy, the officers and agents of a corporation must be shielded from personal liability for acts they take on behalf of the corporation in furtherance of corporate goals, policies, and business interests. Little v. Grizzly Mfg., 195 M 419, 636 P2d 839, 38 St. Rep. 1994 (1981).

Malicious Inducement of Breach of Contract — Individual Liability of Corporate Agents, Employees, Officers, or Directors: In a case of first impression in Montana, the issue was whether agents, employees, officers, or directors of a corporation may be held liable individually for the tort of malicious inducement of a breach of an employment contract. The resolution of the appeal depended upon a weighing of public policy considerations. The court held that the corporate veil should not be utilized as a protective device by those who employ corporate power or authority to serve their own ends. Tort liability for the inducement of breach of contract should be imposed when a corporate agent, employee, officer, or director induces a breach of contract for private benefit or because of personal feeling and purposes relative to a third party. The privilege of limited liability should be applicable in those situations where actions are motivated and taken in the furtherance of corporate purposes, policies, and interests. When plaintiff/appellant failed to show that the actions of individual defendants were not taken in furtherance of corporate purposes and interests, the summary judgment granted to the defendants was affirmed. Phillips v. Mont. Educ. Ass'n, 187 M 419, 610 P2d 154 (1980), followed in Bottrell v. Am. Bank, 237 M 1, 773 P2d 694, 46 St. Rep. 561 (1989), Lachenmaier v. First Bank Sys., Inc., 246 M 26, 803 P2d 614, 47 St. Rep. 2244 (1990), Mannix v. Butte Water Co., 249 M 372, 816 P2d 441, 48 St. Rep. 782 (1991), and King v. Zimmerman, 266 M 54, 878 P2d 895, 51 St. Rep. 659 (1994).

De Facto Corporation — Capacity to Contract: A de facto corporation has the same capacity to contract as a de jure corporation. Proof of de facto corporate existence is sufficient when the validity of a contract by a body of men claiming to be a corporation is in issue in a suit between third persons. Mont. Ass'n of Underwriters v. Dept. of Administration, 172 M 211, 563 P2d 577 (1977).

Defenses Held Collateral Attack: The defense of a corporation and one of its stockholders in an action by another stockholder to recover on a corporate note, that the note was void because the corporate powers of the company had lapsed upon the retirement of one of the directors who had sold his stock to the other two, constituted a collateral attack on the corporation. The defendant corporate stockholder was not in a position to assert that under the facts the activities of the corporation constituted a partnership between himself and plaintiff, the only other stockholder, so as to entitle him to halt the foreclosure of the mortgages and obtain an accounting. Dunham v. Natural Bridge Ranch Co., 115 M 579, 147 P2d 902 (1944).

Party Contracting With Ostensible Corporation Not to Deny Its Corporate Identity: One who has contracted with an ostensible corporation (in the instant case for the purchase of real property) may not deny its corporate identity when it is attempting by an action in ejectment to oust him after his defaults in making payment. An instrument designating a party as a corporation is prima facie evidence of corporate existence, sufficient under section 15-806, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Norwegian Lutheran Church of Am. v. Armstrong, 112 M 528, 118 P2d 380 (1941).

Estoppel: One who enters into a written contract with a corporation, designated as such therein, and thereunder incurs a financial obligation is estopped, under section 15-806, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), providing against the questioning of corporate existence, from denying the corporate capacity of plaintiff in an action to recover thereon. W. T. Rawleigh Co. v. Miller, 105 M 456, 73 P2d 552 (1937).

Effect of Corporate Abeyance on Liability: When the entity of a corporation has fallen into a condition of abeyance, the public is not supposed to know of the fact; hence, where strangers have dealt with the corporation, it can be held for all obligations assumed by its officers in its name. Hanson Sheep Co. v. Farmers & Traders' St. Bank, 53 M 324, 163 P 1151 (1917).

When and by Whom a Corporation May Be Attacked:

The rule that the legal capacity of a corporation cannot be inquired into collaterally in a controversy between the corporation and a private person does not preclude examination by the courts into the facts of a particular case to determine the identity of a person who uses the name of a corporation for his own purposes and to fix liability upon him for the ostensible corporate acts. Hanson Sheep Co. v. Farmers & Traders' St. Bank, 53 M 324, 163 P 1151 (1917), distinguished in Dunham v. Natural Bridge Ranch Co., 115 M 579, 147 P2d 902 (1944).

When there is no board of directors or secretary of a corporation, the entire capital stock of which is owned by a man and his wife, and when the man is president and has used the corporation to further his own personal ends, he is estopped to claim that he and the corporation are distinct entities, that he bears a fiduciary relation toward it, and that he had no authority to authorize a bank, with which he had deposited money for the corporation, to apply the deposit in discharge of his personal obligation. Hanson Sheep Co. v. Farmers & Traders' St. Bank, 53 M 324, 163 P 1151 (1917), distinguished in Dunham v. Natural Bridge Ranch Co., 115 M 579, 147 P2d 902 (1944).

Defect in Perfecting Organization: A corporation that has been engaged in business, apparently in good faith, cannot avoid liability on the ground that its directors, in the conduct of its private affairs, never observed the forms of law in perfecting the organization and therefore that it had ceased to exist as a corporation. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

The ABA Official Comments to the RMBCA state, in part

Provisions similar to section 1.02 [this section] have their genesis in Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 17 U.S. (4 Wheat) 518 (1819), which held that the United States Constitution prohibited the application of newly enacted statutes to existing corporations while suggesting the efficacy of a reservation of power similar to section 1.02 [this section]. The purpose of section 1.02 [this section] is to avoid any possible argument that a corporation has contractual or vested rights in any specific statutory provision and to ensure that the state may in the future modify its corporation statutes as it deems appropriate and require existing corporations to comply with the statutes as modified.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Corporations Organized Prior to 1895 — Applicable Law: Where a mining corporation, organized under the Compiled Statutes of 1887, never elected to do business under the Code of 1895 or subsequent legislation, the powers of its board were determined by the provisions of section 15-121, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Kleinschmidt v. Am. Min. Co., Ltd., 49 M 7, 139 P 785 (1914).

35-1-119. Liability of and to ostensible corporations.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not based on the RMBCA. Instead, the legislature should retain MCA §35-1-109 [renumbered 35-1-119]. The primary difference is that the RMBCA results in liability only if the actions of persons are knowing, while the MCA provides for liability whether or not the actions are knowing. The Committee recommends retaining the MCA because it is consistent with joint liability under the Uniform Partnership Act (Title 35, Chapter 10) (individuals carrying on business, without being incorporated are, after all, in substance partners) and it adds to certainty. Creditors and others know that there will be personal liability unless certificate of incorporation has been issued.

This section of the law is intended to clarify that the doctrine of de facto corporations has been abolished. According to case law, a corporation will be treated as a de facto corporation, and its owners will be shielded from liability, if the following facts, described in Milwaukee Gold Extraction vs. Vorden, 37 Mont. 209 (1908), appear:

"1. . . . There is a law of the state . . . of the corporation's alleged existence authorizing the organization of such an organization;

2. That a bona fide attempt has been made to affect such organization; and

3. The actual [use] of the corporate powers, or some of them, which might rightfully have been used, had the corporation been regularly organized." Id. at 222.

This section of the law clarifies that notwithstanding the good faith of those purporting to act as a corporation, they have joint and several liability if they do not, in fact, have authority to act as a corporation. According to §2.03 [35-1-220] corporate existence begins only upon filing the articles of incorporation. While the abolition of the de facto corporation doctrine may burden the unwitting promoter who wrongfully assumes that a corporation is in existence, the promoter can easily limit this risk by waiting until the secretary of state returns a copy of the articles to the corporation. Abolishing the de facto corporation doctrine creates a bright line between corporations and nonincorporated businesses allowing far greater certainty for both promoters and those doing business with them.

The proposed section does not necessarily limit the doctrine of corporation by estoppel. This doctrine provides that if (a) a business held itself out as a corporation, and (b) if a third party dealing with it assumed it to be a corporation, both the corporation and the third party are estopped from raising the issue as to whether or not the corporation is validly incorporated. The corporation by estoppel doctrine differs from the de facto corporation doctrine in that the former examines the intent of the parties to a contract and the latter examines only the good faith of the promoters. As such, while the de facto corporation can serve to frustrate the reasonable expectations of third parties, the doctrine of corporation by estoppel does not.

GENERAL COMMENTS

Prior to the 1981 amendments, section 35-1-109 [renumbered as this section] had broad implications. Subsection (1) provided that if a person assumes to act as a corporation before the Certificate of Incorporation or the Certificate of Authority is issued, then that person is liable personally for all debts and liabilities incurred during that period of time. After incorporation or qualification, the corporation may assume responsibility for the debts and liabilities, but the person originally incurring them still remains liable as well. Subsection (1) is verbatim from Model Act section 146 [1977].

Subsection (2), which was deleted [in 1981,] stated that one cannot resist an obligation to "an ostensible corporation" on the ground that there "was in fact no such corporation until that fact has been adjudged in a direct proceeding for the purpose." The provision was troublesome for several reasons. First, the impact of section 35-1-204 [now repealed] was to put to rest the out-moded concept of "de facto" corporations. As indicated in that section, upon issuance of a certificate of incorporation, the corporate existence begins and the certificate is conclusive evidence that all prerequisites have been complied with (except as to actions brought by the State). Thus, the phrase "ostensible corporation" is essentially meaningless under the Model Act. If a certificate of incorporation has been issued and if the State has not revoked the certificate, we are dealing with a true corporation; any entity without a certificate of incorporation is simply unincorporated. While one might have argued that "ostensible corporation" applied to any entity holding itself out as a corporation when in fact it has not received a certificate of incorporation (or whose certificate has been revoked by the state), the implication of former subsection (2) that such a fact is a defense to an obligation (i.e., is grounds to "resist" the obligation) ignores significant aspects of the law of Agency pertaining to unknown and/or undisclosed principals, the equitable doctrine of unjust enrichment, and laws pertaining to unincorporated associations. In short, the fact that the entity is not a corporation should not, in and of itself, be a defense to an otherwise valid obligation. The Model Act contains no provision comparable to former subsection (2).

35-1-216. Articles of incorporation.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-202 [now repealed] and delineates both mandatory (a) and permissive (b) requirements. The RMBCA does not require a statement as to the period of duration. (Cf. §35-1-202(1)(b); 35-1-108(1) [both repealed].) Section 3.02 of the RMBCA [35-1-115], however, states that existence is perpetual unless otherwise provided. Requirements for setting forth classes of shares (if any) and/or preferred or special class in series as found under §35-1-202(e) & (f) [now repealed] are treated in the RMBCA under §§6.01 and 6.02 [35-1-618 and 35-1-619]. Shareholders' preemptive rights as set forth under §35-1-202(g) [now repealed] are found in RMBCA §6.30 [35-1-535]. MCA §35-1-202(1) [now repealed] requires setting forth the number, names and addresses of the initial board members; RMBCA §2.02 [this section] makes this requirement permissive.

Because the articles of incorporation filed under §2.02 [this section] require less information than under previous law, those continuing to use the old form of articles of incorporation will still meet the requirements of the new statute.

The Committee debated two issues with respect to subsection (b)(4) [subsection (2)(d) of this section].

(a) The existing law does not allow a corporation to limit directors' liability if the actions amount to "willful misconduct, recklessness, or knowing violation of law." MCA §35-1-202(2)(a)(v)(B) [now repealed]. The standard under the RMBCA is an "intentional infliction of harm" standard. The Committee was convinced that the "intentional infliction of harm" standard was superior. The ABA Official Comment expressed the sentiments of the Committee:

Because adoption of a liability-limitation provision is left to the decision of the shareholders, they are given considerable latitude in the extent to which they are permitted to limit directors' liability. Accordingly, the exceptions to the statute are few and narrow. As important as validating the shareholders' right to determine for themselves the extent of the directors' liability is stating the limits of this right in terms promoting a clear understanding of the conduct which is and which is not included in the limitation of liability. Terms such as "duty of loyalty," "good faith," "bad faith," and "recklessness" seem no more precise than (and therefore as potentially expansive as) "gross negligence." All of these formulations are characterizations of conduct rather than definitions of it. Characterizations by nature tend to be more elastic than definitions.

Directors should be afforded reasonable predictability; they are entitled to know whether a contemplated course of action will result in personal liability for money damages. Limits on their exculpation from liability are appropriate but should be expressed in terms that minimize the opportunity for after-the-fact second-guessing.

The language of the exceptions to section 2.02(b)(4) [subsection (2)(d) of this section] is intended to express the parameters of the shareholders' right to limit the directors' liability in terms that will promote predictability. First, some types of improper conduct are so clearly without any societal benefit that the law should not appear to endorse such conduct, especially in the case of a state-created entity such as a corporation. Second, any liability limitation will be prospective and, therefore, by definition, the shareholders will not be able to know in advance the exact nature or extent of any claims that they may be giving up. Third, the public has an interest in encouraging good corporate governance. While the exceptions to the shareholders' right to limit liability are few and narrow, they validate important standards of conduct. Finally, in many cases, there will be shareholders who do not vote in favor of the liability limitation. For these shareholders, there should be an irreducible core of protection, especially in view of the fact that in some cases the votes of the directors themselves as shareholders may be sufficient to approve adoption of the provision.

(b) The Committee also considered whether articles should permit similar limitations on the liability of officers. It examined the Code of Virginia §13.1-692.1 and others that permit limitations of liability of officers. The committee rejected including limitations on the liability of officers in the statute because:

- i) Officers are more likely to be employees, receiving a salary and, as such, will agree to serve without indemnification.
- ii) Officers are agents of the corporation, subject to direction that they must follow. Directors are not subject to direction. The duties of officers are clearer than directors' duties.
- iii) Directors should be afforded greater protection because their function is more discretionary.
- iv) Officers, under certain circumstances, are already afforded protection from liability through indemnification provisions.

35-1-217. Filing requirements.Official Comments

Official Comments: MCA Title 35, Chapter 1, contains no comparable section which delineates an all-inclusive list of document filing requirements. Instead those MCA sections requiring filings contain sections setting forth document filing requirements for particular filing. For example, see §§35-1-210, -904, -909, -912, -1009, -1015, -1016, -1018, -1102 [all repealed].

A major change effectuated by §1.20 [this section] is that, as a general rule, any officer may execute a corporate document. The ABA Official Comments describe three advantages to the new filing requirements.

The purposes of the filing requirements of Chapter 1 are: (1) to simplify the filing requirements by the elimination of formal or technical requirements that serve little purpose, (2) to minimize the number of pieces of paper to be processed by the secretary of state, and (3) to eliminate all possible disputes between persons seeking to file documents and the secretary of state as to the legal efficacy of documents.

Sufficiency of Pleading: The allegation that plaintiff was duly incorporated under the laws of the state by the subscribers to the subscription contract in pursuance of the terms thereof was not a sufficient averment that all the conditions of the contract had been fulfilled. Enterprise Sheet Metal Works v. Schendel, 55 M 42, 173 P 1059 (1918).

Failure to Perfect Organization: When a corporation has been regularly brought into existence, it is not deprived of the right to exercise corporate functions by the failure of the directors, designated by the statute, to perfect the organization by taking steps subsequent to the issuance of the certificate by the Secretary of State. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

Application of Section: Before the 1929 amendment, section 15-112, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), requiring that articles of incorporation be filed in county where corporation held real estate, applied to domestic corporations only. Uihlein v. Caplice Commercial Co., 39 M 327, 102 P 564 (1909).

Prerequisite to Legal Formation: The issuance by the Secretary of State of a certificate that a certified copy of the articles of incorporation of a company organized under the provisions of the Civil Code of 1895, containing the required statement of facts, had been filed in his office, was a prerequisite to the legal formation of a domestic corporation. *State ex rel. 35-1-218. Facsimile filing — requirements — liability.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section (2) [subsection (2) of this section] is taken directly from MCA §35-1-102(9) [now repealed] concerning facsimile copies. It should be noted that the addition of this section does not obviate the need to file an original document.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 290 at end of first sentence in (1) deleted "provided that the secretary of state receives the original document within 5 working days of the receipt of the facsimile copy"; deleted (2) through (4) that read: "A facsimile copy may be filed under this section if it:

(a) is produced by a method of transmission of images in which the image is scanned at the transmitter, reconstructed at the receiving station, and duplicated on paper at the receiving station; and

(b) is legible and the same size as the original.

(3) During the 5-day period referred to in subsection (1), the recorded facsimile copy constitutes constructive notice for all purposes of the original document.

(4) If the original document is not received within 5 working days of receipt of the facsimile copy as provided in subsection (1), the filing of the facsimile copy is void"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 18, 1997.

35-1-219. Effective time and date of document.Official Comments

Official Comments: The existing law does not have a general statute providing for the effective date of documents. Case NotesDECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Action by State: Section 15-808, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), providing for inquiry into corporate business or incorporation, limited its effect to an action by the State at the suit of the Attorney General. First Nat'l Bank in Billings v. First Bank Stock Corp., 306 F2d 937 (9th Cir. 1962), affirming 197 F. Supp. 417 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Right to Challenge Corporate Existence: When the records of the Secretary of State show that a company has been regularly incorporated and is carrying on business as a corporation, it must be considered at least a corporation de facto. The state alone, by a direct proceeding for that purpose, can challenge its existence or its right to do business in the state. Sun River Stock & Land Co. v. Mont. Trust & Sav. Bank, 81 M 222, 262 P 1039 (1928), distinguished in Springer v. Opsahl, 229 M 10, 744 P2d 884, 44 St. Rep. 1738 (1987).

Foreign Corporation: Admission in evidence of a certified copy of the articles of incorporation of a foreign company, though properly certified, was nevertheless erroneous in the absence of a certified copy of the laws of the state of its incorporation showing the mode of incorporation and the proper custodian of the original, when such company had never complied with the laws of nor was doing business in this state. Harvey E. Mack Co. v. Ryan, 80 M 524, 261 P 283 (1927).

Presumption: Section 15-117, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), presumed a corporation with capital subscribed under the condition precedent implied by the general rule or in accordance with an agreement had by the subscribers either at the time they made their subscriptions or thereafter. Enterprise Sheet Metal Works v. Schendel, 55 M 42, 173 P 1059 (1918).

When and by Whom a Corporation May Be Attacked:

After a corporation has been lawfully organized, its character as such cannot be inquired into collaterally at the instance of a private citizen in a controversy between him and it, and its legal capacity can be brought in question by the State only through its proper officer, as prescribed in section 15-808, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and for one of the causes enumerated in 27-28-102. Barnes v. Smith, 48 M 309, 137 P 541 (1913).

Failure to comply with statutory provisions relative to the formation of corporations does not ipso facto work a dissolution or permit the question of corporate capacity to be raised collaterally by a private citizen in a controversy between him and the corporation. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

It was the purpose of the Legislature to prohibit inquiry in any private civil action into the question whether the ostensible corporation has a legal existence, further than to ascertain whether the requirements prescribed by the section of the code relative to the formation of corporations have been observed. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

Corporations Organized Prior to 1895:

Section 15-117, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), relating to evidence of corporate existence or capacity, cannot refer to a corporation organized prior to July 1, 1895, for in terms it applies only to institutions of the kind to which certificates of incorporation have been issued, or what is the same thing organized since the adoption of the codes. Billings Realty Co. v. Big Ditch Co., 43 M 251, 115 P 828 (1911).

Since the year 1895, there has been no provision for the issuance of a certificate to a corporation formed prior thereto, but proof of the existence of such a corporation could be made under prior laws. Sections 15-117 and 15-118, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), cannot be held to declare the only rule of evidence in a case involving proof of corporate existence but apply only to corporations organized since the adoption of the codes. Billings Realty Co. v. Big Ditch Co., 43 M 251, 115 P 828 (1911).

35-1-221. Correcting filed document.

Official Comments

Official Comments: There is no comparable MCA section. The current code requires the filing of an amendment, if a correction is necessary. The ABA's Official Comments describe the advantages of this section in this way:

Section 1.24 [this section] permits making corrections in filed documents without refileing the entire document or submitting formal articles of amendment. This correction procedure has two advantages: (1) filing articles of correction may be less expensive than refileing the document or filing articles of incorporation, and (2) articles of correction do not alter the effective date of the underlying document being corrected. Indeed, under section 1.24(c) [subsection (3) of this section], even the correction relates back to the original effective date of the document except as to persons relying on the original document and adversely affected by the correction. As to these persons, the effective date of articles of correction is the date the articles are filed.

The comments to the existing law also state an intent to eliminate the vested rights doctrine, but the language was not as clear as in the new law. Case NotesDECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Malicious Inducement of Breach of Contract — Individual Liability of Corporate Agents, Employees, Officers, or Directors: In a case of first impression in Montana, the issue was whether agents, employees, officers, or directors of a corporation may be held liable individually for the tort of malicious inducement of a breach of an employment contract. The resolution of the appeal depended upon a weighing of public policy considerations. The court held that the corporate veil should not be utilized as a protective device by those who employ corporate power or authority to serve their own ends. Tort liability for the inducement of breach of contract should be imposed when a corporate agent, employee, officer, or director induces a breach of contract for private benefit or because of personal feeling and purposes relative to a third party. The privilege of limited liability should be applicable in those situations where actions are motivated and taken in the furtherance of corporate purposes, policies, and interests. When plaintiff/appellant failed to show that the actions of individual defendants were not taken in furtherance of corporate purposes and interests, the summary judgment granted to the defendants was affirmed. *Phillips v. 35-1-237. Emergency bylaws.

Official Comments

Official Comments: There is no similar provision in the existing law. The ABA Official Comment best states the reason for this provision of the law:

Section 2.07 [this section] is no longer an optional provision (as was the case with its predecessor in earlier versions of the Model Act) but is unqualifiedly recommended for adoption. The problem it addresses is potentially present in every state and in every corporation, and the widespread acceptance of the earlier provision to date by a number of states argues that it be uniformly adopted.

The adoption of emergency bylaws in advance of an emergency not only clarifies lines of command and responsibility but also tends to ensure continuity of responsibility. The board of directors may be authorized by the emergency bylaws, for example, to designate the offices or other persons, in order of seniority and subject to various conditions, who may be deemed to be directors during the emergency.

35-1-308. Corporate name.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This sections [section] corresponds to MCA §35-1-301 [now repealed]. The proposal abolishes the standard of "deceptively similar" when testing corporate names and adopts in its place "distinguishable." The Committee's representative from the secretary of state's office reports the existing standard is difficult and time consuming to apply. The ABA Official Comments explain:

The revision of the Model Act is based on the fundamental premise that its name provisions should only ensure that each corporation has a sufficiently distinctive name so that it may be distinguished from other corporations upon the records of the secretary of state. The general business corporation statute should not be a partial substitute for a general assumed name, unfair competition, or antifraud statute. As a result, the Model Act does not restrict the power of a corporation to adopt or use an assumed or fictitious name with the same freedom as an individual or impose a requirement that an "official" name not be "deceptively similar" to another corporate name (a requirement of earlier versions of the Model Act). Principles of unfair competition, not the business corporation act, provide the limits on the competitive use of similar names.

The ABA Official Comments give the following guidance for determining whether a name is distinguishable:

Thus, confusion in an absolute or linguistic sense is the appropriate test under the Model Act, not the competitive relationship between the corporations, which is the test for fraud or unfair competition. The precise scope of "distinguishable upon the records of the secretary of state" is an appropriate subject of regulation by the office of secretary of state in order to ensure uniformity of administration. Corporate names that differ only in the words used to indicate corporateness are generally not distinguishable. Thus, if ABC Corporation is in existence, the names "ABC Inc.," "ABC Co.," or "ABC Corp." should not be viewed as distinguishable. Similarly, minor variations between names that are unlikely to be noticed, such as the substitution of a "s" for a "z" or the substitution of an arabic numeral for a word, such as "2" for "Two", or the substitution of a lower case letter for a capital, such as "d" for "D," generally should not be viewed as being distinguishable.

It should be noted that the mere fact that a corporate name is permitted by the Montana Business Corporation Act does not necessarily mean that it may be used in derogation of existing rights of other parties (e.g., a tradename or trademark owner). The Committee agrees with George Gottlieb who states:

"The fact of incorporation under a given name is not the equivalent of the right to use that name. . . . A trademark owner with superior rights may assert them even before and certainly after the new company begins to conduct business, and a 'conflicting' use by the new company of its corporate name may constitute trademark infringement and unfair competition." Gottlieb, "Corporate Name 'Clearance' - Potential Trademark Trouble Spot," 33 Bus. Law. 2263 (1978).

Subsection (b)(5) [subsection (2)(e) of this section] is not a part of the RMBCA, but was added to make it clear that a corporate name of a dissolved corporation is not available during the period in which dissolution may be revoked.

35-1-316. Service of process on corporation.Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not derived from the RMBCA, but supplements existing law. The rules for service of process should best be dealt with in the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure. The Montana Rules of Civil Procedure, 41(D)(2)(e)(iv) provide that service shall be made on a dissolved corporation by serving "any one of the persons who have become trustees for the corporation and its stockholders or members." Unfortunately, the existing law does not designate who the trustees are. The above scheme allows the corporation to do so in the case of voluntary dissolution. In addition, it provides that if a receiver is appointed, the receiver will be trustee. Finally, in the event there is no designation or receiver, the proposed language borrows from the Nevada Revised Statutes §78.750, that allow service on former officers or directors.

Official Comments: This section is new to Montana law and is derived from the RMBCA §5.04 [35-1-316]. If the law provides that a demand or notice must be given to a corporation (e.g., a bulk sales notice, a derivative suit), it is unclear how that demand is made. This proposal adds certainty to the law.

Part 4Directors and Officers*Part Case Notes*DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Use of Corporation by Individual as Subterfuge — Piercing Corporate Veil to Hold Individual Liable for Breach of Lease: Defendant formed a corporation to render dental services and leased a building for a dental practice with two other dentists, including plaintiff. After the practice became successful, defendant demanded possession of the entire property by letter. When plaintiff did not respond, defendant vacated the building on behalf of the corporation and discontinued paying rent, but the decision was never documented in the corporation's records. Plaintiff sued for breach of the lease contract. Following trial, the District Court concluded that defendant was the alter ego of the corporation and the real party in interest under the lease and that it would be inequitable to allow defendant to use the corporation as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience or justify wrong. Thus, the corporate veil was pierced, and defendant was held personally responsible for damages arising from the breached lease. On appeal, the Supreme Court applied the test in Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180 (1994), to determine whether circumstances were appropriate for piercing the corporate veil. The court noted that the veil may not be pierced simply because an individual is the alter ego of a corporation and the true party in interest. There must be substantial evidence that the corporate entity was used as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or commit fraud, but bad faith alone may be a sufficient cause for piercing the veil. Here, the corporation was unable to satisfy the judgment because it was undercapitalized from its inception, suggesting defendant acted in bad faith. Further, it was inequitable for defendant to personally profit from renting property to the corporation and protect himself from liability with the undercapitalized corporation. The judgment was affirmed. Peschel Family Trust v. Colonna, 2003 MT 216, 317 M 127, 75 P3d 793 (2003).

Previously Raised but Unlitigated Alter Ego Claim Not Barred by Res Judicata: Following a dispute over the sale of irrigation equipment, H-D Irrigating and Lane sued Kimble Properties and Kimble for false representation of the irrigation equipment and damages. Kimble Properties and Kimble counterclaimed for the balance due on the equipment, alleging that H-D Irrigating was a sham and the alter ego of Lane. The alter ego claim was never pursued. The Supreme Court eventually decided the case in H-D Irrigating, Inc. v. Kimble Properties, Inc., 2000 MT 212, 301 M 34, 8 P3d 95 (2000), and remanded for judgment in favor of Kimble. In an effort to collect, Kimble sought to compel Lane to testify regarding the assets of H-D Irrigating, but rather than appear, Lane filed bankruptcy and received a stay on further proceedings. Kimble then filed an action to collect from Lane personally, again raising the alter ego issue. Lane asserted that the issue had been already decided in the prior litigation and sought supervisory control on res judicata grounds. After accepting supervisory control, the Supreme Court decided that res judicata did not bar Kimble's litigation of the alter ego claim. The action to pierce the H-D Irrigating corporate veil was neither previously adjudicated in District Court nor were the facts upon which the claim was based known to Kimble at the time that the counterclaim was filed or at any other time during the course of the previous action. The case was thus remanded for further proceedings on the alter ego claim. Lane v. District Court, 2003 MT 130, 316 M 55, 68 P3d 819 (2003), applying Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180 (1994).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Corporate Officer Without Authority for Pro Se Representation of Corporation — Refusal to Consider Brief: Plaintiff realty corporation brought an action in District Court to find defendants in default for failure to make payments under a contract for deed. Plaintiff was represented by counsel in District Court, but on appeal, it was represented by the president of the corporation. The Supreme Court, sua sponte, raised the issue of whether the corporation could be represented by its president and held that it could not. Citing Weaver v. Law Firm of Graybill, 246 M 175, 803 P2d 1089 (1990), the Supreme Court held that a corporation is a separate legal entity and cannot appear on its own behalf through an agent other than an attorney. The Supreme Court therefore determined not to consider the brief filed by the president on behalf of the corporation. Cont. Realty, Inc. v. Gerry, 251 M 150, 822 P2d 1083, 48 St. Rep. 1134 (1991).

Dual Prongs for Piercing Corporate Veil — Evidence of Fraud Sufficient: There are two prongs to piercing the corporate veil. First, the person purporting to represent the corporation must be found to be the corporate "alter ego". Second, there must be a showing that the corporate entity was used as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or perpetrate either actual or constructive fraud. Drilcon, Inc. v. Roil Energy Corp., Inc., 230 M 166, 749 P2d 1058, 45 St. Rep. 114 (1988), followed in Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180, 51 St. Rep. 569 (1994).

Piercing Corporate Veil Doctrine — Refusal to Apply: The doctrine of piercing the corporate veil to avoid fraud or injustice was not applied in a suit for damages arising from defects in a modular home manufactured and installed by defendant where there was no evidence that the corporation was defectively formed or formed to avoid personal liability on the part of the officers. Little v. Grizzly Mfg., 195 M 419, 636 P2d 839, 38 St. Rep. 1994 (1981).

Public Policy Against Personal Liability of Agent: As a matter of public policy, the officers and agents of a corporation must be shielded from personal liability for acts they take on behalf of the corporation in furtherance of corporate goals, policies, and business interests. Little v. Grizzly Mfg., 195 M 419, 636 P2d 839, 38 St. Rep. 1994 (1981).

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Lawsuit by Shareholder Causing Damages Considered Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Care: Sletteland brought a suit against two other corporate shareholders for charging excessive attorney fees and seeking their removal as corporate directors. The District Court held that the fees were excessive, but found no grounds for removal. The other shareholders filed a counterclaim against Sletteland, alleging that he breached his fiduciary duty in bringing the lawsuit because the timing of the suit caused refinancing of a project to fail, resulting in damage to the corporation and to other shareholders. The District Court agreed, and both parties appealed their respective issues. The Supreme Court reversed on the issue of excessive fees, but affirmed on the issue of breach of fiduciary duty. The fiduciary duty between shareholders of a close corporation is one of utmost good faith and loyalty. Sletteland admittedly knew of the refinancing and, as an attorney and investment banker, also knew the effect that a lawsuit alleging misconduct by board members would have on a refinancing effort. In fact, it appeared that the suit was brought to specifically derail the refinancing. Sletteland was the person who determined the timing of the suit, which was filed immediately before the individuals involved in the refinancing were to meet for discussions, and when asked to withdraw the suit so refinancing could conclude, he refused to do so. Sletteland did not use the care that an ordinarily prudent person would use in a similar situation, resulting in the breach of fiduciary duty. The Supreme Court also affirmed the award of damages. Although future damages could not be calculated exactly in this case, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in basing its calculations on expert testimony of a well-known regional economist. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Stock Issue Sales — Duty to Minority Stockholders — Business Judgment Rule: When director and majority stockholder at time of suit became such during the life of the corporation by subscribing to stock issues when other stockholders did not, there was no breach of fiduciary duty by him to minority stockholders because his subscriptions saved the corporation; they were available to all stockholders with a detailed prospectus setting forth pertinent matter; and although the issues may not have been a perfect solution to corporate problems, they were acceptable under the "business judgment rule". Ski Roundtop, Inc. v. Hall, 202 M 260, 658 P2d 1071, 40 St. Rep. 74 (1983), followed in Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Liability on Contracts: Notwithstanding the provision of 35-1-401 (now repealed) that the business and corporate affairs shall be managed by a board of directors, a close corporation in which the bulk of the stock was owned by the president, and the rest by his wife and son who also served as vice-president and secretary respectively, could not avoid liability to perform an option agreement on the ground that the president and secretary had no authority to bind the corporation on such agreements without the ratification of the board of directors, which had not occurred, because (1) the officers had express or implied power to make such an agreement, (2) even if they did not, the officers were estopped to deny the option by their course of conduct, and (3) as owners of the corporation they were not entitled to rely on the corporate form to shield them from their obligations. Hauptman v. Edwards, Inc., 170 M 310, 553 P2d 975 (1976).

Implied Authority of Corporate President — Doctrine of Estoppel to Enforce Lease Option: When two of the corporation's three directors, one of whom was the corporate president and controlling shareholder, signed an option to lease land agreement, the corporation could not assert lack of corporate authority as a defense to the lease option obligation because of the implied authority of a corporate president to act on behalf of the corporation. The doctrine of estoppel was applicable. Hauptman v. Edwards, Inc., 170 M 310, 553 P2d 975 (1976).

Discretion of Directors: When the board of directors in good faith considered it not in the best interests of the corporation not to prosecute an action on behalf of the corporation against another, a dissenting director and stockholder could not force the board to prosecute the action by means of an action against the board and the third party. Brooks v. Brooks Pontiac, Inc., 143 M 256, 389 P2d 185 (1963).

When Corporate Entity in Abeyance: When the capital stock passes into the hands of a single person, the entity of the corporation, except so far as it is necessary to protect the rights of strangers who deal with it through its ostensible officers and agents, is entirely in abeyance and its functions for the time being cease. Commercial Credit Co. v. O'Brien, 115 M 199, 146 P2d 637 (1943), appeal dismissed in 323 US 665 (1944); Scott v. Prescott, 69 M 540, 223 P 490 (1924), (citing numerous authorities).

Power to Sell Assets:

In the absence of statute expressly so providing, the directors of a solvent corporation have no authority to dispose of accumulated property except in furtherance and in the ordinary course of its business; corporations have no power to make gifts ultra vires. Hanrahan v. Andersen, 108 M 218, 90 P2d 494 (1939).

Under the common-law powers reserved to corporations by the proviso in section 15-901, et seq., R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and enumerated in a general way in sections 15-401 and 15-801, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the board of directors of a going corporation could, in the proper pursuit of its business and within the purposes of its creation, but against the dissent of a minority of its stockholders, sell a leasehold interest in realty with improvements thereon, and when such sale was made before plaintiffs had judgment against the selling corporation, they acquired no title under execution sale and nonsuit was properly granted in their action in ejectment against the purchaser. Wortman v. Luna Park Amusement Co., 61 M 89, 201 P 570 (1921), explained in N. Min. Corp. v. Trunz, 124 F2d 14 (9th Cir. 1941).

Directors Governing Body: The board of directors of a corporation and not its stockholders conducts and controls its business and property, so long as it acts in the manner prescribed by law. Pioneer Minerals Corp. v. Larabie Bros. Bankers, Inc., 99 M 358, 43 P2d 884 (1935).

Qualification of Director:

The provision of section 15-401, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), which required that "directors of corporations for profit must be holders of stock therein in an amount to be fixed by the bylaws of the corporation" unquestionably contemplated that the directors should be bona fide holders of the qualifying stock. Sun River Stock & Land Co. v. Mont. Trust & Sav. Bank, 81 M 222, 262 P 1039 (1928); Scott v. Prescott, 69 M 540, 223 P 490 (1924); Barnes v. Smith, 48 M 309, 137 P 541 (1913).

To render one eligible to the office of a director of a private corporation, his name, under section 15-401, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), was required to appear on its books as one of its stockholders and, under section 15-504, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), if his name did not so appear thereon 10 days prior to an election of directors, he could not vote at such election. Gillies v. Robert E. Lee Min. Co., 78 M 402, 254 P 422 (1927).

In requiring the directors of a corporation having capital stock to be stockholders, the Legislature intended that the directors should be bona fide owners of stock. The result of the requirement is that when the capital stock passes into the hands of a single person, the entity of the corporation, except so far as it is necessary to protect the rights of strangers who deal with it through its ostensible officers and agents, is entirely in abeyance, and its functions for the time being cease. Barnes v. Smith, 48 M 309, 137 P 541 (1913).

Upon the assumption that the sale of his stock in a corporation ipso facto vacated the office of the seller as a director, such result did not follow when at the time of a special meeting of the board negotiations for the sale, though pending, were not completed. O'Rourke v. Grand Opera House Co., 47 M 459, 133 P 965 (1913).

Admission of One Director Not Binding: The directors of a corporation act for it only as a body, and therefore admissions or declarations of an individual director are not binding upon it unless authority to make them was duly conferred. Raish v. Orchard Canal Co., 67 M 140, 218 P 655 (1923).

Liability on Contracts: A corporation cannot be held liable for preliminary contracts made by its promoters authorized by a majority of its incorporators or stockholders but is only bound on such contracts as are made by its board of directors acting within the scope of their powers or by ministerial officers empowered to make them. Kirkup v. Anaconda Amusement Co., 59 M 469, 197 P 1005 (1921).

Duty of Directors Generally: While it is entirely competent for the directors to manage and conduct the business of the corporation through duly authorized agents, the directors themselves are the agents ultimately responsible. They therefore cannot abdicate their duties or permit others to act in their stead for the corporation or the stockholders. Deschamps v. Loiselle, 50 M 565, 148 P 335 (1915).

Ratification of Directors, When Presumed: The action of the stockholders of a corporation at a meeting at which every outstanding share of stock was duly represented and voted in favor of the issuance of a certain number of shares to the promoters of the company in payment for their services, a majority of the directors being present and assenting, will be considered to have been ratified by the board of directors. *Fitzpatrick v. Case Notes

Dissolved Corporation's Officer's Use of Corporate Funds for Personal Expenses: Although the Montana Business Corporation Act does not specifically limit a director's use of corporate property to corporate purposes, the limitation is implied by the duties of good faith and care fundamental to a director's relationship to the corporation. Absent shareholders consent, defendant, who was president, director, and majority shareholder of a corporation, was not authorized to use its money for noncorporate purposes, and after it was dissolved, he was required to hold its assets in trust until creditor and shareholder debts were satisfied. Therefore, he was not authorized to write checks on the corporation's account to pay his personal debts to his attorney and former wife. He produced no evidence to support his claim that his need to pay child support to his wife and that his arrest for failure to do so would negatively affect the company's future and therefore justified the checks to her. Furthermore, it was not in the best interests of winding up the dissolved corporation. Moreover, it was not a defense that because of his ownership interest in the company he was spending his own money. The shareholders have a vested equitable interest in a dissolved corporation's property, but do not have a legal ownership interest in the property until the creditors are paid and the winding up is complete, at which point the shareholders have a legal ownership interest deriving from their right to a pro rata share of the assets remaining after the creditors are paid. Because the corporation was insolvent when the checks were written, there would have been no assets left for the shareholders had the creditors been paid off at the time that the checks were written. Therefore, it could not be said that defendant stole their money, and the theft conviction was set aside. St. v. Debus, 2002 MT 307, 313 M 57, 59 P3d 1154 (2002).

Breach of Fiduciary Duty in Conversion of Corporate Property Without Requisite Notice and Shareholder Approval — Punitive Damages Unavailable Absent Showing of Actual Malice or Fraud: Phil was two-thirds majority shareholder in Trifad Entertainment, Inc. (Trifad), and Brad was one-third minority shareholder and Trifad director. Following Phil's extradition to Florida on racketeering charges, Brad secured a loan for $15,000, deposited the money in the Trifad account, and then sold virtually all of Trifad's assets to himself for $15,000. In addition, Brad wrote checks on Trifad's account for taxes owed and for estimated tax payments and withdrew one-third of the remaining balance and left two-thirds in the account, all without attempting to contact Phil. Phil later sued Brad for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and conversion and requested punitive damages, contending that Brad's actions were performed with actual malice and constituted actual fraud. At trial, Brad contended that the actions were reasonable considering Phil was in jail facing criminal charges, and Brad cross-claimed for indemnification from Trifad for litigation expenses and liabilities incurred in his capacity as Trifad director. The District Court found for Brad on all counts, but denied corporate indemnification. Both Phil and Brad appealed. The Supreme Court reversed, finding that Brad failed to comply with 35-1-823 by selling corporate property without the requisite notice and shareholder approval. Although contacting Phil would have been difficult, it was not impossible. However, even if Phil had been unavailable for consultation, 35-1-823 does not contain any exceptions to the notice and approval requirements governing the sale of corporate assets. Further, the sale constituted conversion because Brad exercised unauthorized dominion over Trifad property by transferring ownership to himself. The case was remanded for a determination of damages, including possible damages other than those provided in 27-1-320 if peculiar circumstances warranted compensation for future lost income and profits. The District Court erred in concluding that Brad did not breach his fiduciary duties to Trifad; however, absent proof of actual malice or actual fraud, punitive damages were not warranted. Because a breach of fiduciary duty occurred, Brad could not claim to be wholly successful in the action, so Brad's claim for corporate indemnification also failed under 35-1-453. Trifad Entertainment, Inc. v. Anderson, 2001 MT 227, 306 M 499, 36 P3d 363 (2001).

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-402 [now repealed]. Note 30% leeway to alter the number of directors granted to the board of directors under §8.03(b) [subsection (2) of this section] under certain circumstances. The intent of this language, according to the official comments, is to limit the power of the board in this regard because the determination of the size of the board should be left to the shareholders. The comments provide that subsections b & c [subsections (2) and (3) of this section] have "no application to corporation in which the size of the board is fixed by the bylaws and the shareholders reserve to themselves the power to amend bylaws."

35-1-425. Removal of directors by judicial proceeding.Official Comments

Official Comments: There is no comparable MCA section. This section provides for removal of dishonest directors in those instances in which the majority of the shareholders might still wish to retain that director. Shareholders with less than 10% holdings may still bring an action against a director in a derivative suit under this provision (See "Official Comments") and in compliance with the provisions of this Act.

The courts probably have the inherent power to remove a director without statutory authority. See Maddox v. Norman, 669 P.2d 330 (Mont. 1983) and Baker v. Commercial Body Builders, Inc., 264 Or. 614, 507 P.2d 387, 395-96 (1973). See also Bahls, "Resolving Shareholder Dissension: Selection of the Appropriate Equitable Remedy," 15 J. Corp. Law 285 (1990). This remedy is already available with respect to statutory close corporations. See MCA §35-9-502.

In the past, when directors engaged in fraudulent or dishonest conduct, aside from a derivative suit for damages, the only statutory remedy was dissolution of the corporation. See MCA §35-1-921 [now repealed]. In addition, the courts have also fashioned the remedy of a compelled share purchase (usually of the complaining shareholder). See Maddox, supra. Both remedies are draconian remedies, often unfairly impacting on value. If removal of the director is appropriate and will not unduly impinge on value, removal of the director may be the most efficient solution.

Examples of when removal of a director in this way might be appropriate are described in the ABA's Official Comments:

Section 8.09 [this section] authorizes the removal of a director who is found in a judicial proceeding to have engaged in fraudulent or dishonest conduct or gross abuse of office. For example, a judicial proceeding (as contrasted with removal under section 8.08 [35-1-424]) may be necessary or appropriate in the following situations:

(1) In a closely held corporation, the director charged with misconduct is elected by voting group or cumulative voting, and the shareholders with power to prevent his removal exercise that power despite the existence of fraudulent or dishonest conduct. The classic example is where the director charged with misconduct himself possesses sufficient votes to prevent his own removal and exercises his voting power to that end.

(2) In a publicly held corporation, the director charged with misconduct declines to resign, though urged to do so, and because of the large number of widely scattered shareholders, a special shareholders' meeting can be held only after a period of delay and at considerable expense.

It is emphasized that this legislation does not allow removal of a director for mere oppression or violating the reasonable expectations of the shareholders or other directors. Instead, removal is only permitted if the director engages in "fraudulent or dishonest conduct, or gross abuse of authority or discretion."

Case Notes

Error in Modification of Rate for Legal Work: The partnership agreement of a limited partnership included a limitation on the general partners' ability to incur legal expenses, but provided that two of the partners could be employed to perform legal services for the partnership, and limited compensation to reasonable hourly rates in an amount not to exceed a total of $60,000 a year without approval. A dispute between partners resulted in a claim that the attorneys had charged excessive rates of $225 an hour and thus should be removed as directors. The District Court found that the attorneys overcharged and required repayment based on a reduced hourly rate. The Supreme Court disagreed and reversed. The contract language clearly allowed for employment of the attorneys, and the partnership was aware in advance of the attorneys' hourly rate. The fees were reasonable given the complexity of the specialized work and the fact that other attorneys in that field charged even higher rates. The District Court erred in modifying the rate for legal work. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

Liability of Officers and Directors: Under the statute at the time of the case providing for liability of directors for failure to file the required annual report, the directors were liable to creditors only for debts contracted during period corporation was in default in filing annual report but if the report when filed was false, officers and not directors were liable to creditors for damages resulting therefrom; a false report was not the same as no report, nor should the court refrain from enforcing annual report requirements because the statute did not require sufficient facts to apprise public of the corporation's financial condition. Mtn. St. Supply v. Mtn. St. Feed & Livestock Co., 149 M 198, 425 P2d 75 (1967).

False Certificate: The bylaws of a corporation provided that a special meeting of the board of directors could be called by the president or at his request by the secretary. The secretary and the third member of the board were without authority to call such a meeting. A surety company which relied upon the secretary's certificate that he had been empowered at the meeting to enter into a contract of indemnity in behalf of the corporation did so at its peril. *Aetna Cas. & Sur. False Report: The trustees of a corporation, who filed a report which did not specify as a debt of the company its liability on a covenant of title, are not liable for a false report if at the time the report was filed the breach of the covenant was not known to them, and such a report is not false in stating that the capital was paid in full because of the mere fact that the property for which it was issued has decreased in value. *Giddings v. When Consent Judgment Against Corporation a Nullity: When the president of a corporation disregarded stockholders, directors, officers, bylaws, and the statutes in the conduct of corporate affairs, the contention that under a resolution adopted at a directors' meeting (held without a quorum) he had a right to compromise actions against the corporation and that therefore a judgment entered against it with his consent constituted a consent judgment by the corporation, the rights of which were not considered in entering it, was without merit since the corporation could not have consented to it under such circumstances. *Hanrahan v. Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-407 [now repealed]. The RMBCA allows committees unless prohibited by the articles or bylaws while the MBCA allows committees only if authorized by the articles or bylaws. The RMBCA also clarifies the various rules governing committee meetings. Unlike the current law, the RMBCA allows committees to appoint corporate officers. These changes are appropriate in light of the more widespread use of committees and the increasing trust board places on committees. Further, this section establishes a minimum committee membership of two (8.25(a) [subsection (1) of this section]), unlike existing law which sets no minimum.

A surety company which relied upon the secretary's certificate that he had been empowered at the meeting to enter into a contract of indemnity in behalf of the corporation did so at its peril. *Aetna Cas. & Sur. 35-1-443. Standards of conduct for officers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: There is no directly comparable MCA section. This section essentially requires of non-director officers the same standards of conduct required of directors under §8.30 RMBCA [35-1-418] and MCA §35-1-401(2) - (3) [now repealed]. In Montana, by court decision, officers are already subjected to the same standards of liability as directors. Ski Roundup v. Hall, 658 P.2d 1071 (1983). Codifying the general rule established by case law that officers have duties similar to directors adds certainty to the law.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Use of Corporation by Individual as Subterfuge — Piercing Corporate Veil to Hold Individual Liable for Breach of Lease: Defendant formed a corporation to render dental services and leased a building for a dental practice with two other dentists, including plaintiff. After the practice became successful, defendant demanded possession of the entire property by letter. When plaintiff did not respond, defendant vacated the building on behalf of the corporation and discontinued paying rent, but the decision was never documented in the corporation's records. Plaintiff sued for breach of the lease contract. Following trial, the District Court concluded that defendant was the alter ego of the corporation and the real party in interest under the lease and that it would be inequitable to allow defendant to use the corporation as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience or justify wrong. Thus, the corporate veil was pierced, and defendant was held personally responsible for damages arising from the breached lease. On appeal, the Supreme Court applied the test in Berlin v. Boedecker, 268 M 444, 887 P2d 1180 (1994), to determine whether circumstances were appropriate for piercing the corporate veil. The court noted that the veil may not be pierced simply because an individual is the alter ego of a corporation and the true party in interest. There must be substantial evidence that the corporate entity was used as a subterfuge to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or commit fraud, but bad faith alone may be a sufficient cause for piercing the veil. Here, the corporation was unable to satisfy the judgment because it was undercapitalized from its inception, suggesting defendant acted in bad faith. Further, it was inequitable for defendant to personally profit from renting property to the corporation and protect himself from liability with the undercapitalized corporation. The judgment was affirmed. Peschel Family Trust v. Colonna, 2003 MT 216, 317 M 127, 75 P3d 793 (2003).

Breach of Fiduciary Duty in Conversion of Corporate Property Without Requisite Notice and Shareholder Approval — Punitive Damages Unavailable Absent Showing of Actual Malice or Fraud: Phil was two-thirds majority shareholder in Trifad Entertainment, Inc. (Trifad), and Brad was one-third minority shareholder and Trifad director. Following Phil's extradition to Florida on racketeering charges, Brad secured a loan for $15,000, deposited the money in the Trifad account, and then sold virtually all of Trifad's assets to himself for $15,000. In addition, Brad wrote checks on Trifad's account for taxes owed and for estimated tax payments and withdrew one-third of the remaining balance and left two-thirds in the account, all without attempting to contact Phil. Phil later sued Brad for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and conversion and requested punitive damages, contending that Brad's actions were performed with actual malice and constituted actual fraud. At trial, Brad contended that the actions were reasonable considering Phil was in jail facing criminal charges, and Brad cross-claimed for indemnification from Trifad for litigation expenses and liabilities incurred in his capacity as Trifad director. The District Court found for Brad on all counts, but denied corporate indemnification. Both Phil and Brad appealed. The Supreme Court reversed, finding that Brad failed to comply with 35-1-823 by selling corporate property without the requisite notice and shareholder approval. Although contacting Phil would have been difficult, it was not impossible. However, even if Phil had been unavailable for consultation, 35-1-823 does not contain any exceptions to the notice and approval requirements governing the sale of corporate assets. Further, the sale constituted conversion because Brad exercised unauthorized dominion over Trifad property by transferring ownership to himself. The case was remanded for a determination of damages, including possible damages other than those provided in 27-1-320 if peculiar circumstances warranted compensation for future lost income and profits. The District Court erred in concluding that Brad did not breach his fiduciary duties to Trifad; however, absent proof of actual malice or actual fraud, punitive damages were not warranted. Because a breach of fiduciary duty occurred, Brad could not claim to be wholly successful in the action, so Brad's claim for corporate indemnification also failed under 35-1-453. Trifad Entertainment, Inc. v. Anderson, 2001 MT 227, 306 M 499, 36 P3d 363 (2001).

Misvaluation of Corporate Stock Not Constituting Breach of Fiduciary Duty: Following termination from employment with Bitterroot International Systems, Inc. (Bitterroot), Knutson sought to exercise his buyout rights under the shareholders' agreement. Bitterroot refused to pay and sought rescission on grounds that Knutson breached his fiduciary duty to Bitterroot, arguing that Knutson's mistaken valuation of stock acquired during the purchase of another business constituted a breach of that duty. Bitterroot did not contend that Knutson acted in bad faith, but only that he was wrong about the stock value. Applying the standard in this section, the Supreme Court found that Knutson's inaccurate stock valuation did not constitute a breach of fiduciary duty and that the District Court did not err in dismissing Bitterroot's claim that Knutson breached his fiduciary obligation. Knutson v. Bitterroot Int'l Sys., Inc., 2000 MT 203, 300 M 511, 5 P3d 554, 57 St. Rep. 800 (2000). See also 18A Am. Jur. 2d Corporations §451 and 18B Am. Jur. 2d Corporations §1705.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Pro Se Practice of Law by Corporate Shareholders and Directors Prohibited: Although shareholders and directors of a corporation have the right under 35-1-930 (now repealed) to take action on behalf of the corporation, that does not entitle those persons to practice law on behalf of the corporation. A corporation is a separate legal entity and cannot appear through an agent other than an attorney. Representation by a stockholder or director who is not an attorney constitutes contempt of court punishable under 37-61-210. Weaver v. Law Firm of Graybill, Ostrem, Warner & Crotty, 246 M 175, 803 P2d 1089, 47 St. Rep. 2316 (1990).

Loans by Officers Contrary to Resolution — Estoppel to Deny Loan: Even though a corporate resolution stated that the president, vice president, and secretary or any two of them were empowered to act in the name of the corporation, a note and security agreement signed only by two vice presidents was enforceable because if a corporation receives and retains the fruit of a loan, impliedly ratifying it, the corporation is estopped to deny the authority of the vice presidents to borrow the money. Farmers St. Bank v. Johnson, 188 M 55, 610 P2d 1172 (1980).

Property Listed as Corporate Property — Estoppel From Asserting Personal Ownership: A corporate officer was estopped from defending against a conversion action by a bank involving the sale and retention of proceeds by him of property that he claimed he personally owned but that was listed, with his knowledge and acquiescence, as company property in company financial statements and as company assets to secure a company loan. The Supreme Court, in applying the principles of equitable estoppel enumerated in Hustad v. Reed, 133 M 211, 321 P2d 1083 (1958), determined that by allowing others to rely on documents that purported to show company ownership of the property, the officer may not now assert he is the true owner. Farmers St. Bank v. Johnson, 188 M 55, 610 P2d 1172 (1980).

Malicious Inducement of Breach of Contract — Individual Liability of Corporate Agents, Employees, Officers, or Directors: In a case of first impression in Montana, the issue was whether agents, employees, officers, or directors of a corporation may be held liable individually for the tort of malicious inducement of a breach of an employment contract. The resolution of the appeal depended upon a weighing of public policy considerations. The court held that the corporate veil should not be utilized as a protective device by those who employ corporate power or authority to serve their own ends. Tort liability for the inducement of breach of contract should be imposed when a corporate agent, employee, officer, or director induces a breach of contract for private benefit or because of personal feeling and purposes relative to a third party. The privilege of limited liability should be applicable in those situations where actions are motivated and taken in the furtherance of corporate purposes, policies, and interests. When plaintiff/appellant failed to show that the actions of individual defendants were not taken in furtherance of corporate purposes and interests, the summary judgment granted to the defendants was affirmed. Phillips v. Mont. Educ. Ass'n, 187 M 419, 610 P2d 154 (1980), followed in Bottrell v. Am. Bank, 237 M 1, 773 P2d 694, 46 St. Rep. 561 (1989), Lachenmaier v. First Bank Sys., Inc., 246 M 26, 803 P2d 614, 47 St. Rep. 2244 (1990), Mannix v. Butte Water Co., 249 M 372, 816 P2d 441, 48 St. Rep. 782 (1991), and King v. Zimmerman, 266 M 54, 878 P2d 895, 51 St. Rep. 659 (1994).

Must Be in Office for Liability to Attach — Estoppel: One who was not the treasurer of a corporation at the time a stockholder demanded a financial statement of its condition under section 15-606, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), could not be made such under the doctrine of estoppel based on certain annual reports that bore his name as treasurer; the rule being otherwise when the rights of a third person dealing with the corporation through the treasurer relied upon such reports to his damage, in which case the corporation would be estopped. The liability attaches to the treasurer as an official by virtue of the office, and not otherwise. Stanton Trust & Sav. Bank v. Johnson, 107 M 348, 85 P2d 336 (1938).

Requirement That Evidence Support Contention of Fictitious Resignation: When defendant, sought to be held for the penalty prescribed by section 15-606, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), for failure to furnish a statement of the financial condition of his corporation as treasurer, showed by the records of a special meeting of directors some 6 weeks prior to the demand for such statement that his resignation had been accepted and his successor elected, the contention of plaintiff that the records were sham and fictitious was not supported by evidence. Stanton Trust & Sav. Bank v. Johnson, 107 M 348, 85 P2d 336 (1938).

Venue for Action to Recover Penalty: The Legislature, in enacting section 15-606, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not intend to repeal or change the then existing laws relating to the right to demand a change of venue. "Jurisdiction" is the authority to hear and determine; "venue" is the place of trial. With no statutory direction as to manner of delivery of the statement, the treasurer could mail it from the county seat where he lived and where the corporation had its principal place of business, hence the cause of action resulting from his refusal arose in that county and place of trial was properly changed to that county. Stanton Trust & Sav. Bank v. Johnson, 104 M 235, 65 P2d 1188 (1937).

False Report: The trustees of a corporation, who filed a report which did not specify as a debt of the company its liability on a covenant of title, are not liable for a false report if at the time the report was filed the breach of the covenant was not known to them, and such a report is not false in stating that the capital was paid in full because of the mere fact that the property for which it was issued has decreased in value. Giddings v. Holter, 19 M 263, 48 P 8 (1897).

Right as Corporate Director Unsubstantiated — Injunction Properly Denied: Plaintiff, once the sole shareholder and director of Electronic Parts, Inc. (EPI), sold all interest in the corporation pursuant to a stock redemption agreement. When the director of EPI died, plaintiff sought two injunctions, alleging that as the sole remaining director of EPI, plaintiff was entitled to terminate EPI's legal counsel, to prohibit officers, agents, and employees from altering EPI documents, to inspect and review corporate records, and to prevent a shareholders' meeting. When the District Court denied both injunctions, plaintiff appealed, alleging that the court abused its discretion. The Supreme Court affirmed, ruling that the lower court's finding that the evidence did not support plaintiff's claim of directorship was not clearly erroneous. As a result, plaintiff had no right to terminate EPI's legal counsel, to inspect records, or to enjoin a shareholders' meeting. *Smith v. Official Comments to 35-1-451 Through 35-1-459: While the RMBCA addresses "Indemnification" under §§8.50 through 8.58 [35-1-451 through 35-1-459], the MCA indemnification provisions are set forth inclusively under §35-1-414 [now repealed].

Major revisions in the ABA Model Act relating to indemnification were made in 1979-1980 (see 34 Bus. Law. 1598) and are largely reflected in our existing statute. The existing language of §35-1-414 [now repealed] has been more clearly organized in the RMBCA, but according to the Comments, "the substance of [the 1980 provisions] are retained unchanged in §§8.50 through 8.58 [35-1-451 through 35-1-459] of the 1984 Model Act." The ABA Official Comments state:

Section[s] 8.50 through 8.58 [35-1-451 through 35-1-459] reorganize [the 1970 revisions] into a separate subchapter and make numerous stylistic changes. The division of a single section of the former Act into nine different sections in the current Act was designed to simplify the use of this section; no significant substantive change but several clarifying changes were made.

35-1-461. Definitions.Official Comments

Official Comments to 35-1-461 Through 35-1-464: The existing law states that corporate actions that are conflict of interest transactions are void or voidable unless it fell within certain exceptions. The language of §35-1-413 [now repealed] is very general and at times ambiguous. Material changes include:

1. "Conflicting interest" is clearly defined in §8.60 [35-1-461]. The new definition of a "conflicting interest" transaction requires that the director know of the transaction.

2. The definitional section at §8.60 [35-1-461] defines clearly who the parties to a conflicting interest transaction are. The existing law leaves the definition of who the parties are either to the imagination or case law. The law clarifies that the rule applies to transactions with subsidiary corporations.

3. The required disclosure of directors to the transaction are clearly defined.

4. The fairly vague references to transactions being void or voidable is replaced with more specific standards for when damages or an injunction might be obtained.

5. In §8.62 [35-1-463], the RMBCA specifies which directors are entitled to vote to ratify the transaction and the procedure for doing so.

6. In §8.62 [35-1-463], the RMBCA specifies which shareholders are entitled to vote to ratify and the procedures for doing so.

Legislation is necessary to address director conflicts of interest because of the inadequacies of the common law. As aptly stated by the ABA's Official Introductory Comments to Subchapter F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464]:

The common law, drawing its analogy on the fiduciary principles of the law of trusts, initially took the position that any transaction between X Co. and a director of X Co. was contaminated by the director's conflicting interest, that the transaction was null and void or voidable and, at least by implication, that the interested director who benefitted from the transaction could be required to disgorge any profits and be held liable for any damages. In time, this rule was perceived to be demonstrably unworkable in the real business world and contrary to the best interests of the corporation.

In order to correct those problems, the RMBCA takes the following approach, as described by the Official Introductory Comments to Subchapter F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464]:

Predecessor provisions to subchapter F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464] were sweeping and generalized in character. Subchapter F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464] is not. Its key objectives are to increase predictability and to enhance practical administrability. To that end, the new subchapter spells out a safe harbor procedure more meticulously than its predecessors. To the same end, the subchapter goes further. Earlier statutes left entirely to judicial interpretation — and to the guess of corporate counsel — the central question as to what does and what does not constitute a conflicting interest of a director. Great uncertainty has arisen as to the scope of that concept. Subchapter F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464] takes the new step of spelling out a practical working definition of "conflicting interest" and declares that definition to be exclusive. Circumstances that fall outside the statutory definition of conflicting interest cannot constitute the basis for an attack on a transaction on grounds of a director's interest conflict, although they may, of course, afford basis for legal attack on some other ground. Finally, to a greater degree than its predecessors, the subchapter specifies when judicial intervention is appropriate and when it is not.

A more detailed analysis of Chapter [Subchapter] F [35-1-461 through 35-1-464] is found at 44 Bus. Law. 1307 (1989).

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-504 [now repealed]. The Committee has revised Section 7.20(d) [subsection (4) of this section] as drafted by the ABA to delete all language after "corporation's expense" and in its place, insert "and may provide recovery to a shareholder for costs (including reasonable attorneys fees)." As such, the court does not have the statutory authority to enjoin the meeting. Hence, it is incumbent upon the shareholder to bring an action early enough that, if the shareholder is successful, the shareholder will have time to utilize the list to his or her advantage without the necessity of a postponed meeting.

35-1-528. Quorum and voting requirements for voting groups.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-505 [now repealed]. MCA §35-1-505(1) [now repealed] requires a minimum quorum standard of one-third of the shares entitled to vote at the meeting (RMBCA does not set any minimum quorum standards, except the normal majority standard if a quorum is not stated.)

MCA §35-1-505(3) [now repealed] also provides for adjournment in absence of a quorum. Apparently the RMBCA considered the obviousness of this provision and has not incorporated it in the current Model Act.

The new provisions also provide that action can be approved by a plurality of votes cast rather than a majority of shares represented at the meeting.

35-1-531. Voting for directors — cumulative voting.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not derived from the RMBCA, but is derived from MCA §35-1-506(4) [now repealed]. Mandatory cumulative voting has long been a part of the Montana Business Code Annotated. See also Sensabaugh v. Polson Plywood Co., 135 Mont. 562, 342 P.2d 1064 (1959). Because, however, some shareholders may find cumulative voting burdensome, or otherwise undesirable, a provision has been added to the law allowing shareholders to opt out of cumulative voting (a) when the corporation is newly incorporated, or (b) when the vote to eliminate cumulative voting is sufficiently strong so as not to prejudice the rights of any shareholders able to elect directors. Note also that shareholders are entitled to dissenter's rights under §13.02(a)(4)(iii) [35-1-827(1)(d)(iii)] if cumulative voting rights are abolished.

Likewise, the new section does not address the liability of estates and personal representatives (as did MCA §35-1-510 [now repealed]). Case NotesDECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Basic Elements of Partnership by Estoppel: The two basic elements required to demonstrate partnership by estoppel are: (1) that a person or entity represent to a third party that he is dealing with a partnership even though no partnership exists; and (2) that the third party rely to his detriment. When an oral contract was negotiated and entered, the contracting party did not specifically state that he represented either a partnership or a corporation, but did refer to the other individuals involved as his "partners". This representation could lead a reasonable person to believe he was dealing with a partnership and, when coupled with the fact that the "partners" would have benefited financially by having the third party perform the contracted work, demonstrated a partnership by estoppel. Springer v. Opsahl, 229 M 10, 744 P2d 884, 44 St. Rep. 1738 (1987).

Partnership by Estoppel — Corporate Shareholders: The shareholders of a corporation can be liable as partners to a person dealing with the corporation if through some action or inaction of the corporation the person reasonably believes he is dealing with a partnership and relies upon that belief in dealing with the corporation. In this case there were various partnerships and a corporation, all with similar names and consisting of the same people, and although some evidence tended to show that operations of the corporation were apparently partnership operations, the existence of a partnership by estoppel is a factual issue, and in this case summary judgment finding such a partnership was improperly granted because factual issues remained. Gamble Robinson Co. v. Carousel Properties, 212 M 305, 688 P2d 283, 41 St. Rep. 1757 (1984).

Disregard of Corporate Identity: The corporate identity may be disregarded and the identity of purchasers on a contract may be considered one where an individual controlling shareholder utilizes the corporation as a subterfuge to perpetrate fraud. Motion to dismiss is properly denied. Flemmer v. Ming, 190 M 403, 621 P2d 1038, 37 St. Rep. 1916 (1980).

Secondary Liability: In the case of Kelly v. Clark, 21 M 291, 53 P 959 (1898), and King v. Pony Gold Min. Co., 28 M 74, 72 P 309 (1903), this court construed section 15-615, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), imposing liability upon stockholders "until the whole amount of the capital stock subscribed for shall be paid in", as imposing a liability secondary to that of the company for its debts, and held that the remedy against the stockholders did not accrue until the remedy against the company had been exhausted. Mitchell v. Banking Corp. of Mont., 83 M 581, 273 P 1055 (1929).

Void Assessment: Prior to the 1919 amendment, section 15-721, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), providing for other corporations making stock assessable, was intended to and did make the individual stockholder and not the share of stock the unit of voting power, and such a change made with the consent of only 96 out of 301 stockholders, though it was made by those owning more than three-fourths of the company's stock, was without effect, and an assessment levied in pursuance thereof was void. Smith v. Iron Mtn. Tunnel Co., 46 M 13, 125 P 649 (1912).

35-1-535. Shareholders' preemptive rights.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-511 [now repealed], although §6.30 [this section] more clearly defines the nature of the preemptive right. Preemptive rights are particularly important to protect the interests of minority shareholders in close corporations. The Committee expressed some concern with the language of §6.30(b)(3)(iv) [subsection (2)(c)(iv) of this section] that provides there will be no preemptive right if the shares are sold for other than money. Although the Official Comment's RMBCA fails to offer a rationale for this provision, the following comment appearing after Minnesota Statute Annotated §302A.412 were [was] adopted by the Committee.

"Comment: Reporter's Notes (1981) — Shares issued for nonmonetary consideration. The consideration may well be unique, it may be the services of a particular person, land, plant or an entire business. In this situation the original shareholders have nothing comparable to offer unlike the usual case where the corporation seeks only cash. It may also be impossible to act quickly under the articles to issue a new class or series of shares to take advantage of opportunities."

Research indicates that 25 of the 35 states that exclude preemptive rights in specific instances exclude preemptive rights when the consideration is other than for cash. The RMBCA is consistent with common law cases holding that preemptive rights do not accrue when consideration is other than cash. See Fletcher, Cyclopedia Corporations §5136.4 (1986).

Committee members were concerned that the board could effectively neutralize the preemptive right by routinely issuing stock for property or services. This concern, upon further analysis, is mitigated by (a) cases (Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch, 645 P.2d 929 (Mont. 1982), Maddox v. Norman, 669 P.2d 230 (Mont. 1983)) that hold a plan to squeeze out shareholders is oppression, allowing courts to apply equitable remedies and (b) articles can be drafted to expand the preemptive right to those circumstances when stock is issued for other than money.

35-1-541. Definitions.

Official Comments

Official Comments to 35-1-541 Through 35-1-548: The RMBCA is much more specific than the MCA in defining when derivative actions may be brought. Because the MCA is vague with respect to specific standards, the Montana Supreme Court has been forced to adopt standards to clarify the statute. SW Company v. John Wight, Inc., 587 P.2d 348 (Mont. 1978). Even those standards are not very precise. Likewise, those standards are, to a certain extent, out of step with the law in other jurisdictions, particularly Delaware. See, e.g., Zapata Corporation v. Maldonado, 430 A.2d 779 (Del. 1981) and Aronson v. Lewis, 473 A.2d 805 (Del. 1984). Both of these decisions generally give the board more control over derivative suits than SW Company.

The provisions of Subchapter D [35-1-541 through 35-1-548] address the issues that the courts are currently forced to deal with without the help of a statute. Issues such as when a demand on directors must precede a suit, when a disinterested committee of the board may dismiss a suit, and when the corporation must pay the plaintiffs attorneys fees are vexing issues. The drafters of RMBCA surveyed the case law and statutes from other jurisdictions to provide guidance. In doing so, the proposed legislation balances the needs of shareholders to challenge illegal action by management with the need to limit nuisance suits or strike suits.

The ABA Official Comments to Subchapter D [35-1-541 through 35-1-548] are found at 45 Bus. Law. 1241 (May 1990).

Contract Action — Sole Owners Asserting Wrongs Done to Corporation: In bank's action against corporation to collect on corporation's note, two sole owners of the corporation did not, as individuals and sole owners, have a right to assert any cause of action arising from bank's refusal to continue financing the corporation because sole owners were attempting to assert as wrongs to themselves claims that belonged to the corporation. Richland Nat'l Bank & Trust v. Swenson, 249 M 410, 816 P2d 1045, 48 St. Rep. 730 (1991).

Exception Allowing Direct Shareholder Action Not Adopted: Some jurisdictions recognize an exception to the need for derivative remedies by allowing a shareholder to bring a direct action when the defendants control the corporation and a derivative action would place any judgment into the corporate treasury and therefore under the defendants' control (citing cases). However, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals declined to adopt the exception, finding on overriding policy concern in avoiding unnecessary litigation resulting from separate suits by individual shareholders whenever the value of shares is impaired by a wrong to the corporation. Sax v. World Wide Press, Inc., 809 F2d 610 (1987).

35-1-543. Demand.Official Comments

Official Comments: This section requires a written demand in all cases, even when no member of the board is disinterested. As such, this provision overrules the exceptions to the written demand requirements set forth in SW Company v. John Wight, Inc., 587 P.2d 348 (Mont. 1978). The reasons are best set forth in the ABA Official Comments:

First, even though no director may be independent, the demand will give the board of directors the opportunity to reexamine the act complained of in the light of a potential lawsuit and take corrective action. Secondly, the provision saves the litigants and the court the time and expense they would incur in litigating the question of whether demand is required. It is believed that requiring a demand in all cases does not impose an onerous burden since a relatively short waiting period of 90 days is provided and this period may be shortened if irreparable injury to the corporation would result by waiting for the expiration of the 90-day period.

The issue of whether the directors of the corporation are independent is still relevant, but relevant to the issue of whether this corporation by their directors may successfully move to dismiss the litigation.

35-1-545. Dismissal.Official Comments

Official Comments: These provisions are the heart of the derivative proceedings statute and are consistent with the position of SW Company that independent directors can stop a derivative action. The definition of independent directors is broader in the RMBCA than in SW Company. The mere fact that the (1) director is a defendant in the action or (2) approved of the complained action (but received no benefit) does not cause the director to lose his or her independent status under the RMBCA. These factors apparently do cause directors to lose their independent status under SW Company. The RMBCA definition of independence is consistent with Delaware case law. See, e.g. Aronson v. Lewis, 473 A.2d 805, 816 (Del. 1984). The reasons for the suggested definition are set forth in the ABA's Official Comments.

Subsection (c)(1) [subsection (3)(a) of this section] makes it clear that the participation of non-independent directors or shareholders in the nomination or election of a new director shall not prevent the new director from being considered independent. This sentence therefore rejects the concept that the mere appointment of new directors by the non-independent directors makes the new directors not independent in making the necessary determination because of an inherent structural bias. Clauses (2) and (3) [subsections (3)(b) and (3)(c) of this section] also confirm the decisions by a number of courts that the mere fact that a director has been named as a defendant or approved the action being challenged does not cause the director to be considered not independent. See Aronson v. Lewis, 473 A.2d 805, 816 (Del. 1984); Lewis v. Graves, 701 F.2d 245 (2d Cir. 1983). It is believed that a court will be able to assess any actual bias in deciding whether the director is independent without any presumption arising out of the method of the director's appointment, the mere naming of the director as a defendant or the director's approval of the act where the director received no personal benefit from the transaction.

More importantly, if the SW Company rationale is followed, directors will almost never be able to stop a derivative action because they are almost always named as defendants and have frequently approved of the transaction. The RMBCA remedies this deficiency. In short, instead of creating presumptions about lack of independence, the statute suggests courts examine whether, in fact, the director is independent.

The appropriate persons may, in good faith and after reasonable inquiry, compel the court to dismiss the suit. The ABA Official Comments state:

The word "inquiry" rather than "investigation" has been used to make it clear that the scope of the inquiry will depend upon the issues raised and the knowledge of the group making the determination with respect to the issues. In some cases, the issues may be so simple or the knowledge of the group so extensive that little additional inquiry is required. In other cases, the group may need to engage counsel and other professionals to make an investigation and assist the group in its evaluation of the issues.

The phrase "in good faith" modifies both the determination and the inquiry. The test, which is also included in sections 8.30 [35-1-418] (general standards of conduct for directors) and 8.51 [35-1-452] (authority to indemnify), is a subjective one, meaning "honestly or in an honest manner." "The Corporate Director's Guidebook," 33 Bus Law. 1595, 1601 (1978). As stated in Abella v. Universal Leaf Tobacco Co., 546 F. Supp. 795, 800 (E.D. Va. 1982), "the inquiry intended by this phrase goes to the spirit and sincerity with which the investigation was conducted, rather than the reasonableness of its procedures or basis for conclusions."

The phrase "upon which its conclusions are based" requires that the inquiry and the conclusions follow logically. This provision authorizes the court to examine the determination to ensure that it has some support in the findings of the inquiry. The burden of convincing the court about this issue lies with whichever party has the burden under section 7.44(e) [subsection (5) of this section]. This phrase does not require the persons making the determination to prepare a written report that sets forth their determination and the bases therefor, since circumstances will vary as to the need for such a report. There may, however, be many instances where good corporate practice will commend such a procedure.

Subsection (e) [subsection (5) of this section] addresses the issue of what happens if the board, though not independent at the time the complaint is filed, becomes independent later. Section (e) [subsection (5) of this section] addresses this issue by shifting the burden of proof to the newly disinterested board.

Case Notes

Fees and Costs, Including Costs of Appeal, Properly Awarded in Derivative Claim Action: In Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062 (2000), the Supreme Court held that the District Court committed reversible error in ruling in favor of plaintiff on a derivative claim action because the claim was not reasonable in light of the serious jeopardy in which it placed the corporation and its refinancing efforts. On remand, the District Court awarded defendant attorney fees and costs pursuant to this section, and plaintiff appealed. In determining an award for statutory attorney fees, a court may grant the prevailing party fees incurred in its litigation of the initial claim and the corresponding counterclaim if the court cannot clearly segregate the attorney's time in litigating both claims. In this case, the derivative claim and counterclaim shared a common core of complex facts and interrelated issues, so segregation of fees was not possible. Therefore, the District Court did not err in awarding defendants' fees incurred in litigating both the derivative claim and counterclaim. Further, defendants successfully defended this appeal, incurring further attorney fees and costs, so the Supreme Court remanded for a calculation of fees owed to defendants for this appeal. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2003 MT 17, 314 M 76, 64 P3d 979 (2003), following Donnes v. Orlando, 221 M 356, 720 P2d 233 (1986), and Nason v. Leistiko, 1998 MT 217, 290 M 460, 963 P2d 1279 (1998).

Equitable Power of District Court to Order Stock Sale in Place of Dissolution: Where the plaintiff petitioned the District Court to appoint a receiver and dissolve a family ranching corporation in which she held 75 out of 1,000 outstanding shares, the District Court did not err in refusing to appoint the receiver and instead ordering the plaintiff to sell and the defendants to buy her corporate shares. Past decisions of the Montana Supreme Court show that the courts may use equitable powers in resolving disputes between shareholders, and decisions from other jurisdictions have recognized and approved the fashioning of equitable remedies less drastic than dissolution in cases where dissolution is not warranted. Because the facts show dissolution was not warranted in this case, the District Court's order was an appropriate equitable remedy. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983), distinguished in Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Equitable Order for Purchase of Shares in Dissolution Proceeding — Improper Valuation of Shares: Where the District Court properly invoked its equitable powers in a dissolution proceeding to order the plaintiff to sell and the defendants to buy the plaintiff's 75 outstanding shares, the District Court erred in its valuation of those shares by not establishing the net value of the corporation, by rejecting consideration of an earlier offer to purchase shares (which lapsed by a failure to obtain financing), and by failing to establish the value of 20 acres of land ordered exchanged for the shares. Without considering these facts, the court could not properly value the shares of the plaintiff. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983).

Repurchase of Capital Stock: The mere repurchase of capital stock by a corporation would not tend to decrease it unless the directors should absolutely merge or extinguish the stock after its repurchase. If it is unlawful to decrease the capital stock, presumptively the directors did not violate the law. It would require some positive showing to the contrary to overturn this presumption. Porter v. Plymouth Gold Min. Co., 29 M 347, 74 P 938 (1904).

The ABA Official Comments state:

Section 6.01 [this section] adopts a new terminology from that traditionally used in corporation statutes to describe classes of shares that may be created, but makes only limited substantive changes from earlier versions of the Model Act. Traditional corporation statutes work from a perceived inheritance of concepts of "common shares" and "preferred shares" that at one time may have had considerable meaning but that today often do not involve significant distinctions. It is possible under modern corporation statutes to create classes of "common" shares that have important preferential rights and classes of "preferred" shares that are subordinate in all important economic aspects or that are indistinguishable from common shares in either voting rights or entitlement to participate in the assets of the corporation upon dissolution. The revised Model Act breaks away from the inherited concepts of "common" and "preferred" shares and develops more general language to reflect the actual flexibility in the creation of classes of shares that exists in modern corporate practice. The words "common shares" or "preferred shares" are no longer used in the revised Model Act, though the words appear in a few instances in examples appearing in the Official Comment.

Failure to Pay Purchase Price on Time — Lost Income to Be Paid: Failure to pay the purchase price for stock in the time required deprives a corporation of the purchase price, and as a result the corporation suffers a loss equivalent to the income it would have earned, which must be paid by the delinquent stock purchaser. *Ski Roundtop, Inc. v. Official Comments

Official Comments: This section continues the elimination of the concepts of par value and stated capital. The reasons are best described in the ABA's Official Comments:

The financial provisions of the Model Act reflect a modernization of the concepts underlying the capital structure and limitations on distributions of corporations. This process of modernization began with amendments in 1980 to the 1969 Model Act that eliminated the concepts of "par value" and "stated capital," and further modernization occurred in connection with the development of the revised Act in 1984. Practitioners and legal scholars have long recognized that the statutory structure embodying "par value" and "legal capital" concepts is not only complex and confusing but also fails to serve the original purpose of protecting creditors and senior security holders from payments to junior security holders. Indeed, to the extent security holders are led to believe that it provides this protection, these provisions may be affirmatively misleading. The Model Act has therefore eliminated these concepts entirely and substituted a simpler and more flexible structure that provides more realistic protection to these interests.

The RMBCA allows stock to be issued for future services on promissory notes. This is consistent with State v. Clements, 37 Mont. 314, 96 P. 498 (1908) (capital stock of a corporation need not be paid for in money); See also Gallatin County Farmers' Alliance v. Flannery, 59 Mont. 534, 537, 197 P. 996, 998 (1921) (citing Clements). The ABA Official Comments best describe the reasons for allowing stock to be issued for future services and promissory notes.

Section 6.21(b) [subsection (2) of this section] specifically validates contracts for future services (including promoters' services), promissory notes, or "any tangible or intangible property or benefit to the corporation," as consideration for the present issue of shares. The term "benefit" should be broadly construed to include, for example, a reduction of a liability, a release of a claim, or benefits obtained by a corporation by contribution of its shares to a charitable organization or as a prize in a promotion. In the realities of commercial life, there is sometimes a need for the issuance of shares for contract rights or such intangible property or benefits. And, as a matter of business economics, contracts for future services, promissory notes, and intangible property or benefits often have value that is as real as the value of tangible property or past services, the only types of property that may older statutes permit as consideration for shares. Thus, only business judgment should determine what kind of property should be obtained for shares, and a determination by the directors meeting the requirements of section 8.30 [35-1-418] to accept a specific kind of valuable property for shares should be accepted and not circumscribed by artificial or arbitrary rules.

Case NotesDECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Summary Judgment — Alleged Invalidity of Promissory Notes — Stockholder Status Not Prerequisite for RICO Claim: In a suit seeking payment on promissory notes, the first of which was executed in exchange for 1,500 shares of stock, the validity of the note was challenged on the grounds that it was in violation of 35-1-606 (now repealed), which provided that neither promissory notes nor future services constitute payment for shares of a corporation. The Supreme Court held that it was error for the lower court to grant summary judgment when the record did not contain sufficient facts to allow a determination of the invalidity of the promissory notes at issue and that it was further error to dismiss defendant's RICO counterclaims because stockholder status is not a prerequisite for standing to bring a RICO claim. Kuhns v. Koessler, 266 M 339, 880 P2d 1293, 51 St. Rep. 800 (1994).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Stock Issue Sales — Duty to Minority Stockholders — Business Judgment Rule: When director and majority stockholder at time of suit became such during the life of the corporation by subscribing to stock issues when other stockholders did not, there was no breach of fiduciary duty by him to minority stockholders because his subscriptions saved the corporation; they were available to all stockholders with a detailed prospectus setting forth pertinent matter; and although the issues may not have been a perfect solution to corporate problems, they were acceptable under the "business judgment rule". Ski Roundtop, Inc. v. Hall, 202 M 260, 658 P2d 1071, 40 St. Rep. 74 (1983), followed in Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Payment for Stock as Consideration for Services: Payments of money made to a television cable corporation upon the issuance of stock to Class B stockholders, which were not made for stock but rather for services rendered and to be rendered by the corporation, constituted ordinary taxable income under section 61(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The purported stock purchases were in fact payments required of subscribers in consideration of such services. Community T.V. Ass'n of Havre v. U.S., 203 F. Supp. 270 (D.C. Mont. 1962).

Mode of Payment: There can be no presumption that the capital stock of a corporation shall be considered to be paid for in money. St. v. Clements, 37 M 314, 96 P 498 (1908).

Purchase of Property: Section 15-619, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), was direct authority for the receipt by a domestic corporation of mines, manufactories, and other like property in payment of the capital stock, and such stock shall be considered fully paid-up stock; it tends with other provisions of the law to show that the capital stock of a foreign corporation may consist in whole or in part of something other than money. St. v. Clements, 37 M 314, 96 P 498 (1908).

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-617 [now repealed]; however, it clarifies the existing law in several regards:

(1) The restriction need not be noted in the front of the certificate. As such, cases such as Ling. & Co. v. Trinity Savings and Loan Ass'n, 482 S.W.2d 841 (Tex. 1982) (a notation of the restriction must be on the face of the certificate) should not be controlling in Montana.

(2) Consent restrictions (i.e., those described in §6.27(d)(2) [subsection (4)(b) of this section]) must not be manifestly unreasonable.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Restrictive Transfer Provision Not Intended to Prohibit Corporation Liquidation: Plaintiff, a minority stockholder in a closely held family corporation, filed an action alleging that the corporation's preemptive right provision was triggered when the remaining stockholders accepted plaintiff's offer to purchase the stock at book value. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's reliance on Dobry v. Dobry, 262 P2d 691 (Okla. 1953), ruling that a minority shareholder may not rely on a restrictive transfer provision to prohibit the liquidation and sale of corporate assets. Stuftt v. Stuftt, 276 M 310, 916 P2d 104, 53 St. Rep. 409 (1996).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Share Transfer Restrictions Valid and Enforceable: Shareholders in a closely held farming and ranching corporation executed a buy-sell agreement providing that as long as the shareholders were alive, stock could not be sold by one shareholder without the written consent of the other shareholders. The agreement also provided that a shareholder wishing to sell stock must first offer it to the corporation and then to the remaining shareholders. The District Court properly held that such share transfer restrictions contained within the buy-sell agreement were valid and enforceable. Gray v. Harris Land & Cattle Co., 227 M 51, 737 P2d 475, 44 St. Rep. 886 (1987).

Commonality of Interests Insufficient to Justify Disregard of Corporate Separateness: On appeal from a declaratory judgment that a proposed transaction to merge into a subsidiary triggered preemptive right and resignation provisions of a venture agreement, the Supreme Court found that evidence did not establish a commonality of interests between defendant corporations sufficient to justify disregard of their corporate separateness. Meridian Minerals Co. v. Nicor Minerals, Inc., 228 M 274, 742 P2d 456, 44 St. Rep. 1516 (1987).

Corporate Control by Single Shareholder Insufficient to Warrant Piercing Corporate Veil: Where a mining venture agreement provided for corporate merger by which the "surviving entity shall possess substantially all of the stock, or all of the property rights and interests, and be subject to substantially all of the liabilities and obligations" of the incorporating participant, the Supreme Court held that control over a corporation by a single shareholder was not, by itself, enough to warrant piercing the corporate veil. Meridian Minerals Co. v. Nicor Minerals, Inc., 228 M 274, 742 P2d 456, 44 St. Rep. 1516 (1987).

Acquisition of Stock in Another Corporation: At the time of the case, the only provisions concerning merger of corporations were found in sections 15-104, 15-620, and 15-1603, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorizing one corporation to acquire shares of stock in another. United Missouri River Power Co. v. Yoder, 41 M 245, 108 P 912 (1910).

Mining Corporation: If mining corporations may consolidate in any manner and upon any terms without restriction, they may proceed by conveying all their property to a corporation organized for that purpose or by the purchase by one of the companies of stock of the others in whole or in part. *MacGinniss v. Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-801 [now repealed] and particularly to §801(1) [now repealed]. Note the absence in the RMBCA of any reference to consolidations as found in §35-1-801(2) [now repealed]. The ABA "Official Comments" indicate that this was an intended omission based on the realities of the modern corporate world in that it is considered generally advantageous for one of the parties to remain the surviving corporation. Under the RMBCA, in order to effectuate what was a consolidation, a new corporate entity could be created prior to the merger and then have both parties to the transaction subsequently merged into this new entity.

Effect of Merger on Claims Against Companies Involved: The accident upon which a negligence claim was based occurred when the manufacturer of the garage door involved was insured by Western. When this lawsuit was filed, the manufacturer had been acquired through a merger by another company. The second company was insured by Travelers. Each of the policies involved was an "occurrence" policy. Under 35-1-817 (now repealed), it was proper to name the second company as defendant in the action, but Western, the only company insuring the manufacturer at the time of the injury, was the only company obligated to pay any claim arising from the accident. *Travelers Ins. 35-1-818. Merger of subsidiary.Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-805 [now repealed]. Note that §11.04 [this section] reduces the percentage requirement for the parent corporation to 80% from 95% [35-1-805(1)(a)] [now repealed]. Also, §11.04 [this section] permits shareholders of the subsidiary to waive the mailing requirements.

In addition, §11.04(e) [subsection (5) of this section] prohibits the articles of merger from containing amendments to the articles of incorporation of the parent corporation.

While the RMBCA suggests that parent corporations owning 90% or more of the stock of the subsidiary have the benefit of this statute the Committee opted to reduce the percentage to 80%. It did so because of the widely held belief (particularly for tax purposes) that 80% of a corporation is sufficient control as to make that corporation a subsidiary.

This simplified procedure is afforded to mergers of parent and subsidiary corporations to provide the parent corporation with a way to eliminate minority shareholders' interest in a subsidiary without calling a shareholders' meeting. The subsidiaries' shareholders, however, have the right to dissent pursuant to §13.02 [35-1-827]. In addition, if the purpose of a merger is to "freeze out" minority shareholders of the subsidiary corporation, the merger may give rise to claim of breach of a fiduciary duty. See, e.g. Singer v. Magnavox Co. 380 A.2d 969 (Del. 1977) and Weinberger v. UOP Inc., 426 A.2d 1333 (Del. Ch. 1981).

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-808 [now repealed]. The authority to take the actions stated in §12.01(a)(1) and (2) [subsections (1)(a) and (1)(b) of this section] are found in MCA §35-1-808 [now repealed]. Section 12.01(a)(3) [subsection (1)(c) of this section] is new and allows easy formation of a holding company. The committee carefully examined the advantages and disadvantages of subsection (a)(3) [subsection (1)(c) of this section]. The advantage of (a)(3) [subsection (1)(c) of this section] is ease of formation of a subsidiary. The disadvantage of (a)(3) [subsection (1)(c) of this section] is that a corporation, in a thinly disguised step transaction, could transfer all assets to a subsidiary, then have the subsidiary transfer all assets to the third party, circumventing the need for a shareholder vote and the shareholder's right to the appraisal remedy. Under theories of Farris v. Glen Alden, 143 A.2d 25 (Del. 1948) (constructive merger), this step transaction may be a "constructive sale of assets outside the ordinary course of business" allowing shareholders appraisal rights.

Option to Purchase: Section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not restrict powers of corporation's officers and directors in prosecuting corporation's business with respect to transactions incident to its ordinary activities and calculated to further its continuance in business. When a mining corporation could not meet the terms of an option to purchase mining claims within the few days remaining, its officers acted as ordinarily prudent businessmen carrying on their business affairs, without evasion of statute, by conveying the claims to an individual who paid off the option and gave the corporation an option to purchase the claims from him on a later date. N. Min. Corp. v. Trunz, 124 F2d 14 (9th Cir. 1941).

Allegation That Contract Entered Into by Lawful Authority — Sufficiency: Complaint, in an action for breach of a contract of sale of corporate mining property which also included a sale of its stock, alleging that the contract was entered into by the defendant corporation by lawful authority under section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), was sufficient at least so far as its property was concerned, irrespective of whether the sale of the stock could be enforced, and therefore a general demurrer to the complaint did not lie. Smith v. Jack Pot Min. Co., 109 M 445, 97 P2d 368 (1939).

Mortgage of Corporate Property: Under section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), a corporation had power to mortgage all its property either by a two-thirds vote of its stockholders at a meeting called for that purpose or by adopting a bylaw empowering its board of directors to do so; hence when the complaint in an action to foreclose a corporate mortgage and trust deed alleged that the corporation had, "pursuant to lawful authority and corporate action of its stockholders and board of directors", etc., executed such deed, the pleading was sufficient to show authority in the corporation to mortgage its property. Thomson v. Nygaard, 98 M 529, 41 P2d 1 (1935).

Sale of Leasehold Interest: Under the common-law powers reserved to corporations by the proviso in section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and enumerated in a general way in sections 15-401 and 15-801, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the board of directors of a going corporation could in the proper pursuit of its business and within the purposes of its creation, against the dissent of a minority of its stockholders, sell a leasehold interest in realty with improvements thereon. When such sale was made before plaintiffs had judgment against the selling corporation, they acquired no title under execution sale, and nonsuit was properly granted in their action in ejectment against the purchaser. Wortman v. Luna Park Amusement Co., 61 M 89, 201 P 570 (1921), explained in N. Min. Corp. v. Trunz, 124 F2d 14 (9th Cir. 1941).

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Breach of Fiduciary Duty in Conversion of Corporate Property Without Requisite Notice and Shareholder Approval — Punitive Damages Unavailable Absent Showing of Actual Malice or Fraud: Phil was two-thirds majority shareholder in Trifad Entertainment, Inc. (Trifad), and Brad was one-third minority shareholder and Trifad director. Following Phil's extradition to Florida on racketeering charges, Brad secured a loan for $15,000, deposited the money in the Trifad account, and then sold virtually all of Trifad's assets to himself for $15,000. In addition, Brad wrote checks on Trifad's account for taxes owed and for estimated tax payments and withdrew one-third of the remaining balance and left two-thirds in the account, all without attempting to contact Phil. Phil later sued Brad for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and conversion and requested punitive damages, contending that Brad's actions were performed with actual malice and constituted actual fraud. At trial, Brad contended that the actions were reasonable considering Phil was in jail facing criminal charges, and Brad cross-claimed for indemnification from Trifad for litigation expenses and liabilities incurred in his capacity as Trifad director. The District Court found for Brad on all counts, but denied corporate indemnification. Both Phil and Brad appealed. The Supreme Court reversed, finding that Brad failed to comply with this section by selling corporate property without the requisite notice and shareholder approval. Although contacting Phil would have been difficult, it was not impossible. However, even if Phil had been unavailable for consultation, this section does not contain any exceptions to the notice and approval requirements governing the sale of corporate assets. Further, the sale constituted conversion because Brad exercised unauthorized dominion over Trifad property by transferring ownership to himself. The case was remanded for a determination of damages, including possible damages other than those provided in 27-1-320 if peculiar circumstances warranted compensation for future lost income and profits. The District Court erred in concluding that Brad did not breach his fiduciary duties to Trifad; however, absent proof of actual malice or actual fraud, punitive damages were not warranted. Because a breach of fiduciary duty occurred, Brad could not claim to be wholly successful in the action, so Brad's claim for corporate indemnification also failed under 35-1-453. Trifad Entertainment, Inc. v. Anderson, 2001 MT 227, 306 M 499, 36 P3d 363 (2001).

Exchange of Corporate Property Not Contemplated in Stockholder Agreement — Minority Shareholder Entitled to Notice of Dissenters' Rights: The provisions of a stockholders' agreement dealt with procedures for the sale and transfer of shares but did not contemplate an exchange transaction of all corporate property or a fundamental change in the corporate form. Therefore, the Montana Business Corporation Act, Title 35, ch. 1, including provisions giving rise to dissenters' rights, rather than the provisions of the stockholders' agreement itself, controlled the resolution of the exchange transaction. Under the Act, a dissenting shareholder may demand that the corporation buy back that shareholder's shares at fair value if the corporation takes an action that fundamentally alters the character of the shareholder's investment. Because the corporation president and majority shareholder exchanged virtually all the corporate property other than in the ordinary course of business, all minority shareholders should have been notified of the proposed exchange or should have been allowed to vote on the proposal at a stockholders' meeting and should have been notified of dissenters' rights within 10 days after the exchange. The minority shareholders' mere failure to object to the exchange did not constitute a waiver of their dissenters' rights because they were never given notice of their right to dissent. Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Relinquishment of Corporate Assets by Directors Holding Fifty Percent of Stock: By a 2-to-1 vote, directors holding 50% of the stock of corporation being dissolved outvoted the third director, who held the other 50%, and voted to relinquish the corporation's ownership of stained glass windows. A law firm the corporation designated to hold and disburse the proceeds from the sale of corporate assets filed an interpleader action to determine who should receive what funds. The court properly found that if relinquishment of the windows had been put to a shareholder vote, the vote would have been equal and concluded that the disposal was not in the regular course of business and violated 35-1-809 (now repealed). The court awarded the dissenting director-shareholder damages against the other two equal to one-half the value the court placed on the windows. Schulz, Davis & Warren v. Marinkovich, 203 M 12, 661 P2d 5, 40 St. Rep. 262 (1983).

Implied Authority of Corporate President — Doctrine of Estoppel to Enforce Lease Option: When two of the corporation's three directors, one of whom was the corporate president and controlling shareholder, signed an option to lease land agreement, the corporation could not assert lack of corporate authority as a defense to the lease option obligation because of the implied authority of a corporate president to act on behalf of the corporation. The doctrine of estoppel was applicable. Hauptman v. Edwards, Inc., 170 M 310, 553 P2d 975 (1976).

Gifts Ultra Vires: Corporations have no power to make gifts of their property; hence when the directors of a corporation, after purporting to convey its property to another corporation, executed without consideration a deed of trust to a third party covering the same property and the capital stock of the second company received therefor, the transaction was void not only under section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), but as ultra vires the corporation. Hanrahan v. Andersen, 108 M 218, 90 P2d 494 (1939).

Without Essential Compliance, Conveyance a Nullity: It was essential to comply with section 15-901, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), as to holding special stockholders' meetings to consider selling or otherwise disposing of the whole or any part of a corporation's property, and the conveyance was a nullity when two of such meetings were held on an 11 and 5 days' notice irrespective of the fact that the corporation may thereafter have maintained an office and transacted business or had some property remaining. Hanrahan v. Andersen, 108 M 218, 90 P2d 494 (1939), distinguished in N. Min. Corp. v. Trunz, 124 F2d 14 (9th Cir. 1941).

When Neither Directors Nor Stockholders Have Right to Sell Property Against Stockholder's Dissent: When corporation was solvent and prosperous and well able to achieve object of its creation, neither directors nor stockholders would have right to sell corporation property against dissent of stockholder unless authority was granted by statute; in instant case, proposition for transfer of corporate property for period of years for development purposes was held too vague to form basis of contract against dissent of stockholder. Schwartz v. Inspiration Gold Min. Co., 15 F. Supp. 1030 (D.C. Mont. 1936).

Transfer of Business to President: The finding that a corporation which claimed to have transferred its business to its president had ceased to do business and was therefore not taxable was held unwarranted under the evidence (sections 15-901 through 15-911, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and 72-20-201 and 72-20-204, MCA) (now repealed). Rasmusson v. Eddy's Steam Bakery, 57 F2d 27 (9th Cir. 1932).

The right to dissent is currently dealt with at MCA §§35-1-810 through 812 [all repealed]. These sections are among the most confusing in the Montana Business Corporation Act. The RMBCA has reorganized the provisions in order to clarify them.

Case Notes

Sale of Minority Shares to Majority Shareholder or Corporation — Discount Inappropriate: A minority discount is inappropriate when calculating fair value for the sale of a minority shareholder's shares in a closely held corporation to a majority shareholder or to the corporation. A minority discount recognizes that controlling shares are worth more in the market than are noncontrolling shares. However, because there is no market involved in an inside transfer of shares, the minority discount should not be applied to an inside transfer. Rather, the minority shareholder is entitled to fair value for the shares, pursuant to 35-1-827. Fair value, as set out in this section, means the value of the shares immediately before the effectuation of the corporate action to which the dissenter objects. Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998), overruling McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239 (1996).

"Fair Value" of Minority Shares Not Precluding Application of Minority Discount Value: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that she would not be paid the fair value of her shares if the shares were valued using a discount for minority shares. The Supreme Court held that nothing in this section precluded the consideration of a minority shareholder's lack of control over the affairs of the corporation and of the lack of marketability of minority shares in determining the fair value of those shares. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996), overruled in Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998).

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Exchange of Corporate Property Not Contemplated in Stockholder Agreement — Minority Shareholder Entitled to Notice of Dissenters' Rights: The provisions of a stockholders' agreement dealt with procedures for the sale and transfer of shares but did not contemplate an exchange transaction of all corporate property or a fundamental change in the corporate form. Therefore, the Montana Business Corporation Act, Title 35, ch. 1, including provisions giving rise to dissenters' rights, rather than the provisions of the stockholders' agreement itself, controlled the resolution of the exchange transaction. Under the Act, a dissenting shareholder may demand that the corporation buy back that shareholder's shares at fair value if the corporation takes an action that fundamentally alters the character of the shareholder's investment. Because the corporation president and majority shareholder exchanged virtually all the corporate property other than in the ordinary course of business, all minority shareholders should have been notified of the proposed exchange or should have been allowed to vote on the proposal at a stockholders' meeting and should have been notified of dissenters' rights within 10 days after the exchange. The minority shareholders' mere failure to object to the exchange did not constitute a waiver of their dissenters' rights because they were never given notice of their right to dissent. Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998).

Sale of Minority Shares to Majority Shareholder or Corporation — Discount Inappropriate: A minority discount is inappropriate when calculating fair value for the sale of a minority shareholder's shares in a closely held corporation to a majority shareholder or to the corporation. A minority discount recognizes that controlling shares are worth more in the market than are noncontrolling shares. However, because there is no market involved in an inside transfer of shares, the minority discount should not be applied to an inside transfer. Rather, the minority shareholder is entitled to fair value for the shares, pursuant to this section. Fair value, as set out in 35-1-826, means the value of the shares immediately before the effectuation of the corporate action to which the dissenter objects. Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998), overruling McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239 (1996).

Declaratory Judgment Action by Ranching Corporation Not Action for Full Value of Minority Shares: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that she should have been paid the full value of her shares because certain actions of MRI were illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial. The Supreme Court held that the actions of MRI in paying outstanding corporate debts, ceasing payment of dividends, and leasing corporate property did not constitute illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial acts. The Supreme Court also held that the action brought by Sharon was not pursuant to 35-9-501 because it was brought as a declaratory judgment action by the corporation. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996), overruled, to the extent that a majority discount was held to be appropriate when calculating fair value for the sale of a minority shareholder's shares in a closely held corporation to a majority shareholder or to the corporation, in Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998).

Payment of Attorney Fees Not Required — Inclusion of Litigation Cost in Corporate Value Approved: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that the District Court erred in refusing to award her attorney fees and costs. The Supreme Court held that inasmuch as the action was a declaratory judgment action brought by the corporation, attorney fees were not payable. The Supreme Court noted that even if the action had been a minority shareholder action, award of attorney fees was discretionary. The District Court did not abuse its discretion because there was no "prevailing party" in the action. The Supreme Court also held that the District Court did not err in the calculation of MRI's litigation expenses for inclusion in the corporate assets prior to valuation of Sharon's shares because the expenses as valued by Sharon were not supported by the record. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996).

Dissolution and Liquidation

Part Case Notes

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Receivership Denied — Sale of Stock to Corporation Ordered — Value of Stock: Brother and sister, each owning 75 shares of family ranch incorporated into 1,000 shares, sued brother (owning 849 shares) and mother (owning 1 share) who lived on the ranch for receivership and sale of the ranch. Plaintiff brother settled for $20,000 and 20 acres of the ranch land in return for his shares. The court ordered sister to settle on the same terms. On remand for valuation of the corporation and its land, the lower court computed the net worth of the corporation, found the sister's shares worth $49,326.38, and ordered her to transfer her shares to the corporation for $9,326.38 and 20 acres of the ranch that would be worth $40,000. This was also overturned on appeal, the Supreme Court ordering that sister be paid $20,000 and 20 acres. Maddox v. Norman, 215 M 458, 697 P2d 1368, 42 St. Rep. 539 (1985).

Equitable Power of District Court to Order Stock Sale in Place of Dissolution: Where the plaintiff petitioned the District Court to appoint a receiver and dissolve a family ranching corporation in which she held 75 out of 1,000 outstanding shares, the District Court did not err in refusing to appoint the receiver and instead ordering the plaintiff to sell and the defendants to buy her corporate shares. Past decisions of the Montana Supreme Court show that the courts may use equitable powers in resolving disputes between shareholders, and decisions from other jurisdictions have recognized and approved the fashioning of equitable remedies less drastic than dissolution in cases where dissolution is not warranted. Because the facts show dissolution was not warranted in this case, the District Court's order was an appropriate equitable remedy. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983).

Under existing law corporations must file a statement of intent to dissolve and articles of dissolution. The two-step proviso, according to the comments, is "unnecessarily complex." Although a "statement of intent to dissolve" may arguably notify creditors of an impending dissolution, creditors are given substantial rights at §§14.06 and 14.07 [35-1-936 and 35-1-937].

The proposal also eliminates the requirement that the articles set forth a tally of the vote for the dissolution.

DECISIONS AFTER 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Dissolved Corporation's Officer's Use of Corporate Funds for Personal Expenses: Although the Montana Business Corporation Act does not specifically limit a director's use of corporate property to corporate purposes, the limitation is implied by the duties of good faith and care fundamental to a director's relationship to the corporation. Absent shareholders consent, defendant, who was president, director, and majority shareholder of a corporation, was not authorized to use its money for noncorporate purposes, and after it was dissolved, he was required to hold its assets in trust until creditor and shareholder debts were satisfied. Therefore, he was not authorized to write checks on the corporation's account to pay his personal debts to his attorney and former wife. He produced no evidence to support his claim that his need to pay child support to his wife and that his arrest for failure to do so would negatively affect the company's future and therefore justified the checks to her. Furthermore, it was not in the best interests of winding up the dissolved corporation. Moreover, it was not a defense that because of his ownership interest in the company he was spending his own money. The shareholders have a vested equitable interest in a dissolved corporation's property, but do not have a legal ownership interest in the property until the creditors are paid and the winding up is complete, at which point the shareholders have a legal ownership interest deriving from their right to a pro rata share of the assets remaining after the creditors are paid. Because the corporation was insolvent when the checks were written, there would have been no assets left for the shareholders had the creditors been paid off at the time that the checks were written. Therefore, it could not be said that defendant stole their money, and the theft conviction was set aside. St. v. Debus, 2002 MT 307, 313 M 57, 59 P3d 1154 (2002).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Payment of Director's Wage Claims by Directors: Stockholders adopted a plan of liquidation and dissolution which provided that after the sale of assets, the corporation would not engage in any business and the directors and officers would continue in office solely to wind up the corporate affairs. Almost 10 months later, the directors voted to grant a director's claim for wages not provided for prior to the dissolution. The liquidating directors improperly granted the claims, and the Supreme Court ordered disbursement of the corporate funds without regard to any such wage claims or attorney fees based on them. The grant of the wage claim was especially improper where, by a 2-to-1 vote, two directors holding 50% of the stock granted the wage claim of one of them and denied the similar wage claims of persons related to the third director, who held the other 50% of the stock. Schulz, Davis & Warren v. Marinkovich, 203 M 12, 661 P2d 5, 40 St. Rep. 262 (1983).

Marinkovich*, 203 M 12, 661 P2d 5, 40 St. Rep. 262 (1983).

Suits by Stockholders: Individuals cannot maintain an action for a corporation on the theory that they are the possible successors to the corporation's title upon the expiration of the corporate life. Malcom v. Stondall Land & Inv. Co., 129 M 142, 284 P2d 258 (1955).

Liabilities Accrued Before Dissolution: Section 15-1202, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), saves the remedy against a domestic corporation for liabilities accrued before dissolution. Mont. Valley Land Co. v. Bestul, 126 M 426, 253 P2d 325 (1953).

Ownership of Stock — Determination: In action to determine ownership of corporate stock of dissolved corporation, letter from one of organizers showing original distribution of stock was admissible in evidence. Henningsen v. Stromberg, 124 M 185, 221 P2d 438 (1950).

Action in Tort Against Statutory Trustees Triable to Jury: An action by a stockholder in a dissolved corporation against its statutory trustees in their individual capacity to recover damages for breach of obligation to wind up affairs, engaging in business in conjunction with a bank causing trust estate to become insolvent, was one in tort and as such triable to a jury, and not one in equity as for an accounting, triable without a jury, and necessity of introduction of books and records no obstacle. State ex rel. Word v. District Court, 112 M 458, 117 P2d 494 (1941).

Trustees Engaging in Business Instead of Winding Up Affairs — Stockholder's Right of Action: A stockholder of a dissolved corporation may maintain in his own behalf an action in tort for damages against its former directors as trustees, who instead of winding up corporate affairs as required by section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), engaged with a bank in a business enterprise with an alleged fraudulent design that brought on insolvency and depreciation of the corporation's stocks and bonds. Other stockholders and creditors need not be joined. Word v. Union Bank & Trust Co., 111 M 279, 107 P2d 1083 (1940).

Claim for Personal Services Rendered Prior to Dissolution: Court's decree, finding all allegations of the petition setting forth, inter alia, as required by section 15-1109, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that all claims and demands against the corporation had been satisfied and discharged, were true, was not res judicata as to a claim thereafter made for personal services rendered prior to dissolution, in view of the provision of section 15-1202, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that the dissolution shall not take away or impair any remedy given against the corporation for any liability previously incurred. In re Courtney Bros., Inc., 110 M 289, 100 P2d 471 (1940).

Purpose to Safeguard Rights of Creditors: The chief purpose of the provision in section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that directors of a dissolved corporation, acting as trustees of the creditors and stockholders thereof, shall settle corporate affairs and apply proceeds of liquidation to payment of debts, etc., is to safeguard the rights of creditors against attempts by the directors to cut off their claims by secret or summary proceedings and to dispose of corporate assets by an unauthorized conveyance. In re Courtney Bros., Inc., 110 M 289, 100 P2d 471 (1940).

Creditor's Remedy — Petition in Probate: A creditor of a dissolved corporation, who claimed that its directors had failed in their duty as trustees of its creditors and stockholders, filed a document denominated "Petition and Affidavit for Order to Show Cause", which prayed that the court require the directors to show cause why they should not proceed forthwith to the liquidation of their trust as such trustees. It was held on application for a Writ of Supervisory Control to review the court's action in dismissing the proceeding, that relator's remedy under section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is by petition in probate for appointment of the directors or some others as trustees to proceed under the statute. State ex rel. Stoddard v. District Court, 108 M 51, 88 P2d 34 (1939).

Applies Although No Assets: While there cannot be a trust without there being trust property in existence, section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), making the directors of a dissolved bank "trustees" with power to sue and be sued in behalf of the corporation and to settle and liquidate its affairs, applies even though there be no assets to be administered. Fitzpatrick v. Stevenson, 104 M 439, 67 P2d 310 (1937).

Failure to Allege "Other Persons Not Appointed": The complaint in an action against the trustees of a dissolved state bank to recover damages from the bank for breach of an option contract to purchase land held by the bank was not insufficient for failure to allege that other persons were not appointed in place of the directors of the bank to act as trustees to settle and liquidate its affairs, when dissolution was voluntary and not by judicial proceedings. Fitzpatrick v. Stevenson, 104 M 439, 67 P2d 310 (1937).

Right of Action Unimpaired By Dissolution: Under section 15-1202, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), dissolution of a corporation does not take away or impair a remedy given against it; hence the plaintiff in an action against the statutory trustees of a dissolved bank to fasten liability upon the bank for breach of contract was not deprived by the dissolution of his right to institute the action for the purpose of reducing his claim to judgment, taking his chances to realize thereon. Fitzpatrick v. Stevenson, 104 M 439, 67 P2d 310 (1937).

Voluntary Dissolution — Preference of Creditors: A bank going into voluntary liquidation may not prefer one creditor to another; and if its assets be distributed to others in preference to one who has a claim against it, he has a right of action. The complaint is not insufficient because it shows affirmatively that the corporation has no assets. Fitzpatrick v. Stevenson, 104 M 439, 67 P2d 310 (1937).

Property of Corporation Subject to Attachment or Levy of Execution: It is the public policy of this state that the property of a dissolved corporation, other than a banking corporation, while being administered by its directors as trustee for the creditors and stockholders under section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is subject to attachment or levy of execution in the same manner and in the same cases where those writs would run against the property of the corporation itself. Mieyr v. Fed. Sur. Co. of Davenport, Iowa, 97 M 503, 34 P2d 982 (1934), affirmed in Clark v. Williard, 294 US 211 (1935).

Duties of Statutory Trustees: Under section 15-1102, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), statutory trustees of a defunct corporation were required to settle and liquidate its affairs. In an action of debt against such trustees, the facts disclose that defendants had not completed their duties as trustees and that a demurrer to their plea in bar was properly sustained. Gilna v. Barker, 78 M 357, 254 P 174 (1927), explained in Clark v. Williard, 292 US 112 (1934).

Failure to Observe Statutory Requirements: After a corporation has come into existence by virtue of a statute relative to the formation of corporations, failure to observe the requirements of other statutes, though rendering the corporate franchise subject to forfeiture under section 15-808, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), by affirmative action by the state, does not ipso facto work a dissolution of it or lay its corporate capacity open to attack by a private citizen in a controversy between him and the corporation. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

Receivership Unnecessary: A receiver should not be appointed to take charge of a building and loan company, when the directors are acting as trustees to wind up its affairs after its charter has expired, unless it appears that the party complaining has been or is about to be injured by unwarranted procedure on the part of such trustees. Ferrell v. Evans, 25 M 444, 65 P 714 (1901), explained in Clark v. Williard, 292 US 112 (1934).

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-906 [now repealed], but contains several material changes. Only subsection (b) [subsection (2) of this section] is from the RMBCA.

This provision changes the law as follows:

(1) The existing statute may not allow claims arising after dissolution to be made against the corporation. As a result if a defective product is manufactured before dissolution, but the injury occurs after dissolution, the plaintiff would have two potential problems recovering against the corporation or its assets: (a) the claim arguably did not arise before dissolution and (b) the 5 year limitation period in §35-1-930 [now repealed] may have run, even though the tort limitation period (which may have commenced at the date of discovery of the negligence or defect) has not run. See, e.g. Blankenship v. Demmler Manufacturing Co., 89 Ill. App. 3d 569, 411 N.E.2d 1153 (1980). The problem is addressed by (a) specifically allowing claims accruing after the date of dissolution and (b) removing the 5 year limitation period. Of course, the applicable state law statute of limitation period for the claim made (e.g., contract or tort statute of limitations) would still apply. In eliminating a separate statutory limitation period from the corporate code, Montana joins the ranks of twelve other jurisdictions (see 3 Model Business Corporation Act 1505 (1989)).

The issue of whether to establish a separate limitation period for dissolved corporations is a difficult one. On the one hand, corporations and shareholders have an interest in protection from extended litigation after dissolution. Opting for no separate limitation period impairs the ability of the corporation to wind up its affairs and forces shareholders who receive assets to hold them subject to the claim of creditors. On the other hand, a short limitation period impairs the rights of injured parties for injuries arising before dissolution (or after dissolution if a product was manufactured before dissolution).

The committee carefully weighed these competing considerations. It was decided that the tort, contract and other applicable statutes of limitations (which are not changed by this legislation) were sufficient to protect the interest of the corporation in avoiding extended litigation after dissolution. Further, the committee was convinced that injured parties should not have different rights to pursue the assets of a dissolved business causing injury, depending on whether that business happened to be a proprietorship, partnership or corporation.

Finally, Montana law evidences a strong policy to insure that creditors of a corporation (including injured plaintiffs) are paid before shareholders of a corporation. Section 14.07(c) [subsection (3) of this section] is consistent with that policy.

(2) Subsection (b) [subsection (2) of this section] codifies the common law trust fund doctrine that provides that the property of a corporation is considered a trust fund for the payment of corporate debts. As such, shareholders take assets upon dissolution subject to the claims of creditors. Codifying this doctrine adds certainty to the law.

(3) Subsection (c) [subsection (3) of this section] codifies the holding in North American Asbestos Corp. v. Superior Court, 180 Cal. App.3d 902, 225 Cal. 877 (1986). This case holds that when the corporate code of the state of incorporation regarding limitation periods for claims against dissolved corporations differs from the corporate code in the jurisdiction where a claim arises, the law of the jurisdiction where the claim arises applies.

This section accomplishes the following objectives:

(a) It allows plaintiffs injured in Montana to have the same rights with respect to corporate limitation periods against foreign corporations as it has against domestic corporations. One's rights should not depend on the state of incorporation of the defendant.

(b) It effectuates Montana's strong policy that corporations doing business in this state must pay their creditors (including injured plaintiffs) before the shareholders enjoy distributions or liquidations.

(c) It protects codefendants, by helping assure that codefendants jointly liable for damages are not required to pay the share of damages attributable to those dissolved corporations incorporated in a state with a short limitation period for dissolved corporations.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Attachment of Conditions Not Necessarily Indicative of Oppression — Possible Future Oppression Insufficient to Warrant Liquidation: The District Court found that a corporate director's negotiation tactics were oppressive and threatening and that he unfairly used his position to influence negotiations sufficient to trigger this section. His offer, however, was never accepted. Reversing, the Supreme Court found that the director's actions were more consistent with negotiation tactics than oppressive actions. Merely because he attached conditions to his offer did not necessarily mean his actions were oppressive. If the director had carried through on his threats, a cause of action for oppression may have arisen; however, the mere possibility of future oppressive actions is not sufficient to invoke the liquidation provisions of this section. Citing Alaska Plastics, Inc. v. Coppock, 621 P2d 270 (Alaska 1980), the court found no authority that would allow specific performance on the basis of an unaccepted offer, particularly on terms totally different from those offered. Such a rule would place a court in an impossible position of making and enforcing contracts between unwilling parties. Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Action Based on Misapplication or Waste as Derivative in Nature: An action by a shareholder to liquidate a corporation under 35-1-921(1)(a)(iv) (now repealed) because corporate assets are being misapplied or wasted is based on an injury to the corporation rather than an injury to an individual shareholder and may therefore be maintained only as a derivative shareholder action. Sax v. World Wide Press, Inc., 809 F2d 610 (1987).

Personal Injury as Prerequisite to Maintaining Direct Shareholder Action: A direct shareholder action to liquidate a corporation is permitted by 35-1-921(1)(a)(ii) (now repealed), but the shareholder must allege and prove that the acts of the directors alleged to be illegal, oppressive, or fraudulent injured him personally rather than the corporation. Absent such an allegation of personal injury, the suit may be maintained only as a derivative action. Sax v. World Wide Press, Inc., 809 F2d 610 (1987).

Receivership Denied — Sale of Stock to Corporation Ordered — Value of Stock: Brother and sister, each owning 75 shares of family ranch incorporated into 1,000 shares, sued brother (owning 849 shares) and mother (owning 1 share) who lived on the ranch for receivership and sale of the ranch. Plaintiff brother settled for $20,000 and 20 acres of the ranch land in return for his shares. The court ordered sister to settle on the same terms. On remand for valuation of the corporation and its land, the lower court computed the net worth of the corporation, found the sister's shares worth $49,326.38, and ordered her to transfer her shares to the corporation for $9,326.38 and 20 acres of the ranch that would be worth $40,000. This was also overturned on appeal, the Supreme Court ordering that sister be paid $20,000 and 20 acres. Maddox v. Norman, 215 M 458, 697 P2d 1368, 42 St. Rep. 539 (1985).

Error to Order Liquidation of Family Corporation in Marital Property Disposition Decree: The court agreed with husband's contention that the trial court erred in ordering contingent liquidation of a family corporation for the enforcement and security of the wife's property division if the husband failed to make installment payments as ordered. The corporation was not a party, and thus the court had no jurisdiction over its property. Section 35-1-921 (now repealed) does not include dissolution of a corporation for nonpayment of marital obligations by one of the corporation's stockholders. However, the court remanded the case, since the trial court does have power to secure a marital settlement by granting a security interest in stock or such further security arrangements necessary to enforce the decree. In re Marriage of Buxbaum, 214 M 1, 692 P2d 411, 41 St. Rep. 2243 (1984).

Liquidation Denied Owner of 13.33 Percent of Ranch — Desire for Quick Money Inadequate Cause for Liquidation: Where the plaintiff petitioned for the appointment of a receiver and liquidation of a ranching corporation in which she owned 75 of 1,000 outstanding shares, the District Court did not err in refusing to appoint a receiver, since the evidence showed the corporation was solvent, that other shareholders who had worked to improve the ranch would be harmed by liquidation, and that the plaintiff only wanted money out of the corporation quickly in exchange for her shares. Because the comments to 35-1-921 (now repealed) indicated that the power to appoint a receiver is discretionary and that such a remedy is an extraordinary step reserved for cases in which no other remedy will provide an adequate solution, the District Court's decision will not be disturbed as it was not clearly erroneous under the circumstances. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983).

Oppression — Case-by-Case Analysis — Sophistication of Parties: Oppression, being a visible departure from the standards of fair dealing, must be examined on a case-by-case basis. The District Court's determination that defendants committed no oppression is supported by credible evidence, including the fact that approximately 20 businessmen with extensive financial and investment backgrounds were involved, and thus the District Court's determination will not be overturned. Ski Roundtop, Inc. v. Hall, 202 M 260, 658 P2d 1071, 40 St. Rep. 74 (1983).

Oppression Through Attempt to "Squeeze Out" a Shareholder: Although a corporation was in a position to declare dividends, the board of directors refused to so declare in an attempt to "squeeze out" the plaintiff shareholder. This, in addition to many other acts, constituted evidence of oppressive conduct. Oppression is to be defined in terms of the reasonable expectations of minority shareholders in light of the particular circumstances of each case. Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch Co., 198 M 201, 645 P2d 929, 39 St. Rep. 862 (1982).

Additional Requirements for Deadlock — Equitable Grounds: In addition to the statutory requirements for deadlock, there is a further burden of proving equitable grounds for dissolution of a corporation. The trial court should consider the seriousness of the deadlock, whether the deadlock prevents a profitable operation of the corporation, and the benefit or detriment to the shareholders and the public if the corporation is dissolved. Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch Co., 198 M 201, 645 P2d 929, 39 St. Rep. 862 (1982).

Corporate Liquidation — Records of Related Family Corporations Relevant: In an action for liquidation of a corporation because of oppression and shareholder deadlock, corporate minutes and financial statements of two separate but closely related family corporations were relevant and therefore admissible. Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch Co., 198 M 201, 645 P2d 929, 39 St. Rep. 862 (1982).

Probate Distribution — Not Res Judicata for Corporate Liquidation: In a previous probate proceeding, the plaintiff, as one of several legatees of a corporation, moved to have the corporation liquidated and distributed in cash or assets. The District Court, in an interpretation of the will, denied the motion and ordered distribution to be made "in kind". This ruling was not res judicata in a subsequent action for liquidation of the corporation based on oppression and shareholder deadlock. Although seeking the same relief, the two actions rested on a different set of facts. Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch Co., 198 M 201, 645 P2d 929, 39 St. Rep. 862 (1982).

Oppression in Closely Held Family Corporation — Brother Overreaching as to Deceased Brother's Wife — Heir: Plaintiff's husband and defendant were brothers and partners in a ranching operation, although each owned the land individually. Plaintiff's husband died and defendant was named executor. A corporation was formed to operate the ranch on May 1, 1973. Both parties transferred all assets to the corporation. Defendant's family got 364 more shares than plaintiff, and defendant was named president of the corporation. Restrictions were placed on the valuation and transfer of stock. On May 29, 1975, plaintiff consulted her own attorney and for the first time fully realized her position. All corporate votes became deadlocked. On April 29, 1977, plaintiff filed suit to dissolve the corporation, alleging fraud and oppressive conduct by defendant and mistake at the formation. The court found that defendant occupied a position of trust and confidence in relation to plaintiff. He was executor of her husband's estate and partner to her husband at the date of death; that status imposed on defendant the duties of a trustee. Plaintiff sought liquidation of the corporation on the grounds of oppression in that defendant had fixed the stock valuation at which plaintiff could sell and defeated plaintiff's motion to create an office giving plaintiff power equal to defendant. Oppression may be more easily found in a closely held family corporation than in a larger public corporation. The trial court properly allowed corporate liquidation if the parties are unable to agree upon property division and transfer. Skierka v. Skierka Bros., Inc., 192 M 505, 629 P2d 214, 38 St. Rep. 754 (1981).

Expiration of Corporation's Term of Existence — Receivership Unnecessary: The dissolution of a corporation by the expiration of its term of existence does not authorize a court to take its property from trustees, not charged with wrongdoing, and appoint a receiver. Merges v. Altenbrand, 45 M 355, 123 P 21 (1912).

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is from the former South Carolina Code. There are similar provisions in Illinois, Minnesota, New Jersey, North Carolina, California, Connecticut, Maryland, New York and Rhode Island.

This provision properly recognized that the liquidation remedy is a draconian remedy. It allows a minority shareholder to hold a sword over the head of the majority. In the case of Maddox v. Norman, 669 P.2d 230 (1983), the Montana Supreme Court recognized this problem and fashioned a less drastic remedy — a compelled share purchase. It held it had the inherent power to shape the appropriate equitable remedy. See Bahls, "Resolving Shareholder Dissension: Selection of the Appropriate Equitable Remedy," 15 J. Corp. Law 285 (1990). Scholarly comment would agree that the Maddox case was properly decided. Less drastic remedies often allow all shareholders to maximize value. As such, we recommend the codification of Maddox by adopting the above language.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Equitable Power of District Court to Order Stock Sale in Place of Dissolution: Where the plaintiff petitioned the District Court to appoint a receiver and dissolve a family ranching corporation in which she held 75 out of 1,000 outstanding shares, the District Court did not err in refusing to appoint the receiver and instead ordering the plaintiff to sell and the defendants to buy her corporate shares. Past decisions of the Montana Supreme Court show that the courts may use equitable powers in resolving disputes between shareholders, and decisions from other jurisdictions have recognized and approved the fashioning of equitable remedies less drastic than dissolution in cases where dissolution is not warranted. Because the facts show dissolution was not warranted in this case, the District Court's order was an appropriate equitable remedy. Maddox v. Norman, 206 M 1, 669 P2d 230, 40 St. Rep. 1463 (1983), distinguished in Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Probate Distribution — Not Res Judicata for Corporate Liquidation: In a previous probate proceeding, the plaintiff, as one of several legatees of a corporation, moved to have the corporation liquidated and distributed in cash or assets. The District Court, in an interpretation of the will, denied the motion and ordered distribution to be made "in kind". This ruling was not res judicata in a subsequent action for liquidation of the corporation based on oppression and shareholder deadlock. Although seeking the same relief, the two actions rested on a different set of facts. Fox v. 7L Bar Ranch Co., 198 M 201, 645 P2d 929, 39 St. Rep. 862 (1982).

Appeal From Order Appointing Receiver: One of five statutory trustees in charge of the affairs of a dissolved corporation may not prosecute an appeal to the Supreme Court from an order appointing a receiver for the corporation against the wishes of his cotrustees, irrespective of whether unit or majority rule of action controls under certain statutes. Union Bank & Trust Co. of Helena v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

GENERAL COMMENTS

[Source: see chapter compiler's comments]

This section simply incorporates into the corporate dissolution statutes a requirement that all appropriate taxes have been paid prior to the actual dissolution of a corporation by requiring that the corporation obtain a tax clearance certificate. No change from [pre-1981] law.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 69 at end of second sentence substituted "a dissolution or withdrawal certificate issued pursuant to 15-31-552(1) verifying that the corporation has filed all applicable returns and has paid all taxes owing the state up to the date of the request for dissolution or withdrawal" for "a certificate to the effect the department of revenue is satisfied from the available evidence that all taxes imposed by Title 15 have been paid"; in third sentence at beginning substituted "the dissolution or withdrawal certificate or tax clearance certificate" for "the certificate" and at end inserted "including taxes, penalties, or interest incurred after the date of dissolution"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 15, 1999.

1985 Amendment: In first sentence near middle, after "brought by the", substituted "secretary of state" for "attorney general".

1981 Amendment: Substituted "application for a certificate of withdrawal" for "certificate of surrender".

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds with MCA §§35-1-1001 and 35-1-1002 [both repealed]. The language of the RMBCA, in subsection (b)(9) [subsection (2)(i) of this section] has been revised. The RMBCA provides "owing, without more, real or personal property." This language is too ambiguous. Instead, the language of (b)(9) [subsection (2)(i) of this section] is based on Vermont Statutes, Title 11 §2101(a).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 363 inserted (4) providing that, except for goods or services prepared out of state for delivery or use in this state, a foreign corporation transacts business when it enters into a contract with the state or one of its political subdivisions and needs a certificate of authority to transact business, requiring the secretary of state to so notify the contracting parties, giving the foreign corporation 30 days from the date of the notice to obtain a certificate, and prohibiting the voiding of an existing contract prior to the expiration of the 30 days. Amendment effective April 20, 1999.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Certificate of Authority Not Required to Execute Foreclosure: When defendants defaulted on a mortgage loan, the bank attempted to collect the loan through foreclosure. Defendants alleged that as a foreign corporation, the bank was required to obtain a certificate of authority before conducting business in the state. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the District Court ruling, holding that a certificate of authority was not needed to execute a foreclosure, regardless of whether the bank was a foreign corporation. Farm Credit Bank of Spokane v. Fulbright, 274 M 261, 907 P2d 956, 52 St. Rep. 1219 (1995).

Interstate Commerce:

The activities of a foreign corporation engaged in constructing a motel and a foreign corporation furnishing material for the project were not incidental to interstate commerce, and mechanics' liens (now construction liens) were unenforceable under section 15-1703, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), when failure of principal contractor and materialman to qualify to do business in Montana in violation of section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), made principal contract unenforceable under section 15-1703, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Greene Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Morris, 144 M 234, 395 P2d 252 (1964).

Activities of a foreign corporation in Montana that are in interstate commerce are not subject to the provisions of section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Minnehoma Fin. Co. v. Van Oosten, 198 F. Supp. 200 (D.C. Mont. 1961); Union Interchange, Inc. v. Parker, 138 M 348, 357 P2d 339 (1960).

Financing Mobile Homes — Business by Mail With Dealers Only — Not Doing Business: A corporation engaged in financing mobile homes was not doing business in the state of Montana since there was no evidence that it had any office, place of business, or resident agents or employees in Montana; it did not deal directly with any customers or purchasers, but solely with dealers; and this business was conducted by mail pursuant to an agreement reciting that it was made and entered into in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Minnehoma Fin. Co. v. Van Oosten, 198 F. Supp. 200 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Real Estate Transactions as Doing Business — Factual Determination: The determination whether plaintiff was doing business in Montana within the purview of section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), or was carrying on the business of a real estate broker within the purview of Title 37, ch. 51, was a question of law under 25-7-102 and 26-1-201. Union Interchange, Inc. v. Parker, 138 M 348, 357 P2d 339 (1960), explained in Minnehoma Fin. Co. v. Van Oosten, 198 F. Supp. 200 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Status of a Foreign Corporation:

The fact that corporation does not comply with the laws of Montana and has ceased to do business does not prevent it from redeeming its property sold at delinquent tax sale. Stensvad v. Ottman, 123 M 158, 208 P2d 507 (1949).

A foreign corporation has no actual existence outside the state of its creation and may do business in a sister state only by reason of comity between states; it is not a "person" within the privilege and immunity clause of the federal Constitution, and while it is considered a person or citizen within its equal protection clause, it cannot invoke that clause in another state until it has been duly admitted to do business therein. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. R.R. v. Harmon, 89 M 1, 295 P 762 (1931).

Section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), gave to foreign corporations the right to do business in this state upon their filing a copy of their charter and designating an agent and the filing of his consent to act, etc.; that right is a mere license to engage in the business in this state which its charter authorizes it to engage in and is based upon comity between the states. Helena Power Transmission Co. v. Spratt, 35 M 108, 88 P 773 (1907).

Suit in Justice's Court: In the absence of statute giving foreign corporations a domestic residence, they remain nonresidents of the state and may under Title 25, ch. 31, part 2, be sued in a Justice's Court in any township of the state. Pue v. N. Pac. Ry., 78 M 40, 252 P 313 (1926).

Isolated Transactions by Foreign Corporation With Montana Corporation for Its Use Not Doing Business: Isolated transactions, whereby a foreign corporation sells goods manufactured in another state and shipped into Montana by such corporation for use or installation, does not constitute the doing of business in this state within the meaning of sections 15-1701 and 15-1703, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), prescribing the conditions under which foreign corporations may do business in the state. State ex rel. Am. Laundry Mach. Co. v. District Court, 98 M 278, 41 P2d 26 (1934); Gen. Fire Extinguisher Co. v. NW. Auto Supply Co., 65 M 371, 211 P 308 (1922), distinguished in Greene Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Morris, 144 M 234, 395 P2d 252 (1964).

Single Contract or Purchase Not Doing Business: Making a single contract or purchase does not constitute doing business in this state within the meaning of sections 15-1701 and 15-1703, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Dover Lumber Co. v. Whitcomb, 54 M 141, 168 P 947 (1917); Uihlein v. Caplice Commercial Co., 39 M 327, 102 P 564 (1909).

Foreign Corporation's Shipping of Beer Into State and Sale to Distributor Not Doing Business: The shipping of beer into the state by a foreign corporation and selling the same to distributing agent did not constitute a carrying on of business in the state within the meaning of section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), prescribing requirements for the doing of business in Montana by foreign corporations. Uihlein v. Caplice Commercial Co., 39 M 327, 102 P 564 (1909).

Right to Sue — Issue Raised by Answer: Since it is unnecessary for a foreign corporation plaintiff, bringing action on a domestic contract, to allege in its complaint that it complied with the statutes of the state entitling it to do business therein, the question of its noncompliance therewith can only be raised by answer. Am. Hand-Sewed Shoe Co. v. O'Rourke, 23 M 530, 59 P 910 (1900).

Right to Sue Before Filing Charter: When bringing an action based on a domestic contract, it is not necessary for a foreign corporation plaintiff to allege that it has complied with the statutory conditions precedent to doing business in the state when the petition shows facts making the transaction prima facie interstate commerce. Zion Co-op Mercantile Ass'n v. Mayo, 22 M 100, 55 P 915 (1899). See Am. Hand-Sewed Shoe Co. v. O'Rourke, 23 M 530, 59 P 910 (1900); Leggat v. Gerrick, 35 M 91, 88 P 788 (1907); Wilson v. Yegen Bros., 38 M 504, 100 P 613 (1909).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Suit Filed by Unauthorized Foreign Corporation Tolls Statute of Limitations: A foreign corporation with an expired certificate of authority to do business in Montana filed suit for legal malpractice. The suit was dismissed due to the lapsed certificate. When the corporation refiled the lawsuit, defendants argued that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. Section 35-1-1004 (now repealed) merely suspends rather than bars further legal proceedings until a certificate is obtained. The Supreme Court held that the corporation could file a lawsuit even though its certificate was expired and the filing had tolled the statute of limitations. Watson & Associates, Inc. v. Green, MacDonald, & Kirscher, 253 M 291, 833 P2d 199, 49 St. Rep. 550 (1992).

Foreign Corporation Transacting Business Without Certificate — No Authority to Bring Suit: In an action by an out-of-state corporation against Montana parties for interference with a contract, the foreign corporation was without authority to bring suit in Montana because it was a foreign corporation transacting business in the state without a certificate of authority. The corporation received a certificate more than 10 years ago, but it was suspended in 1978. Another company incorporated by the same principals presently holds a valid certificate of authority in this state, but the record contains no evidence that the two businesses have been merged. If the second foreign corporation is the real party in interest, it should have brought suit in its own name. Under 30-13-216, a corporation acting under an assumed name has no right of access to state courts. Mktg. Specialists, Inc. v. Serv. Mktg. of Mont., Inc., 214 M 377, 693 P2d 540, 42 St. Rep. 32 (1985).

Corporation Not Authorized to Do Business in Montana — Counterclaim Allowed:

A nonresident corporate defendant that does not have a certificate of authority to do business in Montana is entitled to assert a compulsory counterclaim in an action filed against it. Doll v. Major Muffler Centers, Inc., 208 M 401, 687 P2d 48, 41 St. Rep. 429 (1984).

The plaintiff argued that the defendant corporation cannot assert its counterclaim because it is not authorized to do business in Montana. The defendant, however, is merely defending the action brought against it by the plaintiff, which it has a right to do under 35-1-1004 (now repealed). The counterclaim is just one aspect of the defense which the defendant is entitled to raise and can therefore be brought. Wortman v. Griff, 200 M 528, 651 P2d 998, 39 St. Rep. 1916 (1982).

Foreign Corporation Improperly Registered — May Defend Suit: The records of the Secretary of State showed that Buttrey Food, Inc. is an Illinois corporation. In the defense of a suit, Buttrey Food designated itself as a New York corporation. Appellant contends that because Buttrey neglected to notify the Secretary of State of the corporate change and lacked a valid certificate of authority to transact business in this state, a default judgment should have been entered against Buttrey. Section 35-1-1004 (now repealed) prohibits a foreign corporation who has not obtained a certificate of authority from maintaining a suit in this state. Buttrey however is not seeking to maintain a suit; it is merely defending an action which it is permitted to do even if improperly registered. Duran v. Buttrey Food, Inc., 189 M 381, 616 P2d 327 (1980).

Foreign Corporation No Longer Admitted: Insurance company no longer authorized to transact business in Montana was able to maintain suit in equity enjoining its conservation agent, whose duties were to service present policyholders, from using list of policyholders to solicit business for another insurance company who subsequently employed him as sales manager. Empire Life Ins. Co. of Am. v. Sorenson, 347 F. Supp. 987 (D.C. Mont. 1972).

License Tax Delinquency: Neither foreign corporation which created and assigned accounts receivable before complying with laws of state nor foreign corporation to which accounts receivable were assigned had right of enforcement until assignor paid license taxes under former statute providing that no contract of a foreign corporation was enforceable during the period of delinquency in payment of its fees and licenses, and although a subsequent compliance with statute would remove bar of nonenforceability, removal would not relate back to date of original delinquency and would not bar superior rights of others that accrued during period of delinquency. Manufacturers Acceptance Corp. v. Krsul, 151 M 28, 438 P2d 667 (1968).

Furnishing Material for Construction Project: The activities of a foreign corporation engaged in constructing a motel and a foreign corporation furnishing material for the project were not incidental to interstate commerce, and mechanics' liens (now construction liens) were unenforceable where failure of principal contractor and materialman to qualify to do business in Montana in violation of section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), made principal contract unenforceable. Greene Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Morris, 144 M 234, 395 P2d 252 (1964).

Enforcement of Guaranties: A corporation engaged in financing mobile homes, who was not doing business in the state of Montana, could enforce guaranties of conditional sales contracts assigned to it by a mobile home dealer in Montana. Minnehoma Fin. Co. v. Van Oosten, 198 F. Supp. 200 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Enforcement of Contract: When foreign corporation for 5 years conducted business without qualifying, paid no corporation license tax, and filed no annual report, the foreign corporation could not enforce a contract made during those 5 years. Later compliance is not sufficient to remove the bar of the statute. Hutterian Brethren of Wolf Creek v. Haas, 116 F. Supp. 37 (D.C. Mont. 1953). See also Mktg. Specialists, Inc. v. Serv. Mktg. of Mont., Inc., 214 M 377, 693 P2d 540, 42 St. Rep. 32 (1985).

Right to Sue Before Filing Charter:

In an action which is brought to recover the value of goods sold in this state and in which the answer alleges and the reply admits that the plaintiff is a foreign corporation and at and before the time of the sale was engaged in the business of selling goods, wares, and merchandise in the state of Montana and that plaintiff had never complied with the laws of the state relating to foreign corporations, it is necessary for plaintiff to allege facts which show that the sale and delivery of the goods were of the nature of interstate commerce; and if he fails so to allege, a motion for judgment on the pleadings is properly granted. Kent & Stanley Co. v. Tuttle, 20 M 203, 50 P 559 (1897). See Zion Co-op Mercantile Ass'n v. Mayo, 22 M 100, 55 P 915 (1899).

The failure of a foreign corporation to file a copy of its charter or certificate of incorporation with the Secretary of the Territory and in the recorder's office of the county wherein it intended to transact business, under section 442, 5th Div. Comp. Stat. 1887, did not deprive it of the right to sue in the courts of the territory, since the cause of action was not based upon any act or contract of the corporation in the conduct of its business. Powder River Cattle Co. v. Comm'rs of Custer County, 9 M 145, 22 P 383 (1889).

Suit Against Foreign Corporation Before Charter Filed: Noncompliance by a foreign corporation with a statute requiring the filing by such corporation of a copy of its charter or certificate with the county recorder, and subjecting it to a penalty and rendering void all its acts and contracts during the period it neglects to do so, is of no avail to a plaintiff seeking to enjoin an act of such corporation where the complaint fails to state a cause of action. Hershfield v. Rocky Mtn. Bell Tel. Co., 12 M 102, 29 P 883 (1892).

Official Comments: Corresponds generally to MCA §§35-1-1008 and 35-1-1009 [both repealed]. Several of the items required on the application in MCA §35-1-1008 [now repealed] are deleted for these reasons:

Subsection	Reason for deletion
b - name requirements	covered in §15.06 [35-1-1031]
h - number of shares authorized	no longer relevant for franchise or license tax requirement in RMBCA
i - number of shares issued	no longer relevant for franchise or license tax requirement in RMBCA
j - miscellaneous information for fee determination	no longer relevant for franchise or license tax requirement in RMBCA

Subsection (b)(7) [evidently this was intended to refer to (a)(7), now subsection (1)(g) of this section] is an addition to the RMBCA, in order to provide information to state regulators about the activities of corporations in the state subject to regulation.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Venue: The Montana Business Corporation Act does not grant a foreign corporation residency in a particular county of this state for venue purposes. Foley v. Gen. Motors Corp., 159 M 469, 499 P2d 774 (1972).

Citizenship of Qualifying Corporation: A U.S. District Court in Montana had jurisdiction of an action by a Montana resident against a joint venture composed of a New Jersey and an Arizona corporation, each qualified to do business in Montana under sections 15-1701 through 15-1713, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), since neither corporation became a citizen of Montana by qualifying to do business and consenting to be sued in Montana. Carson Constr. Co. v. Fuller-Webb Constr., 198 F. Supp. 464 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Suit on Causes of Action Arising Outside Montana: A Minnesota corporation complying with section 15-1701, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), by filing certificate consenting to be sued in courts of Montana on causes of action arising in Montana did not thereby consent to be sued in Montana U.S. District Court by inhabitant of Illinois on cause of action arising in Minnesota so as to "waive" privilege in actions in which jurisdiction is based on diversity of citizenship of being sued only in district in which such corporation or plaintiff was a resident (prior to enactment of 28 U.S.C. §1391 by act June 25, 1948, Ch. 646, 62 Stat. 869). N. Butte Min. Co. v. Tripp, 128 F2d 588 (9th Cir. 1942).

Attachment Before Foreign Liquidator Has Taken Possession of Property: In action by liquidator of foreign corporation attacking attachment of corporation's property in Montana to satisfy Montana judgment which was secured after dissolution of corporation in New York, decisions of Supreme Court of Montana construing local constitution and statutes, that local creditor of corporation may protect himself by attachment of corporation's property before foreign liquidator has taken possession of property, were binding on U.S. District Court. Van Schaick v. Parsons, 11 F. Supp. 654 (D.C. Mont. 1935).

Dissolution — Liabilities Not Extinguished: Under section 15-1202, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), declaring that dissolution of a domestic corporation did not take away or impair any remedy given against it for a liability previously incurred, and section 15-1709, R.C.M. 1947

(now repealed), providing that foreign corporations doing business in the state were subject to all the liabilities and restrictions imposed upon domestic corporations, and Art. XV, sec. 11, 1889 Mont. Const., saying that no foreign corporation shall enjoy any greater rights or privileges in the state than those created under its laws, an action against an Iowa surety company pending in a state court did not abate upon its dissolution in Iowa and a judgment obtained after decree of dissolution was valid. Mieyr v. Fed. Sur. Co. of Davenport, Iowa, 94 M 508, 23 P2d 959 (1933), reversed on other grounds in Clark v. Williard, 292 US 112 (1934).

Jurisdiction of District Court: District Court has jurisdiction under resident stockholders' bill against nonresident directors and foreign corporation, all of whose property, except books and office furniture, is within state, to conserve through receivership corporation's business and assets from looting by nonresident directors. Shoemaker v. Merrill Mortuaries, 2 F. Supp. 672 (D.C. Mont. 1933).

Taxation — Corporations — "Franchise" — When Taxable: The franchise which was made taxable by Art. XII, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const., was not the bare right conferred upon corporations to do business in the state but that special privilege, not enjoyed by citizens generally, which represents something out of which the tax may be realized by forced sale, if necessary, as, for instance, the franchise of street railway, telephone and telegraph, gas, and water companies; hence the franchise of an express company, under which it enjoys no such special privilege, is not subject to taxation. Wells Fargo & Co. v. Harrington, 54 M 235, 169 P 463 (1917).

Eminent Domain: By section 15-1708, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the Legislature intended to give foreign corporations the same power to exercise eminent domain as domestic corporations enjoy. Spratt v. Helena Power Transmission Co., 37 M 60, 94 P 631 (1908).

Attorney General's Opinions

Collection of Delinquent Income Taxes of Nonresidents Employed by Foreign Corporation Doing Business in Montana: The salaries or wages of nonresidents employed by a foreign corporation doing business in Montana may be considered to be property within the state for the purpose of levying a warrant for distraint for unpaid state income taxes. Requiring the foreign corporation to honor the levy does not offend the notions of "fair play and substantial justice" which govern assertions of both jurisdiction in personam and jurisdiction in rem. 41 A.G. Op. 9 (1985).

Levy on Wages of Nonresidents Employed by Foreign Corporation: The Department of Revenue has authority to collect delinquent income taxes by levying on wages of nonresidents employed by a foreign corporation doing business in Montana. 41 A.G. Op. 9 (1985).

ABA COMMENTS TO MODEL BUSINESS CORPORATION ACT (1960)

[This section] provides for the appointment of an agent by a foreign corporation authorized to transact business in the state and for service on the secretary of state as agent in any case where the required agent is not appointed or cannot be found. It does not limit or affect the right to serve process upon a foreign corporation in any other manner now or hereafter permitted by law. The effect of [this section] is to leave to other statutes or to the common law the question of service of process on foreign corporations which do not qualify to transact business in the state.

Scattered through the non-corporation statutes of some jurisdictions are provisions for serving unqualified foreign corporations under certain circumstances.

Initially, the courts restricted severely the amenability of foreign corporations to process. Consent to service or presence within the jurisdiction was required. Formal qualification of the foreign corporation accompanied by designation of an agent for service of process supplied such requisites. The major problem was with respect to the foreign corporation which had not formally qualified.

In recent years, the amenability of unqualified foreign corporations to process, particularly on causes of action arising in the state or based on contracts made with a resident of the state, has been materially extended both by state statutes and by court decisions.

A state today may constitutionally permit service of process on a state officer as agent of a foreign corporation, or by mail on a foreign corporation, in case (a) the suit is on a contract made in the state, (b) the suit is on a tort committed in the state or (c) the cause of action otherwise arises in the state or is in favor of a resident and the foreign corporation has had some contact with the state. Process constitutionally may be served in causes of action not arising in the state, if the state statute so provides, if there has been any more than irregular and casual activity within the state.

Procedural due process, of course, requires reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard.

GENERAL COMMENTS

[Source: see chapter compiler's comments]

Model Act section 115 [1977] sets forth a detailed procedure for the service of process upon foreign corporations. [This section] does not incorporate this section of the Model Act as the necessary detail is contained in the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure. No change from [pre-1981] law.

Effect of Suspension on Statute of Limitations: A Statute of Limitation against a foreign corporation is not tolled by the suspension of the corporation's right to do business within the state since a person with a claim against the corporation could get service of process that would support a personal judgment under section 93-3007, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and under section 93-3011, R.C.M. 1947 (superseded by Rule 4D, M.R.Civ.P., pursuant to Supreme Court Order 10750). *Mont. 1997 Amendment: Chapter 139 deleted former (2) that read: "Each foreign corporation shall also include a statement, expressed in dollars, of the value of all the property owned by the corporation, wherever located, and the value of the property of the corporation located within Montana and a statement, expressed in dollars, of the gross amount of business transacted by the corporation for the year ending December 31 preceding the date provided in this section for the filing of the report and the gross amount of business transacted by the corporation at or from places of business in Montana. If on December 31 preceding the time provided in this section for the filing of the report the corporation had not been authorized to transact business in Montana for 1 year, the statement with respect to business transacted must be furnished for the period between the date of its authorization to transact business in Montana and December 31. If all the property of the corporation is located in Montana and all of its business is transacted at or from places of business in Montana, the information required by this subsection need not be reported"; and made minor changes in style.

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Liability of Directors: The failure of a corporation to file its annual report no longer imposes the sanction of personal liability upon the directors of the corporation for all debts and judgments of the corporation; that sanction, found at section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), was replaced by 35-1-1103 (now repealed), which imposed misdemeanor criminal sanctions against nonfiling corporations. Mont. Williams Double Diamond v. Royal Village, Inc., 186 M 359, 607 P2d 1120 (1980).

Verification:

In an action by a creditor of a corporation to recover from its directors for failure to file the annual report of its financial condition, the requirement of section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that such report shall be verified by oath is met by verification on information and belief by one of the officers enumerated in the section, in the absence of a provision that it shall be made positively. Fisk Tire Co. v. Lanstrum, 96 M 279, 30 P2d 84 (1934).

Before the 1909 amendment, section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not seem to require that the annual report of a corporation be acknowledged in any event or that it be verified except when in the absence or inability of the president of the corporation to act the vice-president signs the report in his stead. Minneapolis Steel & Mach. Co. v. Thomas, 54 M 132, 168 P 40 (1917).

Effect of Amendment and Repeal of Statute Declaring Liability of Directors for Default in Making Annual Report, Without Saving Clause: In view of 1-2-203, relating to effect of amendment of statutes, and section 15-1202, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), providing that amendment or repeal of a code section relating to corporations shall not impair or take away a remedy given against a corporation or its officers for a liability previously incurred, prior decisions, holding that amendment of section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), "to read as follows" and repealing "all Acts and parts of Acts in conflict herewith" worked the extinction of the amended section "as though it had never existed" in the absence of a saving clause, were erroneous and are overruled. Cont. Supply Co. v. Abell, 95 M 148, 24 P2d 133 (1933). For decision overruled, see Cont. Oil Co. v. Mont. Concrete Co., 63 M 223, 207 P 116 (1922); First Nat'l Bank of Brockton v. Cosier, 66 M 352, 213 P 442 (1923); First Nat'l Bank of Plains v. Barto, 72 M 437, 233 P 963 (1925).

Nature of Liability:

Judgments are debts; hence in providing in section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), that corporate directors failing to make timely report of their corporation's financial condition shall be liable for the debts of and judgments against the corporation which may thereafter be incurred, the Legislature must by the use of the term "judgments" have intended judgments other than for debt, the latter being impliedly included in the word "debts". Cont. Supply Co. v. Abell, 95 M 148, 24 P2d 133 (1933).

The basis of an action to recover on the statutory liability of a director of a corporation for failure of the corporation to file the annual report of its financial condition required by section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is an antecedent debt due to plaintiff; the liability commences with and is dependent upon such debt at the time of the first default, is direct and primary and having once attached is not affected by the renewal of a note evidencing the debt, and is not renewed by subsequent defaults. Williams v. Hilger, 77 M 399, 251 P 524 (1926).

The statutory liability of a director of a corporation for all its debts or judgments for failure to file its annual financial report is in the nature of a penalty imposed for omission to obey the mandate of the law and is not contractual in character. Butler v. Peters, 62 M 381, 205 P 247 (1922).

The right of action created in favor of a corporation's creditors to enforce the liability of a director, imposed upon him by reason of the failure of the company to file the annual report required by statute, survives his death and may be prosecuted against his estate. First Nat'l

Bank of Missoula v. Cottonwood Land Co., 51 M 544, 154 P 582 (1916), explained in Anderson v. Wirkman, 67 M 176, 215 P 224 (1923). See N. Pac. Ry. v. Crowell, 245 F 668 (D.C. N.J. 1917).

The liability fixed by the statute requiring corporations to file an annual report is penal in its nature. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913); Manhattan Trust Co. v. Davis, 23 M 273, 58 P 718 (1899); Giddings v. Holter, 19 M 263, 48 P 8 (1897); St. Sav. Bank of Butte City v. Johnson, 18 M 440, 45 P 662 (1896); Wethey v. Kemper, 17 M 491, 43 P 716 (1896); Elkhorn Trading Co. v. Tacoma Min. Co., 16 M 322, 40 P 606 (1895); Gaus v. Switzer, 9 M 408, 24 P 18 (1890).

Short Existence of Corporation Not Excuse for Not Filing: The fact that a corporation was in existence but a few months prior to the expiration of the year covering which it is required by section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), to make a report on or before March 1 succeeding of its financial condition does not excuse it from making it. Cont. Supply Co. v. Abell, 95 M 148, 24 P2d 133 (1933).

Sufficiency of Complaint:

When a creditor of a corporation seeks to recover a debt reduced to judgment from its directors for failure to file the annual report mentioned in section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), a suit on the judgment is not required; in such a case the complaint must show liability on the defendants' part, not at the time the judgment was secured but at the time the debt was incurred and that it was incurred during the period of their default. Cont. Supply Co. v. Abell, 95 M 148, 24 P2d 133 (1933).

As statutes making the trustees of a corporation personally liable for company debts upon failure to file an annual report are penal in their nature and must be strictly construed, a complaint seeking to enforce such liability is insufficient if it fails to state the county in which the business of the company is conducted or that it was engaged in any business in any county. Wethey v. Kemper, 17 M 491, 43 P 716 (1896). See Whitefoot v. Nat'l Fraternity Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 18 M 164, 44 P 514 (1896); Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

Venue of Action: The liability of directors of a domestic corporation created by section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), under which they became answerable for its debts if they should fail to file within the proper time the annual financial statement provided for therein, whether such debts were created before or after such failure, is in the nature of a penalty and is not based upon contract, and therefore the venue of an action to recover on such liability is in the county where the cause of action or some part thereof arose. Nat'l Supply Co.-Midwest v. Abell, 87 M 555, 289 P 577 (1930).

Cooperative Associations: The provisions of section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), declaring that the directors and trustees of a corporation who fail to file with the County Clerk and Recorder of the county of its principal place of business an annual report of its condition shall jointly and severally be liable for all corporate debts or judgments then existing, or which may thereafter be incurred, until such report is made and filed, are applicable to cooperative associations organized for profit. Anderson v. Equity Cooperative Ass'n of Roy, 67 M 291, 215 P 802 (1923).

Liability for Failure to Make Annual Statement — Jury Trial: When the primary purpose of an action against a corporation was to recover on promissory notes aggregating the sum of $27,000 and to enforce liability of its directors as comakers and guarantors and for failure to file the annual statements required by statute, and the only equitable relief prayed for was the foreclosure of a mortgage given by one of the directors on two town lots as security for the notes, the answers of defendants consisting inter alia of denials and counterclaims which were put in issue by reply, the defendants were entitled to a trial by jury of the strictly legal issues presented by the pleadings, and denial of such jury trial was error. Benson-Stabeck Co. v. Farmers' Elevator Co., 66 M 395, 214 P 600 (1923), explained in Butler Bros. Dev. Co. v. Butler, 111 M 329, 108 P2d 1041 (1941).

Attachment Improper to Recover Statutory Liability: The liability of a director for the debts of his corporation imposed by section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), for failure of the corporation to file its annual report exhibiting its financial condition, etc., does not arise out of a contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money, and a Writ of Attachment was improperly issued in an action by a creditor of a corporation against one of its directors to recover a debt owing to plaintiff by the corporation. Butler v. Peters, 62 M 381, 205 P 247 (1922).

Time for Filing: When a corporation mailed its annual report to the County Clerk on January 16, but failed to enclose the filing fee of $1 and the Clerk received the report on January 17 or 19, retained it in his office and mailed the sender a bill for the fee, and on January 23 the fee was received and the Clerk thereupon endorsed the report as filed on the latter date, it was held in an action commenced to enforce the directors' individual liability that the evidence was insufficient to show that the report was not filed in time. Minneapolis Steel & Mach. Co. v. Thomas, 54 M 132, 168 P 40 (1917).

Constitutionality: Section 15-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), requiring annual statement of corporations, before its amendment in 1909, was not unconstitutional as casting "liabilities and burdens upon domestic corporations from which foreign corporations are exempt", the penalty for failure to file the annual report being placed upon the officers and directors and not upon the corporation. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913). See First Nat'l Bank of Missoula v. Cottonwood Land Co., 51 M 544, 154 P 582 (1916).

Denial of Proper Corporate Formation as a Defense: If an active director of a corporation that has been engaged in business, apparently in good faith, is sued and sought to be held for his failure as president and director of the corporation to file or have filed the annual report of the corporation, he cannot escape personal liability by denying the existence of the corporation on the ground that the forms of law had never been observed in perfecting its organization, whether he was properly chosen as director or not. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913). See N. Pac. Ry. v. Crowell, 245 F 668 (D.C. N.J. 1917).

Nature of Corporate Penalty:

A fine, in the sense in which the term is used in the 1889 Montana Constitution prohibiting excessive fines, is a penalty exacted by the state for some criminal offense and has no application to the penalty imposed upon the directors of a corporation for neglect to file the annual statement required by statute. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913).

While the liability imposed by a statute requiring corporations to file an annual statement is often called penal, it is not so in the sense in which that term is commonly used. It is so only in the sense that it creates a liability which was not known at the common law and therefore must be construed strictly. Daily v. Marshall, 47 M 377, 133 P 681 (1913). See N. Pac. Ry. v. Crowell, 245 F 668 (D.C. N.J. 1917).

Trustees' Liability — False Report: The trustees of a corporation who filed a report, wherein they failed to specify as a debt of the company its liability on a covenant of title, were not liable for a false report if, at the time the report was filed, the breach of the covenant was not known to them. Giddings v. Holter, 19 M 263, 48 P 8 (1897).

Trustees' Liability: If a corporation fails to file its annual report as required by statute, all the trustees of the company become jointly and severally liable for all its indebtedness existing at the time such report should have been filed. Elkhorn Trading Co. v. Tacoma Min. Co., 16 M 322, 40 P 606 (1895); Gaus v. Switzer, 9 M 408, 24 P 18 (1890).

Effect of Insolvency and Corporate Abeyance as a Defense: When, in an action against the trustees of a corporation to charge them with individual liability for failure to file an annual report, it was alleged in defense that before the time for filing such report the corporation was insolvent and had entirely abandoned its business, that all its property belonged to one of its trustees, having been delivered to him in satisfaction of an indebtedness, and that for a period of 2 months no officer or trustee had exercised any corporate act or function and that there was no intention to resume the business of said corporation, the acts set forth did not dissolve the corporation and constituted no defense to the action. Gaus v. Switzer, 9 M 408, 24 P 18 (1890). See Ames & Frost v. Heslet, 19 M 188, 47 P 805 (1897); N. Pac. Ry. v. Crowell, 245 F 668 (D.C. N.J. 1917).

Filing Requirements — Cooperative State Grazing Districts: Filing requirements of Montana Business Corporation Act do not apply to cooperative state grazing districts. 35-1-1106. Corporate records.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds generally to MCA §35-1-513(1) [now repealed]. The RMBCA section, however, provides more detail as to what records must be kept and, in some cases, for how long.

Section 16.01 [this section] contains several departures from the RMBCA:

(1) Section 16.01 [this section] allows storage of records at a location other than the principal office, if those records can easily be retrieved.

(2) The RMBCA states that the corporation keep all written communications to shareholders. This requirement was judged too burdensome and has been eliminated from this proposal.

Subsection (b) does not require that financial records be kept in any particular form. As described by the ABA Official Comments:

Section 16.01(b) [subsection (2) of this section] relates to accounting records. The word "appropriate" is used to indicate that the nature of the financial records to be kept is dependent to some extent on the nature of the corporation's business; the phrase "adequate records" is used in some state statutes to convey essentially the same meaning. "Appropriate" records are generally records that permit financial statements to be prepared which fairly present the financial position and transactions of the corporation. In some very small businesses operating on a cash basis, however, "appropriate" accounting records may consist only of a check register, vouchers, and receipts.

35-1-1107. Inspection of records by shareholders.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-513 [now repealed], but more clearly sets out what may be inspected. This section eliminates the penalty against officers or agents refusing the inspection. Section 16.04 [35-1-1109] provides new sanctions. The ABA Official Comments state:

"The penalty approach was rejected, in part, because of courts' reluctance to impose penalties on officers or agents for actions taken on behalf of their principal and, in part, because of concern for personal responsibilities for large penalties may cause officers or agents to ignore their responsibilities to their principals."

While the RMBCA suggests deletion of subsection (c)(4) [subsection (3)(d) of this section], it was included to minimize the threat of harassing requests by shareholders without an established or substantial stake in the corporation.

Official Comments: This section is not derived from the RMBCA. Instead, this section is identical to MCA §35-1-513(5) [now repealed]. Official Comments: Section 16.21(a) [subsection (1) of this section] corresponds to MCA §35-1-414(11) [now repealed]. Section 16.21(b) [subsection (2) of this section] is new to the RMBCA with no comparable MCA provision as heretofore a corporation was prohibited from issuing shares under the conditions set forth in this subsection. The reason for this addition is stated in the ABA Official Comments:

Section 16.21(b) [subsection (2) of this section] requires reporting to shareholders of transactions in which the corporation issues shares for promissory notes or promises for future services. These transactions may involve dilution of the interests of shareholders and it was therefore concluded that disclosure of these transactions to the shareholders was appropriate as part of the decision (reflected in chapter 6 [Title 35, ch. 1, part 6]) to broaden the permissible consideration for shares.

Part 12 Fees and Charges

35-1-1206. Fees for filing, copying, and services.Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not derived from the RMBCA. Instead it is derived from MCA §§35-1-1201 and 35-1-1202 [both repealed]. The RMBCA suggests that the legislature establish filing fees by statute. Establishing fees by statute is cumbersome. Further, amending those fees as a result of increased costs would require legislative action.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 396 substituted current text concerning establishing certain fees to be set and deposited in accordance with 2-15-405 for former text that read: "(1) The secretary of state shall establish by rule fees for filing documents and issuing certificates as required by this chapter.

(2) The secretary of state shall establish by rule fees for copying documents, priority handling, transmitting or filing facsimile copies, and providing computer-generated information.

(3) The fees prescribed under this section must be reasonably related to the costs of processing the documents and preparing and providing the services. The secretary of state shall maintain records sufficient to support the fees established under this section." Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

35-1-1207. License fee.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not from the RMBCA, but is derived from MCA §§35-1-1204 and 1205 [both repealed].

The section continues the existing requirement of license fees from both domestic and foreign corporations. The fee is no longer based on the number of shares issued and the par value of those shares. Instead the fee should be a flat fee. The purpose of a license fee should be to defray the costs of the secretary of state maintaining a file on the corporation and other ancillary costs of dealing with and providing services to the corporation. The number of shares issued by a corporation, or its par value, bears no rational relationship to the secretary of state's costs. Instead, it is a trap for the unwary, because high fees can easily be circumvented by issuing low or no par value stock and by issuing fewer shares. Likewise, the costs of calculating these fees under the existing scheme is needless work for both the corporation and the secretary of state.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 396 in (1) after "fee" deleted "based upon the number of shares that it will have authority to issue"; at end of (1)(b) deleted "increasing the number of authorized shares"; at end of (1)(c) deleted "increasing the number of authorized shares that the surviving or new corporation, if a domestic corporation, will have authority to issue above the aggregate number of shares that the constituent domestic corporations and constituent foreign corporations authorized to transact business in this state have authority to issue"; substituted (2) concerning license fee set and deposited in accordance with 2-15-405 for former text that read: "The license fee for domestic corporations is as follows:

- (a) 1 to 50,000 shares.....$50
- (b) 50,001 to 100,000 shares..... 100
- (c) 100,001 to 250,000 shares..... 250
- (d) 250,001 to 500,000 shares..... 400
- (e) 500,001 to 1,000,000 shares.... 600

(f) over 1,000,000 shares... 1,000"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) If the domestic corporation is increasing the number of authorized shares either by amendment or by merger, the domestic corporation shall pay the difference in license fee between the fee based on the initial number of authorized shares and the amended number of shares"; and in (3) in first sentence after "fee" deleted "of $100" and inserted second sentence providing that fee must be set and deposited in accordance with 2-15-405. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 229 near end of (1) after "issue" deleted "or the increase in the number of shares that it will have authority to issue"; inserted (3) requiring domestic corporation to pay difference in license fee between authorized share fee and amended share number fee if number of shares is increased by amendment or merger; and made minor changes in style. Secretary of State

35-1-1307. Secretary of state — powers — rulemaking.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-1-1301 [now repealed]. Subsection (1) [of this section] is from the RMBCA and subsection (2) [of this section] is not. Subsection (2) [of this section] clarifies the power of the secretary of state to make rules to perform, the duties required of it by this Act.

Compiler's Comments

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 368, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the secretary of state is authorized to adopt rules prescribing forms and establishing fees. The fees should be established to be commensurate with the cost of the services provided. Existing forms should be modified to the extent necessary to conform to this bill whenever possible. New forms should be as easy to use as possible."

35-1-1308. Forms.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The Committee suggests adoption of this language which, while derived from the RMBCA, contains two deviations:

- 1) The section makes it clear that the forms should be promulgated by administrative rule.
- 2) This section allows the secretary of state to prescribe computer formats for forms, when desirable.

35-1-1309. Filing duty of secretary of state.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The current law does not provide for an inclusive filing duty of the secretary of state. See MCA §35-1-1304(3) [now repealed]. The ABA's Official Comments state:

Under section 1.25 [this section] the secretary of state is required to file a document if it "satisfies the requirements of section 1.20 [35-1-217]." This language should be contrasted with earlier versions of the Model Act (and many state statutes) that required the secretary of state to ascertain whether the document "conformed with law" before filing it. The purpose of this change is to limit the discretion of the secretary of state to a ministerial role in reviewing the contents of documents. If the document submitted is in the form prescribed and contains the information required by section 1.20 [35-1-217] and the applicable provision of the Model Act, the secretary of state under section 1.25 [this section] must file it even though it contains additional provisions the secretary of state may feel are irrelevant or not authorized by the Model Act or by general legal principles. Consistently with this approach, section 1.25(d) [subsection (4) of this section] states that the filing duty of the secretary of state is ministerial and provides that filing a document with the secretary of state does not affect the validity or invalidity of any provision contained in the document and does not create any presumption with respect to any provision. Persons adversely affected by provisions in a document may test their validity in a proceeding appropriate for that purpose.

This section eliminates the necessity of documents such as the certificate of incorporation and other documents. The ABA Official Comments set forth the reasons:

Section 1.25(b) [subsection (2) of this section] provides that acceptance of articles of incorporation or other documents is evidenced merely by the issuance of a fee receipt or acknowledgement of receipt if no fee is required. Earlier versions of the Model Act and the statutes of many states provided that acceptance by the secretary of state is evidenced by a "certificate" (e.g., of incorporation, of merger, or of amendment). This older practice was not retained in the revised Model Act because it was felt desirable to reduce the number of pieces of paper issued by the secretary of state. Under the older practice most state offices routinely issued both fee receipts and certificates. A single document — the fee receipt or acknowledgment — should sufficiently indicate that the document has been accepted for filing, and in fact many states in recent years have dispensed with the formal certificate.

Section 3.02(14) & (15) [subsections (1)(n) and (1)(o) of this section] allow a nonprofit corporation to establish conditions for memberships. The ABA Official Comments state: "These provisions do not validate all admission requirements but simply provide that a corporation has the power to set conditions. Whether the conditions are legal depends on applicable federal and state law."

Subsection (b) [subsection (2) of this section] is not in the RMNCA, but is from MCA §35-2-105 [now repealed].

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1992 GENERAL REVISION

Abatement of Activities for Violation of Gambling Laws: A bona fide corporation organized under sections 15-1401 through 15-1409, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), could legally permit gambling among its members but could not permit any person or persons other than its members to participate in such gambling. When Attorney General sought to abate corporation's activities on ground it permitted nonmembers to gamble at will, propriety of such action was upheld against contention that proceeding in quo warranto was the proper remedy. State ex rel. Bottomly v. District Court, 115 M 400, 143 P2d 559 (1943).

Bequest — Power to Take: A religious society organized and having its domicile in the state of Minnesota may under the laws of that state, similar to those of Montana as set out in sections 15-1402 and 15-1403, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), take a bequest made to it by a resident testator capable of making the will. 35-2-119. Filing requirements.

Official Comments

Official Comments: The MCA contains no comparable section which delineates an all inclusive list of document filing requirements. Instead, those MCA sections requiring filing contain sections setting forth document filing requirements for particular filings.

Section 1.20 [this section] standardizes the filing requirements for all documents required or permitted by the RMNCA, instead of enumerating the filing requirements in different parts as the MCA does. Other sections of RMNCA impose additional requirements which also must be complied with if a certain document is to be filed, as does the MCA. Section 1.20 [this section] of the RMNCA has been modified to include provisions on fax filing similar to the existing provisions of the MCA.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 290 at end of first sentence in (1) deleted "provided that the secretary of state receives the original document within 5 working days of the receipt of the facsimile copy"; deleted (2) through (4) that read: "A facsimile copy may be filed under this section if it:

(a) is produced by a method of transmission of images in which the image is scanned at the transmitter, reconstructed at the receiving station, and duplicated on paper at the receiving station; and

(b) is legible and the same size as the original.

(3) During the 5-day period referred to in subsection (1), the recorded facsimile copy constitutes constructive notice for all purposes of the original document.

(4) If the original document is not received within 5 working days of receipt of the facsimile copy as provided in subsection (1), the filing of the facsimile copy is void"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 18, 1997.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.24 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 1.24 [this section] permits making corrections in filed documents without refiling the entire document or submitting formal articles of amendment. The correction procedure may be less expensive than refiling the document or filing articles of amendment. Articles of correction do not alter the effective date of the underlying document.

35-2-128. Religious corporations — constitutional protections.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.80 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The RMNCA limits state intrusion and restrictions upon religious corporations, yet it still provides an orderly structure in which religious corporations can be formed and operated.

The ABA Official Comments state:

While in one sense section 1.80 [this section] simply states the obvious, it is helpful to remind those dealing with religious corporations that they must consider constitutional mandates. The approach of section 1.80 [this section] also allows a case-by-case determination of difficult questions and automatically conforms the Model Acts to the opinions of the United States Supreme Court and the applicable state courts.

Authority to Sell: If there is no constitution or bylaws of the religious corporation, the trustees cannot sell the church building without a resolution adopted by the members authorizing them to do so. Smith v. St. John Baptist Church of Bozeman, 123 M 264, 211 P2d 975 (1949).

35-2-130. Judicial relief.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.60 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA Official Comments describe the reasons for this section:

Section 1.60 [this section] provides an escape valve allowing nonprofit corporations to conduct meetings or obtain the consent of members, delegates or directors when it is otherwise impractical or impossible to do so. For example, a corporation may have a high quorum requirement preventing it from holding a meeting of members because the required number of members won't attend a meeting. It may have inaccurate records and be unable to identify its members or directors. The section allows directors, officers, delegates, members or the attorney general to petition the appropriate court for an order allowing the members or directors to vote or hold a meeting even if the order dispenses with requirements of the Model Act, the articles or bylaws concerning voting or holding meetings. The court in exercising its discretion should provide a procedure that is fair and equitable under all the circumstances.

35-2-131. Attorney general.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.70 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 1.70 [this section] allows the attorney general to intervene or commence a proceeding to protect the public interest. The attorney general has limited powers to regulate mutual benefit and religious corporations, but the powers are expanded to provide proper supervision over public benefit corporations. In a public benefit corporation members generally have no personal economic incentive to monitor corporate activities and prevent abuses. Members and contributors may have an incentive to monitor corporate activities but they may not have the practical means to do so.

Reports of fraud within charitable institutions are common place in the news. See Stienberg, "Economic Perspectives on Regulation of Charitable Solicitation, 39 Case W. Res. L. Rev. 775 (1989). Empowering the attorney general to intervene in certain affairs of nonprofit organizations to protect against abuses is not new. See 2 Blackstone's Commentaries on the Laws of England 334 (1872). Under existing statutory law, the attorney general may dissolve a corporation if it acts in an unauthorized way or may commence action to enjoin the corporation from performing unauthorized acts. MCA §35-2-110(3) [now repealed]. The power of the attorney general to intervene in the affairs of a charitable organization that fails to act in accordance with its purpose has been well established in other jurisdictions. Brown v. Concerned Citizens for Sickle Cell Anemia, Inc., 56 Ohio St. 2d 85, 382 N.E.2d 1155 (1978). See generally, 15 Am.Jur. (Charities) §144 (1976). The rationale for the traditional rule that attorney generals are allowed to intervene is the same as the rationale for applicable provisions of the RMNCA: the attorney general represents the interest of the public in insuring that a charitable organization acts in such a way as to accomplish its charitable purpose.

The preliminary position of the Montana Attorney General is that changes in the law are "sensible and appropriate." He notes that the changes "are somewhat similar to the recent authority given the Attorney General in the area of charitable trusts." Letter from Marc Racicot to Steven Bahls dated January 9, 1990.

35-2-213. Articles of incorporation.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 2.02 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-202 [now repealed]. The following provisions are in substance identical to provisions MCA §§35-2-202 [now repealed]; 2.02(a)(1), 2.02(a)(3), 2.02(a)(4), 2.02(a)(6), 2.02(b)(3), 2.02(d) [subsections (1)(a), (1)(c), (1)(d), (1)(f), (2)(c), and (5) of this section]. The following provisions would be an addition to the MCA; §§2.02(a)(2), 2.02(b)(4), 2.02(c) [subsections (1)(b), (2)(d), and (4) of this section]. The provisions in §2.02(b)(1) and (2) [subsections (2)(a) and (2)(b) of this section] are mandatory under the MCA.

In §2.02(a)(2) [subsection (1)(b) of this section] the incorporators must choose the category of nonprofit corporation they believe is most appropriate for the corporation's intended activities. Once having chosen a category, mutual benefit, public benefit or religious corporation, the corporations is required to abide by the rules applicable to that category. The statutes provide an incentive to choose the appropriate category and a disincentive to choose an inappropriate category. See M. Hone, Revised Model Nonprofit Corporation Act xxii-xxiii (1987).

Section 2.02(b)(5) [subsection (2)(e) of this section] provides more protection to directors of nonprofit corporations than MCA §35-2-202 [now repealed]. Section 35-2-202 [now repealed] does not allow limitation of liability for "reckless" conduct. The standard under 2.02(b)(5) [subsection (2)(e) of this section] is generally "intentional" conduct.

35-2-215. Liability for preincorporation transactions.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 2.04 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-109 [now repealed]. MCA §35-2-109 [now repealed] is broader than RMNCA §2.02 [evidently this was intended to refer to §2.04, now this section]; MCA §35-2-109 [now repealed] provides that all persons who assume to act as a corporation and without authority to do so are jointly and severally liable.

Official Comments: Section 10.06 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-210 [now repealed]. Section 10.06 [this section] is more extensive than MCA §35-2-210 [now repealed] in how restatement is accomplished.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 229 at end of (8) substituted "a statement of whether the restated articles were approved by the board, the members, or any other person" for former (8)(a) that read: "(a) whether the restatement contains an amendment to the articles requiring approval by the members or any other person other than the board of directors and, if it does not, that the board of directors adopted the restatement"; inserted (8)(c) requiring statement as to whether approval is made by board or other person if no member approval on restatement is required; and made minor changes in style. Official Comments: Section 10.08 [this section] in substance is identical to MCA §35-2-209(4) [now repealed].

35-2-229. Amendment by directors.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.20 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 10.20 [this section] allows directors in a nonprofit corporation without members to amend the bylaws, unless the articles of incorporation require approval by a specific person(s). MCA §35-2-211 [now repealed] is the applicable provision in the current MCA concerning bylaws. MCA §35-2-211 [now repealed] states that the power to alter, amend, or repeal the bylaws or adopt new bylaws is vested in the board of directors unless otherwise provided in the articles of incorporation or the bylaws.

35-2-230. Amendment by directors and members.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.21 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 10.21 [this section] applies to nonprofit corporations with members. Since the basic rights of members are usually set forth in a nonprofit corporation's bylaws and not its articles, the RMNCA requires the same vote to amend bylaws or articles.

35-2-231. Class voting by members on amendments.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.22 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 10.22 [this section] is necessary since the RMNCA allows a nonprofit corporation to have different classes of members.

35-2-232. Approval by third persons.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.30 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 10.30 [this section] provides flexibility in control over amendments by allowing parent or affiliated corporations and others (government bodies, bishops, etc.) a veto power over amendments. The veto power must be provided for in the articles of incorporation.

35-2-233. Amendment terminating members or redeeming or canceling memberships.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 10.31 [this section] is an optional section under the RMNCA. Section 10.31 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. These procedures are in addition to the normal requirements for amending articles or bylaws and are required due to the extraordinary nature of the amendment. The rationale for this optional section is set forth by the ABA as follows:

"Some public benefit corporations may decide that the benefits of having members are outweighed by the costs, possible harassment, or lack of contribution by members. If so, section 10.31 [this section] provides a method of amending articles or bylaws to convert from a membership corporation to a corporation with a self-perpetuating board of directors"

35-2-305. Corporate name.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 4.01 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-301 [now repealed]. Section 4.01 [this section] differs in the following aspects:

A. Section 4.01 [this section] does not require the use of the words corporation, incorporated, company or limited, or some abbreviation thereof, in the name as MCA §35-2-301(a) [now repealed] requires. The law in this regard should be changed because many nonprofit organizations (such as hospitals, colleges, churches and others) find it awkward to use incorporated, company, limited, or some derivation thereof.

B. Section 4.01(c), (d) & (e) [subsections (3), (4), and (5) of this section] would be additions to the MCA, in order to add clarity to the law.

Note that [in] MCA §35-1-303(1)(g) [now repealed] that the change is authorized by the board of directors, while the RMNCA does not require the board to take this action. The change is made because a change in registered agent is a routine action.

Official Comments: Sections 5.02 & 5.03 [35-2-310 and this section] are in substance identical to provisions contained in MCA §35-2-303 [now repealed].

35-2-314. Service of process on corporation.Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not derived from the RMNCA and is significantly different from the existing law. The rules for service of process should best be dealt with in the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure. The Montana Rules of Civil Procedure, 4(D)(2)(e)(iv) provide that service shall be made on a dissolved corporation by serving "any one of the persons who have become trustees for the corporation and its stockholders or members." Unfortunately, the existing Montana Nonprofit Corporation Act does not designate who the trustees are. The above scheme allows the corporation to do so in the case of voluntary dissolution. In addition, it provides that if a receiver is appointed, the receiver will be trustee. Finally, in the event there is no designation or receiver, the proposed language borrows from the Nevada Revised Statutes §78.750, that allow service on former officers or directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.01 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-401 [now repealed]. Section 8.01(c) [subsection (3) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 8.01(c) [subsection (3) of this section] allows considerable flexibility in structuring nonprofit corporations. The ABA Official Comments state:

Boards of nonprofit corporations are sometimes called boards of trustees, regents, overseers, or by some other name. Section 8.01 [this section] applies to the person or group under whose authority corporate powers are exercised and under whose directions the affairs of the corporation are managed, regardless of the name of the person or group.

35-2-415. Qualifications and numbers of directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.02 [subsection (1) of this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-401 [now repealed]. MCA §35-2-401 [now repealed] does not directly state that all directors must be individuals, but states that directors need not be residents of the state, unless the articles of incorporation or the bylaws so require.

Section 8.03 [subsections (2) and (3) of this section] in substance is identical to MCA §35-2-402 [now repealed].

35-2-416. General standards for directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA Official Comments explain the purpose of the statute:

Section 8.30(a) [subsection (1) of this section] sets forth the general standards of conduct for directors of nonprofit corporations. It settles the dispute as to whether directors of nonprofit corporations should meet the general business standards or the trustee standards. See "Duties of Charitable Trust, Trustee and Charitable Corporation Directors," Real Property, Probate and Trust Journal 545 (1967); Stern v. Lucy Webb Hayes National Training School for Deaconesses and Missionaries, 381 F. Supp. 1003 (D.D.C. 1974). Also see Official Comment to Section 8.30 of the Model Business Corporation Act.

In Montana, MCA §27-1-732 provides many nonprofit corporation directors even broader protection than provided in §8.30 [this section]. Section 8.30 [this section] would control in those cases not governed by MCA §27-1-732. Those cases would primarily be:

(a) Cases involving Chapter 2, Title 35 that are not governed by MCA §27-1-732. MCA §27-1-732 does not govern corporations that are not tax exempt under IRC §501(c) or MCA §15-31-102.

(b) Cases involving claims for equitable relief.

35-2-417. Election, designation and appointment of directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.04 [this section] in substance is identical to MCA §35-2-402(2) [now repealed].

35-2-418. Director conflict of interest.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.31 [this section] would be an addition to the current MCA. This section, although not as detailed as the corresponding sections of the RMBCA, is consistent with the general philosophy that, within limits, duties of directors should be defined by statute. It is particularly important to do so for charitable corporations because of the strict trust concept, adopted at common law, that interested directors can never obtain a profit when dealing with the nonprofit corporation.

35-2-419. Terms of directors generally — staggered terms.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.05 [subsections (1) through (4) of this section] corresponds to provisions in MCA §35-2-402(3) [now repealed].

Section 8.06 [subsection (5) of this section] in substance is identical to provisions in MCA §35-2-402(3) [now repealed].

35-2-420. Resignation of directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.07 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Directors should be provided with a procedure for resignation. The ABA Official Comments state: "Under appropriate circumstances a court may find that an oral resignation combined with acts or omissions evidencing an intent to resign results in an effective resignation."

35-2-421. Removal of directors elected by members or directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.08 [this section] is an addition to the MCA and adds needed clarity to the law. Under §8.08 [this section] members are all authorized to remove directors elected by them without cause. The ABA Official Comments state: "If a board of directors is self-perpetuating or if it elects some of its members, the board may remove the directors it has elected without cause by a vote of two-thirds of the directors in office. . . . The articles or bylaws may require a greater vote requirement to remove directors. . . . Section 8.08 [this section] allows the articles or bylaws to authorize the board to remove any director for failing to attend a specified number of meetings. The exact number of meetings must be specified in the articles or bylaws at the time the director commences serving the term. . . ."

35-2-422. Removal of designated or appointed directors.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.09 [this section] is an addition to the MCA. MCA §35-2-402 [now repealed] provides that a director may be removed from office pursuant to any procedure provided in the articles of incorporation. Since the RMNCA allows for designated or appointed directors §8.09 [this section] provides for their removal.

35-2-423. Removal of directors by judicial proceeding.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.10 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. This section authorizes members holding 10 percent or more of the voting power of any class to sue to remove a director, and sets forth the grounds for court removal of an elected, designated or appointed director.

35-2-424. Vacancy on board.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.11 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-408 [now repealed]. The provisions in §8.11 [this section] are more extensive than those contained in MCA §35-2-408 [now repealed]. The term of a director filling a vacancy is contained in §8.05(c) [35-2-419(3)].

35-2-425. Compensation of directors.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.12 [this section] corresponds to a provision contained in MCA §35-2-108 [now repealed], which states that a corporation may compensate the directors in a reasonable amount.

35-2-427. Regular and special meetings.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.20 (a) & (c) [subsections (1) and (3) of this section] would be additions to the MCA. These sections clarify the law and provide a corporation with flexibility as meetings by directors may be conducted by telephone conference calls. Section 8.20 (b) [subsection (2) of this section] is identical to a provision in MCA §35-2-403 [now repealed]. Section 8.21 [35-2-428] is in substance identical to MCA §35-2-406 [now repealed].

35-2-428. Action without meeting.Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-2-406 [now repealed].

35-2-429. Call and notice of meetings.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.22 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 8.22 [this section] clarifies the notice requirements for different types of meetings.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 51 in (2) near beginning substituted "special meetings" for "regular meetings". Amendment effective March 15, 1999.

35-2-430. Waiver of notice.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.23(a) [subsection (1) of this section] in substance is identical to a provision in MCA §35-2-111 [now repealed]. Section 8.23(b) [subsection (2) of this section] in substance is identical to a provision in MCA §35-2-403 [now repealed].

35-2-431. Quorum and voting.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.24 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-404 and §35-2-405 [both repealed]. The two director minimum quorum requirement would be an addition.

35-2-433. Committees of the board.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.25 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-407 [now repealed]. Under MCA §35-2-407 [now repealed] committees are permissible only if the articles of incorporation or bylaws so provide. MCA §35-2-407(1)(b) [now repealed] also provides that a committee cannot elect, appoint or remove an officer. Given the realities of modern business, committees should hold this power.

Section 8.25(f) [subsection (6) of this section] corresponds to MCA §35-3-407(2) [evidently this was intended to refer to §35-2-407(2)] [now repealed]. MCA §35-2-407(2) [now repealed] provides that the delegation of authority shall not operate to relieve the board of directors or any individual director of any responsibility imposed by law.

35-2-435. Loans to or guaranties for directors and officers.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.32 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-412 [now repealed]. Section 8.32 [this section] prohibits a guaranty, MCA §35-1-412 [now repealed] does not. Section 8.32(b) [subsection (2) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. A violation of the statute does not affect the borrower's liability.

Section 8.32 [this section] deletes as unnecessarily harsh the provision contained in MCA §35-2-411 [now repealed] which makes any director or officer who assents to or participates in the loan liable to the corporation for the loan. Rather, a director's liability is to be tested under other provisions of the law. The ABA Official Comments note: "Advances of money from petty cash and for travel and other corporate purposes are not loans within the meaning of §8.32 [this section] and consequently are not prohibited."

35-2-436. Liability for unlawful distributions.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.33 [this section] provides the corporation with the means to recover an improper distribution. Section 8.33 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 8.33 [this section] is consistent with the RMNCA's policy to prevent the improper diversion of assets.

35-2-439. Required officers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.40 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-409 [now repealed]. Differences between the statutes:

A. MCA §35-2-409 [now repealed] provides that an officer's term shall not exceed 3 years; officers may be elected or appointed as prescribed in the articles or the bylaws, if there is no such provision all officers shall be elected or appointed annually by the board of directors.

B. MCA §35-1-409 [evidently this was intended to refer to 35-2-409] [now repealed] requires one or more vice-presidents.

C. MCA §35-2-409 [now repealed] permits an individual to hold more than one office, if the bylaws so provide.

D. MCA §35-2-409 [now repealed] provides that any number of officers may be ex officio members of the board of directors if the articles or bylaws so provide.

E. Section 8.40(b) [subsection (2) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The provision clarifies existing common law.

35-2-440. Duties and authority of officers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.41 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The provision clarifies the authority of officers.

35-2-441. Standards of conduct for officers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.42 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. This section is consistent with the committee's addition to the RMBCA. Under Section 8.42 [this section] nondirector officers with discretionary authority have the same general duty of care and loyalty as directors. This standard of conduct is particularly important in nonprofit corporations when the board of directors is composed of volunteers and the full-time paid officers have important and significant duties.

35-2-442. Resignation and removal of officers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.43 [this section] corresponds to a provision in MCA §35-2-410 [now repealed]. Section 8.43 [this section] has the following differences:

A. MCA §35-2-410 [now repealed] silent concerning resignation.

B. MCA §35-2-410 [now repealed] includes removal of agents. This is best governed, however, by agency law.

C. MCA §35-2-410 [now repealed] provides that the individuals authorized to elect or appoint the officer of [sic] agent may remove the officer or agent whenever in their judgment the best interests of the corporation will be served.

35-2-443. Contract rights of officers.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.44 [this section] in substance is identical to a provision in MCA §35-2-410 [now repealed], except the MCA provision includes agents. This section is not intended to limit any rights the officer might have under the Montana Wrongful Discharge Act.

35-2-444. Officers' authority to execute documents.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.45 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA comments state:

Section 8.45 [this section] is a safe harbor that does not diminish the apparent authority officers may have under common law.

Section 8.45 [this section] allows third persons to rely on the signatures of specified officers of a nonprofit corporation as indicating authority to act on behalf of the corporation unless the third persons have actual knowledge that the signing officers have no authority. This provision is particularly helpful in the nonprofit context where the authority of officers may be less than clear.

35-2-446. Definitions.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.50 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA.

The RMNCA indemnification provisions are similar to the RMBCA provisions adopted by the committee. Indemnification provisions are particularly important in the nonprofit setting as they establish essential guidelines for conflicts between protecting the directors and protecting the public interests from which nonprofit corporations evolve. The MCA's failure to provide more guidance concerning indemnification is a glaring deficiency in Montana's current nonprofit law.

35-2-447. Authority to indemnify.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.51 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-107(14) [now repealed]. MCA §35-2-107(14) [now repealed] provides for indemnification to directors and officers or former directors and officers when they are made a party by reason of being or having been a director or officer, except when the individual is liable for negligence or misconduct in the performance of duty to the corporation. The negligence or misconduct standard of MCA §35-2-107 [now repealed] differs from the good faith standard of §8.51 [this section].

35-2-448. Mandatory indemnification.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.52 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA.

35-2-449. Advance for expenses.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.53 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA.

35-2-450. Court-ordered indemnification.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.54 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA.

35-2-451. Determination and authorization of indemnification.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.55 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA.

35-2-452. Indemnification of officers, employees, and agents.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.56 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The MCA does not specifically provide for indemnification to employees and agents.

35-2-453. Insurance.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.57 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA.

35-2-454. Application.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 8.58 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA.

35-2-510. Admission.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.01(a) [subsection (1) of this section] in substance is identical to provisions in MCA §35-2-501 [now repealed].

Section 6.01(b) [subsection (2) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. This provision prevents a corporation from naming people as members without knowing or having the ability to identify individual members.

35-2-511. Consideration.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.02 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. This provisions [sic] provides corporations flexibility in supporting the organization and its objectives.

35-2-512. No requirement of members.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.03 [this section] is identical to a provision in MCA §35-2-501 [now repealed]. MCA §35-2-502 [now repealed] also requires a corporation that has no members to set forth that fact in the articles of incorporation or the bylaws. RMNCA §2.02(5) [35-2-213(1)(e)] requires a corporation to set forth in its articles of incorporation whether or not the corporation will have members.

35-2-513. Differences in rights and obligations of members.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.10 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-501 [now repealed].

35-2-514. Transfers.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.11 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA Official Comments set forth the reasons for this section:

Subdivision (a) [subsection (1) of this section] provides that a membership in a mutual benefit corporation cannot be transferred unless the articles or bylaws provide for transfers. This comports with the reasonable expectations of members of most mutual benefit corporations. A corporation's articles or bylaws may provide for transfers if the members want transferable memberships. The articles or bylaws may impose limitations, conditions, and fees as a condition to transferring memberships.

Subdivision (b) [subsection (2) of this section] reinforces the concept that memberships in public benefit and religious corporations are not securities, do not represent a valuable asset, are personal to each member, and should not be sold for value. Moreover, subdivision (b) [subsection (2) of this section] prohibits a member of a public benefit or religious corporation from giving a membership to another person. This prevents members from passing membership rights to their friends or relatives without regard to their qualifications.

Subdivision (c) [subsection (3) of this section] is particularly important to members of mutual benefit corporations if their memberships represent a valuable asset. It provides that no restriction on transfer can be imposed after the fact without approval of the members and the affected member. A class vote may be required. See sections 10.04, 10.05, 10.21 and 10.22 [35-2-224, 35-2-225, 35-2-230, and 35-2-231].

35-2-516. Member's liability to third parties.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.12 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-501(3) [now repealed]. The difference between the statutes is that §35-2-501(3) [now repealed] only mentions obligations. A more inclusive statute is desirable.

35-2-517. Member's liability for dues, assessments, and fees.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.13 [this section] would be an addition to the current MCA. The purpose of §6.13 [this section] is to impose liability on members for dues, assessment fees that have been consented to.

35-2-518. Creditor's action against member.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.14 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 6.14 [this section] provides an unsatisfied creditor of a corporation with the ability to sue a member for the member's liability to the corporation arising from dues, assessments and fees to which the member has consented.

35-2-519. Resignation.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.20 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. It sets forth the fundamental right of a member to resign.

35-2-520. Termination, expulsion, and suspension.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.21 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 6.21 [this section] codifies judicially developed requirements and provides a procedural safe harbor.

The approach of requiring nonprofit organizations to provide their members with some degree of due process is consistent with the Montana Supreme Court case of Johnson v. Green Meadows [sic] Country Club, [222] Mont. [405], 721 P.2d 1287 (1986) which stated:

We agree with what the Florida Court said when faced with the same question:

. . . courts should leave to the members of a private social club or to the proper board to which the members have lawfully delegated that power, the right to determine whether the action of a member has been such that, in the opinion of such Board, it would interfere with the pleasant, friendly, congenial social relationship between members. In the absence of a clear allegation and convincing proof, if the case reaches that stage, of fraud or bad faith, the action of the members or duly delegated board shall not be reviewed by the courts.

Everglades Protective Syndicate v. McKinney (Fla. App. 1980), 391 So.2d 262, 265, citing State ex rel. Barfield v. Florida Yacht Club (Fla. App. 1958), 106 So.2d 207, 211.

35-2-522. Purchase of memberships.Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is an addition to the existing law. The ABA Official Comments aptly describe the necessity for this section: "The assets of public benefit and religious corporations are held for a public charitable or religious purpose and may not be distributed to members during operations or upon dissolution. Allowing these corporations to purchase memberships would invite evasion of this rule."

35-2-524. Delegates.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 6.40 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 6.40 [this section] authorizes corporations to operate with delegates rather than or in addition to members or a self-perpetuating board.

According to the ABA Official Comments: "The law in regard to delegates and their rights is not as well developed as that relating to members or self-perpetuating boards. For this reason, section 6.40 [this section] does not set forth detailed provisions. Instead, §6.40 [this section] authorizes the articles or bylaws to set forth the rules regarding delegates."

35-2-526. Annual and regular meetings.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.01(a), (c) & (f) [subsections (1), (3), and (6) of this section] are in substance identical to provisions in MCA §35-2-502(1) & (2) [now repealed]. Section 7.01(d) & (e) [subsections (4) and (5) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Under these circumstances actions taken by members at the annual meeting or regular meetings must be consistent with notice requirements.

35-2-527. Special meeting.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.02 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-502(3) [now repealed], but §7.02 [this section] is more extensive than §35-2-502(3) [now repealed].

35-2-528. Court-ordered meeting.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.03 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. It is similar to a provision the committee recommended for the RMBCA. Section 7.03 [this section] allows members, persons entitled to participate in meetings, and the attorney general in the case of a public benefit corporation to have a court enforce the provisions of §§7.01 and 7.02 [35-2-526 and 35-2-527] requiring annual, regular and special meetings. Section 7.03 [this section] continues the RMNCA policy of providing a legal structure for the enforcement of membership rights.

35-2-529. Action by written consent.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.04 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-506 [now repealed]. Section 7.04 [this section] contains the following changes from the MCA:

- a) MCA §35-2-506 [now repealed] requires consent from all members entitled to vote. The existing requirement of obtaining consent from all members is often impracticable.
- b) MCA §35-2-506 [now repealed] contains no provision for limitation by the articles or bylaws. Members, however, should be given this option.
- c) MCA §35-2-506 [now repealed] contains no provisions for a record date, or a written notice of the approved action to members who did not consent.

Section 7.04 [this section] provides smaller corporations with a quick and effective means of approving proposed corporate actions. Action by written consent does not serve as a substitute for a properly demanded special meeting nor can it be used to circumvent the annual meeting requirement of the RMNCA §7.01.

35-2-530. Notice of meeting.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.05 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-503 [now repealed], but §7.05 [this section] is more extensive than §35-2-303 [now repealed]. Notice is broadly defined as oral or written notice in §1.41 [35-2-115].

Section 7.05 [this section] continues the RMNCA policy of providing a legal structure for the enforcement of membership rights. The statute provides corporations with safe harbor provisions for providing notice. These safe harbor provisions may not be consistent with the practices of small nonprofit corporations. Therefore, §7.05(b) [subsection (2) of this section] provides that other means of giving notice may also be fair and reasonable when all the circumstances are considered. Section 7.05(b) [subsection (2) of this section] does not apply to approval of conflict of interest transactions, indemnifications, amendment of articles and bylaws, approval of mergers, sale of assets and dissolution.

35-2-531. Waiver of notice.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.06 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-111 [now repealed], but §7.06 [this section] is more extensive. The waiver provisions provide certainty to the corporation and prevents [sic] a member from appearing, losing a vote, and subsequently raising an objection to lack of notice in a legal proceeding.

35-2-532. Record date — determining members entitled to notice and vote.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.07 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. It adds certainty to the law relating to nonprofit corporations. The RMNCA separates the concept of record date for notice from record date for the right to vote. According to the ABA Official Comments: "These procedures comport with the way most nonprofit corporations operate. Corporations that operate in a different manner may adopt a bylaw or a corporate resolution setting forth a different record date."

35-2-533. Action by written ballot.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.08 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. It is necessary because many nonprofit corporations are not able to attain a quorum at meetings. A similar provision contained in MCA 35-2-507(2) [now repealed] provides that whenever directors or officers are to be elected by members, the bylaws may provide that such elections may be conducted by mail.

35-2-535. Members' list for meeting.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.20 [this section] is more extensive than the current MCA statute that addresses membership lists. MCA §35-2-509 [now repealed] provides for a record of the names and addresses of members entitled to vote and a similar inspection right.

35-2-536. Voting entitlement generally.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.21(a) [subsection (1) of this section] in substance is identical to MCA §35-2-507(1) [now repealed]. Section 7.21(b) [subsection (2) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. According to the ABA Official Comment: "This rule comports with normal expectations when one membership is held by a family and each member of the family is listed as holding part of the membership."

35-2-537. Quorum requirements.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.22(a) [subsection (1) of this section] in substance is identical to MCA §35-2-504 [now repealed]. Section 7.22(b), (c) & (d) [subsections (2), (3), and (4) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 7.22(b) [subsection (2) of this section] allows the members or the board to decrease the quorum for any member action. Decreasing the quorum should not be detrimental to the members as member action still requires approval by a majority of the quorum. Section 7.22(c) [subsection (3) of this section] requires an amendment to increase the quorum for any member action because an increase in quorum may make it difficult for members to act.

35-2-538. Voting requirements.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.23 [this section] has the same effect as MCA §35-2-504(2) and MCA §35-2-505 [both repealed]. MCA §35-2-504(3) & (4) [now repealed] - provisions dealing with the ability to transact business when a quorum is no longer present - are not included in §7.22 and §7.23 [35-2-537 and this section].

35-2-539. Proxies.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.24 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-507(2) [now repealed]. The provisions contained in §7.24 [this section] are more extensive and clarify the law concerning proxy voting.

35-2-540. Cumulative voting for directors — exception.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.25 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-507(3) [now repealed]. The provisions contained in §7.25 [this section] are more extensive than those concerning cumulative voting for directors in MCA §35-2-507(3) [now repealed].

35-2-541. Other methods of electing directors.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.26 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA Comments state: "There is no valid reason to limit voting for directors to cumulative or straight voting. The method of electing directors may not be on an ad hoc basis, but must be set forth in or authorized by the articles or bylaws. The board in overseeing an election must comply with the fiduciary standards set forth in §8.30 [35-2-416] regardless of the manner in which the election is conducted."

35-2-542. Corporation's acceptance of votes.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.27 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 7.27 [this section] sets forth the rules under which corporations may accept or reject the signature on a vote, consent, waiver or proxy appointment, as that of a member. Section 7.27 [this section] is designed to provide certainty and protect nonprofit corporations and their officers and agents who act in good faith.

35-2-543. Voting agreements.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 7.30 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 7.30 [this section] is consistent with current statutory and case law in other jurisdictions.

35-2-608. Approval of plan of merger.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.01 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-601 [now repealed]. Section 11.01(a), (b)(1), (b)(2), and (c) [subsections (1), (2)(a), (2)(b), and (3) of this section] are in substance identical to provisions contained in MCA §35-2-601 [now repealed]. The MCA used the terms merger or consolidation, while the RMNCA only uses merger.

Section 11.01(b)(3) and (4) [subsections (2)(c) and (2)(d) of this section] would be additions to the MCA. These provisions require disclosure of the effects of the mergers on memberships in a corporation. This disclosure provides members with a basis for making an informed decision regarding the proposed merger.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 249 near beginning of (1) substituted "one or more nonprofit" for "profit".

35-2-609. Limitations on mergers by public benefit or religious corporations.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.02 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. According to the ABA Official Comments: "The provisions of Section 11.02 [this section] are designed to prevent the assets of public benefit or religious corporations from being diverted from their charitable or public purposes as a result of merger."

35-2-610. Action on plan by board, members, and third persons.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.03 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-603 [now repealed]. The provisions of Section 11.03 [this section] are more extensive and descriptive of the procedures required to approve a plan of merger.

35-2-611. Articles of merger.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.04(1), (2), (3) [subsections (1), (2), and (3) of this section] are in substance identical to provisions contained in MCA §35-2-604 [now repealed]. Section 11.04(4) [subsection (4) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. This requirement prevents the corporation from eliminating a person's right to approve an amendment by merging with another corporation.

MCA §35-2-604 [now repealed] provides for the issuance of a certificate of merger or consolidation. Under the RMNCA this is no longer necessary as certificates are not issued under the standardized filing requirements of Section 1.20 [35-2-119].

Administrative Rules

ARM 44.5.114 Corporations — profit and nonprofit fees.

35-2-612. Effect of merger.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.05 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-605 [now repealed]. The RMNCA under §11.20 [this was evidently intended to refer to 11.05, now this section] provides that merger takes effect upon a proper filing instead of upon the issuance of a certificate of merger or consolidation as §35-2-605 [now repealed] provides. Section 11.05 [this section] is more concise than §35-2-605 [now repealed] concerning what property and rights the surviving corporation possesses.

35-2-613. Merger with foreign corporation.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.06 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-606 [now repealed]. Section 11.06 [this section] is more concise than MCA §35-2-606 [now repealed].

35-2-614. Bequests, devises, and gifts.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 11.07 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The provision provides corporations with the authority to properly handle gifts, bequests and grants that take effect or remain payable after a merger. The specific provisions of a will or other instrument will have control over the statute, but a provision requiring that a bequest or gift be used for a specific purpose is not negated by a merger. After merger the gift or bequest can only be used for the specified purposes.

35-2-616. Sale of assets in regular course of activities — mortgage of assets.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 12.01 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-607 [now repealed]. Section 12.01 [this section] requires membership approval only if it is provided for in the articles of incorporation. MCA §35-2-607 [now repealed] is ambiguous concerning membership approval; approval is required "[I]f there are members entitled to vote"

35-2-617. Sale of assets other than in regular course of activities.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 12.02 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. If the sale of substantially all of the corporations [sic] assets is not in the regular course of business the RMNCA provides greater protection against the misuse of assets. Membership approval is required if the corporation has members and before the sale a public benefit or a religious corporation must give written notice of the sale to the attorney general.

Part 7Dissolution and Liquidation*Part Compiler's Comments

35-2-720. Dissolution by incorporators or directors and third persons.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.01(a) [subsection (1) of this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-701(2) [now repealed]. The MCA provides a specific statute for distribution of assets, MCA §35-2-702 [now repealed], instead of a plan requirement as contained in 14.01(c) [subsection (3) of this section].

35-2-721. Dissolution by directors, members, and third persons.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.02 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-701(1) [now repealed]. The provisions of §14.02 [this section] are more extensive and detailed.

35-2-722. Notices to the attorney general.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.03 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The provisions of §11.02 [35-2-609] are designed to prevent the assets of public benefit or religious corporations from being diverted from their charitable or public purposes through a dissolution.

The submission of a list of assets and to whom they were transferred provides a record should there be a question as to the propriety of any transfer. This provision (14.03(c) [subsection (3) of this section]) only applies to public benefit corporations.

35-2-723. Articles of dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.04 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-705 [now repealed]. MCA §35-2-705 [now repealed] provides that the articles can be filed when all of the debts and obligations have been paid or provided for, and all of the remaining assets or property have been conveyed or transferred. Under Section 14.04 [this section] a corporation can file its articles any time after the dissolution is authorized.

Under the RMNCA unless the articles of dissolution specify a later effective date a corporation is dissolved upon the filing of articles of dissolution. Dissolution is effective under the MCA when the certificate of dissolution is issued. The RMNCA is designed to simplify the dissolution process.

Section 14.04(6) and (7) [subsection (1)(f) and (1)(g) of this section] would be additions to the MCA to provide needed clarity to the law.

35-2-724. Revocation of dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.05 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-704 [now repealed]. MCA §35-2-704 [now repealed] provides that revocation may be accomplished at any time prior to the issuance of a certificate of dissolution. Section 14.05 [this section] provides that a corporation may revoke its dissolution within 120 days of its effective date. Because of this the RMNCA provides a corporation with more flexibility in revoking its dissolution than the MCA.

The procedures for revocation under §14.05 [this section] require approval of revocation in the same manner as the authorization for dissolution. This provides consistency in the RMNCA since the manner of authorization for dissolution may vary. Section 14.05 [this section] should be cross referenced to §4.01(b)(4) [35-2-305(2)(d)], concerning the reservation of the corporate name for the duration of the 120-day revocation period.

35-2-725. Effect of dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.06 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-706(2) and §35-2-702 [both repealed]. In §14.06 [this section] a dissolved corporation continues its corporate existence, while MCA §35-2-706(2) [now repealed] provides that upon issuance of the certificate of dissolution the existence of the corporation shall cease, except for suits, other proceedings and appropriate action.

The provision[s] in §14.06 [this section] provide a corporation with more clarity and flexibility concerning the winding up and liquidating of its affairs than the MCA.

35-2-726. Known claims against dissolved corporation.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.07 [this section] corresponds to provisions in MCA §35-2-701(3) and §35-2-719 [both repealed]. For judicial proceedings §14.07 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-714 [now repealed]. Section 14.07 [this section] provides a dissolving corporation with a prompt and orderly means of resolving known claims against it. The MCA is deficient in this area as a claimant has five years to assert a claim.

35-2-727. Unknown claims against dissolved corporations.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section corresponds to MCA §35-2-719 [now repealed], but contains several material changes. Only subsection (b) of §14.07 [35-2-726(2)] is retained from the RMNCA.

The provisions change the existing law as follows:

(1) Section 14.07 [35-2-726] makes it clear that claims may be brought against a corporation, even if they arise after dissolution. Existing law arguably does not provide a remedy for claims against dissolved corporations arising after dissolution. See, e.g., Blankenship v. Demmler, 89 Ill. App. 3d 569, 411 N.E.2d 1153 (1980).

(2) Claims against dissolved corporations must be made within five years under the MCA. Under the above proposal the five-year limitation period is abolished. Instead claims must be made within the normal limitation period.

(3) Subsection (b) [subsection (2) of this section] codifies the common law trust fund doctrine that provides that the property of a corporation is considered a trust fund for the payment of corporate debts. As such, members take assets upon dissolution subject to the claims of creditors. Codifying this doctrine adds certainty to the law.

(4) Subsection (c) [subsection (3) of this section] codifies the holding in North American Asbestos Corp. v. Superior Court, 180 Cal. App. 3d 902, 225 Cal. 877 (1986). The case holds that when the corporate code of a state of incorporation regarding limitation periods for claims against dissolved corporations different from the corporate code in the jurisdiction where the claim arises, the law of the jurisdiction where the claim arises applies.

35-2-728. Grounds for judicial dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.31 [this was evidently intended to refer to §14.30, now this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-711 [now repealed].

Section 14.31(a)(1) [this was evidently intended to refer to §14.30(a)(1), now subsection (1)(a) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. This subsection continues the RMNCA's policy of protecting the public interest in public benefit corporations. The attorney general is empowered to proceed for judicial dissolution when a public benefit corporation is unfairly or fraudulently failing to carry out its legitimate purposes, or when assets are being diverted for the personal benefit of officers, directors or other individuals.

Section 14.31(a)(2) [this was evidently intended to refer to §14.30(a)(2), now subsection (1)(b) of this section] provides protection for religious corporations as their articles or bylaws may prevent a member or director from petitioning for dissolution. Also under this subsection corporations are protected from harassment by a single member as a proceeding must be commenced by 50 or more members or members holding 5% or more of the voting power. Currently the MCA allows a single member to commence a proceeding.

Section 14.31(b) [this was evidently intended to refer to §14.30(b), now subsection (2) of this section] provides an important clarification of the law to courts not contained in the MCA. Since dissolution is a remedy of last resort this subsection gives the court authority to consider reasonable alternatives and adopt an appropriate remedy.

35-2-729. Procedure for judicial dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.31(a) [subsection (1) of this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-711(2) [now repealed]. Section 14.3(d) [this was evidently intended to refer to §14.31(d), now subsection (4) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA.

35-2-730. Receivership or custodianship.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.32 [this section] corresponds to provisions in MCA §35-2-712 and MCA §35-2-713 [both repealed]. Section 14.32 [this section] is designed to supplement provisions regarding the power of courts to appoint receivers and custodians. MCA §35-2-713 [now repealed] provides for the qualification and bond of receivers. The language in MCA §35-2-713 [now repealed] is ambiguous but it appears that bonding of the receiver is mandatory in all cases, while it is permissive under §14.32(b) [subsection (2) of this section]. MCA §35-2-713 [now repealed] requires the receiver to be a U.S. citizen, and if a corporation is a receiver, it must be a corporation for profit. RMNCA §14.32 [this section] allows a domestic or foreign business (instead of corporation).

RMNCA §14.32(e) [subsection (5) of this section] corresponds to MCA §35-1-712(4) [now repealed]. The provisions in the MCA are broader, as expenses are allowed for attorneys involved in the proceeding not just receiver's counsel.

35-2-731. Decree of dissolution.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 14.33(a) [subsection (1) of this section] corresponds to MCA §§35-2-716 and 717 [both repealed]. Under MCA §35-2-716 [now repealed] the court enters a decree of dissolution when liquidation is complete; after the decree is entered the existence of the corporation ceases. In contrast, under RMNCA §14.33 [this section] the court directs the winding up and liquidation of the corporation's affairs after the decree of dissolution is entered. RMNCA §14.33(b) [subsection (2) of this section] by referring to §§14.06, 14.07 and 14.08 [35-2-725, 35-2-726, and 35-2-727] corresponds to MCA §35-2-713(3) and §35-2-714 [both repealed].

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 15.01(a) [subsection (1) of this section] in substance is identical to MCA §35-2-801(1) [now repealed]. Section 15.01(b) [subsection (2) of this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-802 [now repealed]. Section 15.01(b) [subsection (2) of this section] expands the list of activities which do not constitute the transaction of business from the current MCA by adding subsections (4), (5), and (9) [subsections (2)(d), (2)(e), and (2)(i) of this section]. The new exemptions are added primarily because of U.S. Constitutional considerations. The ABA Official Comments state:

"A corporation is not 'transacting business' . . . if it is transacting business in interstate commerce . . . or soliciting or obtaining orders that must be accepted outside the state before they become contracts. . . . These limitations reflect the provisions of the United States Constitution that grant to the United States Congress exclusive power over interstate commerce, and preclude states from imposing restrictions or conditions upon this commerce. These sections should be construed in a manner consistent with judicial decisions under the United States Constitution." Official Comment to Model Business Corporation Act Section 15.01.

Section 15.01(c) [subsection (3) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. Section 15.01(c) [subsection (3) of this section] states that the list in §15.01(b) [subsection (2) of this section] is not exhaustive, this clarifies a court's discretion in determining whether other conduct constitutes the transaction of business. The committee opted to adopt the RMNCA, but revise §15.01(b)(9) [subsection (2)(i) of this section] as the RMBCA has been revised by the committee. Section 15.01 [this section] is consistent with provisions in the RMBCA.

35-2-821. Consequences of transacting business without authority.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 15.02 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-803 [now repealed].

Case Notes

Argument Based on Different Subsection of Statute on Appeal Than Subsection Relied Upon at Trial Rejected: Unified Industries based certain arguments to the District Court on subsection (1) of this section. On appeal, it argued that the District Court's decision that it was transacting business illegally was incorrect under subsection (5) of this section. The Supreme Court held that the argument that subsection (5) validated Unified Industries' transaction of business in the state was totally distinct from the argument that it made under subsection (1) to the District Court and therefore could not be raised for the first time on appeal. Unified Indus., Inc. v. Easley, 1998 MT 145, 289 M 255, 961 P2d 100, 55 St. Rep. 574 (1998).

Party's Pleading as Admission of Transacting Business in Montana: Unified Industries sued Easley and others for an easement across their property. The defendants claimed that Unified Industries had not established a right to an easement because it was not licensed to transact business in the state during the time it claimed that its right to an easement arose. On appeal, Unified Industries argued that it was exempt from the requirement to obtain a certificate of authority. The Supreme Court held that Unified Industries' obtainment of a certificate of authority in order to bring an action against the defendant's and its statement in District Court that it had the right to sue after obtaining the certificate were implicit concessions that it was transacting business in the state and therefore it could not on appeal argue that it was exempt from state registration requirements. Unified Indus., Inc. v. Easley, 1998 MT 145, 289 M 255, 961 P2d 100, 55 St. Rep. 574 (1998).

Official Comments: Section 15.04 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-810 [now repealed].

The material difference between the statutes is that MCA §35-2-810 [now repealed] requires a foreign corporation to amend its certificate of authority if it desires to pursue other or additional purposes than those set forth in its prior application.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 15.06(a)-(d) [subsections (1) through (4) of this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-805 [now repealed], but differ in the following aspects:

A. Section 15.06 [this section] does not require the use of words like corporation, company, or incorporated in the name.

B. Section 15.06 [this section] allows the use of a fictitious name.

C. The provisions of §15.06 [this section] are more extensive.

House Bill No. 552 was approved April 6, 1991, as Ch. 368, L. 1991, and included the repeal of 35-1-302 and 35-1-303. The Code Commissioner has therefore changed the text of 35-2-826 in compliance with the coordination instruction.

35-2-832. Grounds for revocation.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 15.30 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-818 [now repealed]. Section 15.30(b) [subsection (2) of this section] gives the attorney general power to proceed for revocation if the foreign corporation would be considered a public benefit corporation if incorporated in this state. This provision continues the RMNCA's policy of safeguarding the public interest when the activities of public benefit corporations are in question.

35-2-833. Procedure for and effect of revocation.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 15.31 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-819 and §35-2-818 [both repealed]. The notice provisions of §15.31 [this section] are designed to give the offending corporation an opportunity to avoid revocation of its certificate of authority.

Official Comments: Section 16.22 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-901 and MCA §35-2-902 [both repealed]. Section 16.22(a)(6) [subsection (1)(f) of this section], (7) & (8) [evidently omitted from the proposed legislation] would be an addition to the current MCA. Section 16.22 [this section] deletes the MCA provision which provides that a mailing prior to the final due date meets requirements for compliance.

The Committee deleted a requirement from the RMNCA that corporations designate in their annual report whether they are public benefit, mutual benefit or religious corporations. Such designation is accomplished only by a statement in the corporation's articles. To allow designation by a simple statement in an annual report does not provide the safeguards that an amendment to articles of incorporation does.

35-2-906. Corporate records.Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 16.01 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-509(1) [now repealed]. The provisions of §16.01 [this section] are more extensive and detailed than those contained in MCA §35-2-509(1) [now repealed]. The ABA Official Comments state: "The underlying rationale of §16.01(a) [subsection (1) of this section] is that there should be a permanent record of actions taken by the members, the board and committees of the board acting in place of the board. The section does not require that the minutes or record of an action include a discussion of or reasons for an action.

Section 16.01(b) [subsection (2) of this section] requires a corporation to maintain appropriate accounting records. The required records are the current accounting records. The statute does not require that the records be kept permanently nor does it address how long accounting records should be kept. The ABA Official Comments state: "The question of what accounting records are 'appropriate' depends on the nature, size and other characteristics of the corporation. Numerous nonprofit corporations have a relatively small amount of money and operate with volunteer staffs. In such cases, 'appropriate accounting records' may be composed of checkbooks, canceled checks and receipts. In the case of entities with significant funds, more detailed accounting records are appropriate."

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 16.02 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-509(2) [now repealed]. The provisions of §16.02 [this section] are more extensive and detailed than those contained in MCA §35-2-509(2) [now repealed].

MCA §35-2-509(2) [now repealed] states: "All books and records of a corporation may be inspected by any member . . . for any proper purpose at any reasonable time."

The provisions of §16.02 [this section] provide a member with automatic access to certain records after the member gives the corporation five days notice. A demand to copy and inspect records must be made in good faith and for a proper purpose if the access is not automatic under the statute.

The articles or bylaws of a religious corporation may limit or abolish the rights of a member to inspect and copy any corporate record.

35-2-908. Scope of inspection rights.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 16.03(a) [subsection (1) of this section] in substance is identical to a provision in MCA §35-2-509(2) [now repealed], except for the addition of copying rights.

Section 16.03(b), (c) & (d) [subsections (2), (3), and (4) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA.

35-2-909. Court-ordered inspection.

Official Comments: Section 16.05 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. A membership list may not be obtained or used for any purpose unrelated to a member's interest as member without the board's consent.

35-2-911. Financial statements for members.

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not from RMNCA, which, in the judgment of the committee, places a larger burden than necessary on the corporation. Instead this section is derived from MCA §35-1-513(5) [now repealed].

Official Comments

Official Comments: This section is not derived from the RMNCA. Instead, it is derived from MCA §§35-2-1001 and 35-2-1002 [both repealed]. The RMNCA suggests that the legislature establish filing fees by statute. Establishing fees by statute is cumbersome. Further, amending those fees as a result of increased costs would require legislative action.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 396 substituted (2) requiring that fees must be set and deposited in accordance with 2-15-405 for former (3) that read: "(3) The fees presented under this section must be reasonably related to the costs of processing the documents and preparing and providing the services. The secretary of state shall maintain records sufficient to support the fees established under this section"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.30(2) [subsection (2) of this section] is in substance identical to MCA §35-2-1101 [now repealed]. Section 1.30(2) [subsection (2) of this section] clarifies the power of the secretary of state to make rules to perform the duties required of it.

35-2-1108. Forms.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.21 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-1102 and §35-2-1104 [both repealed]. This language, while derived from the RMNCA, contains two deviations:

- (a) The section makes it clear that the forms should be promulgated by administrative rule.
- (b) This section allows the secretary of state to prescribe computer formats for forms, when desirable.

35-2-1109. Filing duty of secretary of state.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.25 [this section] provides the filing duty of the secretary of state, instead of enumerating the duty in different parts as the MCA does. Section 1.25(a) & (b) [subsections (1) and (2) of this section] are substantially the same as the mechanical filing duties contained in MCA §§35-2-203(1), 35-2-209(1), 35-2-303(1), 35-2-604(2), 35-2-706(2), 35-2-808(2), 35-2-817(1) [all repealed].

Section 1.25(b) [subsection (2) of this section] eliminates the necessity of the issuance of documents such as a certificate of incorporation. The ABA Official Comments state:

Section 1.25(b) [subsection (2) of this section] provides that acceptance of articles of incorporation or other documents is evidenced merely by the issuance of a fee receipt or acknowledgment of receipt if no fee is required. Earlier versions of the Model Act and the statutes of many states provided that acceptance by the secretary of state is evidenced by a

'certificate' (e.g., of incorporation, of merger, or of amendment). This older practice was not retained in the revised Model Act because it was felt desirable to reduce the number of pieces of paper issued by the secretary of state. Under the older practice most state offices routinely issued both fee receipts and certificates. A single document — the fee receipt or acknowledgment — should sufficiently indicate that the document has been accepted for filing, and in fact many states in recent years have dispensed with the formal certificate.

Section 1.25(d) [subsection (4) of this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The ABA Official Comments state:

Under section 1.25 [this section] the secretary of state is required to file a document if it 'satisfies the requirements of section 1.20 [35-2-119].' This language should be contrasted with earlier versions of the Model Act (and many state statutes) that required the secretary of state to ascertain whether the document 'conformed with law' before filing it. The purpose of this change is to limit the discretion of the secretary of state to a ministerial role in reviewing the contents of documents. If the document submitted is in the form prescribed and contains the information required by section 1.20 [35-2-119] and the applicable provision of the Model Act, the secretary of state under section 1.25 [this section] must file it even though it contains additional provisions the secretary of state may feel are irrelevant or not authorized by the Model Act or by general legal principles. Consistently with this approach, section 1.25(d) [subsection (4) of this section] states that the filing duty of the secretary of state is ministerial and provides that filing a document with the secretary of state does not affect the validity or invalidity of any provision contained in the document and does not create any presumption with respect to any provision. Persons adversely affected by provisions in a document may test their validity in a proceeding appropriate for that purpose.

35-2-1110. Appeal from secretary of state's refusal to file document.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.26 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-1103(1) & (2) [now repealed].

35-2-1111. Evidentiary effect of copy of filed document.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 1.27 [this section] corresponds to provisions contained in MCA §35-2-1105 [now repealed]. The MCA provides that all certificates issued by the secretary of state and all certified copies of documents filed in the secretary of state's office shall be taken as prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated.

35-2-1112. Certificate of existence.

Official Comments

Official Comment: Section 1.28 [this section] would be an addition to the MCA. The current MCA does not contain a statutory provision defining a certificate of existence. A certificate of existence is essentially a certificate of good standing.

Official Comments

Official Comments to §§35-2-1301 Through 35-2-1307: There has long been confusion as to whether members of a nonprofit corporation may sue derivatively [sic] to enforce the rights of the corporation. See H. OLECK, NONPROFIT CORPORATIONS, ORGANIZATIONS, AND ASSOCIATIONS (4th ed. 1980). One court, for example, has gone so far as to find that the mere fact that one contributes to a nonprofit corporation gives the person the right to initiate a derivative action. Atwell v. Bide-a-Wee Home Association, 59 Misc. 2d, 321, 299 N.Y.S.2d 40 (Sup. Ct. 1969).

The drafters of the RMNCA suggests that this dispute be clarified with legislation. While the committee agrees, the committee did not opt for the RMNCA suggestions. The RMNCA suggestions seem to leave open difficult questions as to when prior demand must be made on the board of directors by the complainant and when an independent board could dismiss the action.

In order to more adequately balance the rights of corporations to be free of harassing litigation, with the needs of members to require the corporation to act to achieve the charitable purpose, the committee's suggestions track ABA's suggestion for "for profit" corporations. The ABA's Comments concerning derivative suits can be found at 45 BUS. LAW. 1241 (May 1990).

Finally, as noted by the ABA, federal or state constitutional provisions may prohibit courts from considering derivative suits brought on behalf of religious corporations.

35-2-1401. Prohibited distributions.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 13.01 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-108 [now repealed]. Distribution is defined at §1.40(10) [35-2-114(10)].

35-2-1402. Authorized distributions.

Official Comments

Official Comments: Section 13.02 [this section] corresponds to MCA §35-2-108 [now repealed]. MCA §35-2-108 [now repealed], however, is silent concerning the purchase of memberships. The main focus of MCA §35-2-108 [now repealed] is to prevent dividend payments and allow for distributions upon dissolution, thus it does not expressly differentiate between prohibited distributions and authorized distributions.

Part 1 General

35-4-108. Short title.

Official Comments

This model professional corporation act is designed as a supplement to the Model Business Corporation Act. Section 27 [35-4-111] provides that the state's business corporation act shall apply to professional corporations except to the extent its provisions are inconsistent with the supplemental act. Accordingly, the supplement must be read in conjunction with the Model Business Corporation Act which it closely parallels in structure and semantics. With appropriate modifications, however, this model act may readily be adapted for use as a supplement to other business corporation acts.

35-4-109. Definitions.

Official Comments

Paragraph (1) [(5) in Montana]. The definition of "professional service" limits and describes the purposes for which corporations may be organized under Section 3 [35-4-205].

As a general proposition, corporations may not be formed under business corporation acts for the purpose of practicing a profession. In the absence of any statutory definition of the word "profession," the courts have held that, although a licensing requirement is characteristic of the professions, all licensed services are not necessarily professional services which may not be rendered by corporations. Accordingly, the determination as to whether particular licensed services may be rendered by corporations has been made on a case by case basis based upon construction of the state business corporation law or the applicable licensing law.

Some of the existing state statutes under which professional persons are permitted to incorporate cover all licensed services. Statutes of this type are not restricted to persons who are prohibited from incorporating under the business corporation law. Other existing state statutes limit those who may incorporate to specific professions described in a single statute or in a series of similar statutes each applicable to one profession. The definition of "professional service" in paragraph (1) [(5) in Montana] has the effect of restricting the use of the act to the practice of the professions. Rather than listing designated professions, however, the model act follows the precedent set by many existing state statutes of defining professional services as those licensed services which may not be rendered by a corporation organized under the business corporation law.

Paragraph (2) [(3) in Montana]. See Section 26 [35-4-208] with respect to jurisdiction of the licensing authority over professional corporations.

Paragraphs (5) [(6) in Montana] and (6) [not adopted in Montana]. See comment following Section 9 [35-4-301].

While most states have adopted a single general professional corporation law applicable to all covered professions, several states have adopted a series of professional corporation laws applicable to individual professions. Section 28 [35-4-110] of the model act sets forth procedures with respect to existing corporations which include mandatory provisions applicable to corporations incorporated under a repealed act and also provisions for voluntary compliance with this act by corporations organized under acts which may not be repealed.

Part 2Organization and Regulation*35-4-205. Purposes of corporation.*Official Comments

Apparently most state legislatures have felt that it was necessary to limit the purposes of a professional corporation to the practice of a single profession, and subsection (a) [combined with (b) in Montana] follows the large majority of existing state statutes in this respect. However, the ethical proscriptions of the various professions are not uniform in restricting the activities of a professional group to a single professional field. Some professional groups such as engineers and architects are permitted to carry on joint practice, and in other fields, such as the field of medicine and allied health professions, the extent to which professional practices may be combined is an evolving subject. Accordingly, subsection (b) [combined with (a) in Montana] shifts the responsibility for determining the extent to which two or more professions may combine and the extent to which a professional corporation may engage in business activities to the licensing statutes and regulations governing each profession where variations in public policy and ethical requirements of the various professions may be properly treated.

35-4-206. Corporate name.Official Comments

Existing state statutes vary in the selection of terms required in the corporate name as corporate designators. To encourage uniformity and avoid confusion the model act approves and requires only the term "professional corporation" or its abbreviation. The Model Business Corporation Act corporate name provision is further modified in paragraph (3)(i) [(3)(a)] to permit similarity of names if the similarity results from the use of personal names of persons associated with the organization. Paragraph (4) authorizes the licensing authority to impose by rule additional requirements appropriate to a particular profession.

Official Comments

Section 14 [35-4-207] requires that no less than one-half the directors and the officers other than the secretary and treasurer of a professional corporation be licensed professionals. The professional corporation statute[s] of many states require that all directors be licensed while others require less than all. Most existing statutes also prohibit unlicensed persons from serving as officers with variations as to whether all or only certain designated offices are subject to the requirement.

Part 3

Shares and Shareholders

35-4-301. Issuance and transfer of shares.

Official Comments

The model act departs from existing state statutes in permitting shares of a professional corporation to be issued to persons licensed outside the state of incorporation and to partnerships and other professional corporations authorized to render a professional service permitted by the articles of incorporation of the corporation.

Pennsylvania also permits a professional corporation to issue shares to persons licensed in another state, but existing statutes generally restrict shareholders to natural persons. If shareholders are not liable for debts of the corporation, however, there is no policy reason to prohibit the issuance of shares to another corporation which is subject to the same professional corporation requirements, and under Section 9 [35-4-301] of the model act professional corporations may be given the same flexibility in planning the corporate structure as business corporations. If shareholders are personally liable for the performance of professional services rendered on behalf of the corporation, however, as they may be under either alternate 2 or 3 of Section 11(d) [35-4-404(3) (Montana has alternate 1)], then the holding company device may be used to avoid personal liability, and accordingly, paragraph (3) of subsection (a) [35-4-301(1)(c)] should be deleted if alternate 2 or 3 of Section 11(d) [35-4-404(3) (Montana has alternate 1)] is adopted.

Section 9 [35-4-301] of the model act is applicable to all classes of shares issued by a professional corporation. No qualifications are imposed by the model act (or by existing state statutes) on holders of debt securities. It is unlikely that convertible debt will be issued by a professional corporation, since the corporation will not have the power to issue its shares upon conversion if the holder is not a qualified person at the time the shares are to be issued.

35-4-302. Corporation's right to acquire its own shares.

Official Comments

Nearly all professional corporation statutes require that shareholders be licensed professional persons, and to implement this requirement most statutes require that the corporation repurchase shares which have become the property of unlicensed persons through operation of law. The usual business corporation law restriction against impairment of capital by purchase of the corporation's own shares may conflict with this statutory requirement for the purchase of shares of a professional corporation. Section 7 [35-4-302] of the model act resolves the conflict by removing the Model Business Corporation Act limitation on purchase of shares to the extent of available earned surplus or capital surplus while retaining the insolvency test of Section 6 [35-4-403] of the Model Business Corporation Act. Section 10(a) [35-4-311(1)] of the professional corporation supplement requires the corporation to repurchase shares "to the extent of funds which may be legally made available for such purchase." Thus the requirement of Section 10 [35-4-311] that the professional corporation repurchase the shares of a disqualified person will be subject to the insolvency restriction against repurchase but will not be subject to the capital and surplus restriction.

Compiler's Comments

35-4-303. Proxies and voting trusts.

Official Comments

Section 13 [35-4-303] of the model act requires that the holder of a proxy and the parties to a voting trust agreement be qualified to own shares in the corporation. If shareholders may be personally liable for the performance of professional services rendered on behalf of the corporation, voting trusts should be prohibited to prevent their use to avoid personal liability. See comment following Section 9 [35-4-301]. With regard to other types of agreements regarding voting of shares, Section 34 [35-1-402 (now repealed)] of the Model Business Corporation Act providing that agreements among shareholders regarding voting shall be valid and enforceable is unchanged by the professional corporation supplement.

Pursuant to Section 33 [35-1-401 (now repealed)] of the Model Business Corporation Act the shares of a professional corporation held by an administrator, executor, guardian or conservator may be voted without a transfer of such shares, and shares held by a receiver may be voted by the receiver without transfer if such authority is contained in the order of a court by which the receiver was appointed. Upon the death or insolvency of a major shareholder, it may be necessary to dissolve the corporation or amend its articles by changing its purposes to those of a business corporation. The interest of the shareholder's estate will be protected by permitting the holder of his shares to vote on such proposals. In view of the requirement of Section 14 [35-4-207] that one-half the directors and the principal officers of a corporation be qualified shareholders, there is no significant risk that an unqualified person may exercise control over the professional practice of the corporation during the period that shares of the corporation may be owned by the estate or receiver of a shareholder under Section 10 [35-4-311]. Accordingly, the model act does not modify the provisions of the Model Business Corporation Act regarding voting by administrators and receivers.

Compiler's Comments

Source: Section 35-4-303 is based on Section 13 of the Professional Corporation Supplement to the Model Business Corporation Act.

35-4-311. Death or disqualification of a shareholder.Official Comments

Existing state statutes generally require that the shares of a deceased or disqualified shareholder be transferred to a qualified shareholder or purchased by the corporation within a specified period of time following the shareholder's death or disqualification. The model act requires payment of fair value for such shares if the corporation does not establish an alternative method, and the procedure for determining fair value set forth in subsections (b) through (f) [(2) through (6)] parallels the procedure set forth in Section 81 [35-1-907 (now repealed)] of the Model Business Corporation Act with respect to the determination of rights of dissenting shareholders. Shares of a deceased or disqualified shareholder that have not been transferred or purchased within the time limits specified in subsection (g) [(7)] are cancelled, and the shareholder's interest becomes a creditor's claim under this section.

One of the troublesome aspects of the requirement that a shareholder of a professional corporation be licensed to practice the profession is the disposition of the corporation entity of a deceased sole practitioner. Under Section 33 [35-1-401 (now repealed)] of the Model Business Corporation Act the executor of the estate of a sole practitioner may vote the decedent's shares in his professional corporation. See comment following Section 13 [35-4-303]. Accordingly, if the shares of a deceased shareholder are not transferred, the executor may vote the shares to dissolve the corporation or to amend the articles of incorporation to change its purposes to those of a business corporation. If the executor elects to dissolve, a licensed member of the profession must act as director and president during the winding up of the corporation's affairs. If the executor elects to amend the articles, he may do so himself by signing and filing articles of amendment pursuant to Section 15 [35-4-312].

See comment following Section 7 [35-4-302] concerning the effect of statutory restrictions against purchases by a corporation of its own shares resulting in impairment of capital or insolvency. To further reduce the possibility of conflict between the insolvency restriction of Section 7 [35-4-302] and the requirement for purchase of shares under Section 10 [35-4-311] in the event of a judicial determination of fair value, the court is expressly authorized in subsection (d) [(4)] to order that the judgment be paid in installments.

35-4-312. Amendment of articles of incorporation by personal representative of sole shareholder's estate.Official Comments

Section 15 [35-4-312] enables the professional corporation of the sole practitioner to continue in existence following the death of its shareholder and simplifies the procedure for amendment of articles set forth in the Model Business Corporation Act. Without some modification of the Model Business Corporation Act procedure, the executor of the deceased shareholder's estate would be required to find another member of the profession to serve as director and president for the purpose of adopting and filing articles of amendment.

Part 4 Operation

35-4-401. General powers.Official Comments

Under existing statutes professional corporations generally have all the powers of business corporations. The model act restricts only the power to participate in partnerships and similar enterprises engaged in activities not permitted to the professional corporation. Investment in limited partnerships as a limited partner would not be prohibited by the model act.

35-4-402. Prohibited activities.Official Comments

Although not normally found in a business corporation law, an express statutory prohibition against ultra vires acts is fairly common in the existing state professional corporation laws. This prohibition provides a basis on which the licensing authority may initiate enforcement action pursuant to Section 18 [35-4-503] to prevent a professional corporation from engaging in prohibited activities.

35-4-403. Rendering services.Official Comments

A statement similar to the first clause of Section 6 [35-4-403] to make it clear that unlicensed employees of professional corporations are not authorized to render professional services is included in the statutes of all states. The second clause which is also common in existing statutes is intended to insure that the use of para-professionals and other assistants customarily employed by professionals will not be inhibited by the first clause and also to recognize that a licensed employee of a professional corporation may render services in his individual capacity rather than as an employee of the corporation depending upon the circumstances of his employment. For example, an employee of a professional corporation may render professional services in his individual capacity in states in which the professional corporation may not be admitted as a foreign corporation.

Compiler's Comments

35-4-404. Responsibility for services.Official Comments

Although all existing state statutes include some provision concerning professional liability or professional responsibility, most statutes are silent as to the vicarious liability of shareholders leaving this question to be determined by the business corporation law. Several statutes clearly provide that shareholder liability is limited as in a business corporation. A few expressly state that shareholders shall be jointly and severally liable for debts of the corporation. And a few, either by statute or rule of practice, condition limited liability for some professions on maintenance of professional liability insurance. A majority of the statutes contain simply a provision to the effect that the statute does not modify any law applicable to the relationship between a person furnishing professional services and a person receiving such services including liability arising out of such professional services. Although one commentator has suggested that this statutory provision preserves the mutual agency and unlimited liability of partnerships, Federal district courts in Ohio and Florida have held, in the context of cases involving the status of a professional corporation for Federal income tax purposes, that shareholders have limited liability under statutes of this type. Accordingly, it seems that shareholders of professional corporations have limited liability under existing statutes in most states.

Section 11 [35-4-404] of the model act states affirmatively the rules for liability of the professional corporation, its employees, and its shareholders resulting from negligence in the performance of professional services. Consistent with the common law doctrine of respondeat superior, subsection (b) [(1)] limits liability of a professional employee to his personal negligence, and subsection (c) [(2)] imposes liability on the corporation for conduct of professional employees within the scope of their employment or of their apparent authority.

Three alternative provisions as to liability of shareholders are proposed in subsection (d) [(3)]: limited liability as in a business corporation, vicarious personal liability as in a partnership, and personal liability limited in amount conditioned upon financial responsibility in the form of insurance or a surety bond. Alternate 3 [Montana has alternate 1] would permit the licensing authority for each profession to establish the minimum amount of security required as a condition for limiting liability of shareholders and to impose requirements as to the coverage provided by the policy or bond representing the security. The minimum amount of security designated in alternate 3 [Montana has alternate 1] would apply to any profession only if no minimum has been fixed by the licensing authority for the profession, but no attempt is made in the model act to specify minimum coverage requirements. Each alternate recognizes by the introductory phrase, "Except as otherwise provided by statute," that more specific rules as to shareholder liability may be enacted with respect to a particular profession or professions, but the formulation of statutory requirements as to either the minimum amount of security or coverage for particular professions is beyond the scope of this model act.

Limited liability of shareholders has historically been considered by the courts and by the Internal Revenue Service as one of several characteristics that distinguish the corporation from the partnership. It should be noted, therefore, that the choice of alternates in subsection (d) [(3)] may affect the tax status of professional corporations formed pursuant to the act.

35-4-411. Admission of foreign professional corporations — application — revocation.

Official Comments

Many small as well as large professional practices are conducted in more than one state by individuals licensed to practice in more than one state or by partnerships whose members are licensed to practice in various states. A serious defect in many existing state statutes is the absence of any provision concerning foreign professional corporations, although several statutes do specifically provide for admission of foreign professional corporations.

Under the foreign corporation provisions of state business corporation laws, foreign corporations are generally admitted with few if any restrictions other than restrictions as to the use of corporate names. In order to prevent a professional corporation from avoiding the professional corporation laws of the state in which it carries on its practice by incorporating in a state with more lenient professional corporation requirements, Section 19 [35-4-411] requires that foreign corporations comply with the domestic state law requirements concerning corporate purposes and qualification of shareholders, directors and officers. Under Section 6 [35-4-403] a foreign corporation may render professional services only through persons permitted to render such services in the state. Section 11 [35-4-404] concerning responsibility for professional services and security for professional responsibility is applicable to foreign corporations as well as domestic corporations; and foreign corporations are subject to regulation by the licensing authority to the same extent as domestic corporations under Section 26 [35-4-208].

Section 19(b) [35-4-411(2)] requires that a professional corporation obtain a certificate of authority only if the corporation maintains an office in the state. This provision would permit foreign professional corporations greater freedom in rendering professional services in the state without complying with foreign corporation law requirements than is permitted in the case of business corporations.

Section 16 [35-4-501] permits mergers and consolidations among professional corporations and business corporations to the extent that professional and business purposes may be combined under Section 3 [35-4-205]. Many existing professional corporation statutes limit mergers and consolidations to domestic professional corporations incorporated for the purpose of rendering the same professional service. Such a limitation would be inconsistent with Section 3 [35-4-205] of this Act permitting a broader statement of purposes and Section 19 [35-4-411] providing for admission of foreign professional corporations.

BUSINESS TRUSTS*Part 1
General*35-5-101. Definition of business trust.*Case Notes

Characteristics of Illegitimate Business Trust: A business trust that provides for certificates to be issued to beneficiaries does not constitute a legitimate trust under Montana law. Although 2004 Annotations to the MCA a business trust may not have directors or officers like a corporation, the trustees may function in nearly the same manner as a corporation for business purposes. Earmarks of a business trust that are not usually found in an ordinary trust include: (1) centralized management; (2) continuity of life more typical of a business entity; (3) transferability of interests; and (4) limited personal liability. In a business trust, the relationship of the grantor to the property transferred does not differ in any material way before and after the creation of the trust. Although a taxpayer has a legal right to minimize or avoid taxes by any legal means, when the form of a transaction has not altered any cognizable economic relationships, that form will be disregarded and the tax law applied according to the substance of the transaction. In this case, plaintiffs' establishment of a business trust in an effort to avoid paying taxes by transferring personal property to the trust and issuance of units or certificates of beneficial interest, resulting in little material change in economic ownership or reality before and after creation of the trust, were properly disregarded for tax purposes, and plaintiffs were correctly held individually responsible for trust income and expenses. *Ruby Mtn. CHAPTER 8MONTANA LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANY ACT*Chapter Official Comments*PREFATORY NOTE

Borrowing from abroad, Wyoming initiated a national movement in 1977 by enacting this country's first limited liability company act. The movement started slowly as the Internal Revenue Service took more than ten years to announce finally that a Wyoming limited liability company would be taxed like a partnership. Since that time, every State has adopted or is considering its own distinct limited liability company act, many of which have already been amended one or more times.

The allure of the limited liability company is its unique ability to bring together in a single business organization the best features of all other business forms — properly structured, its owners obtain both a corporate-styled liability shield and the pass-through tax benefits of a partnership. General and limited partnerships do not offer their partners a corporate-styled liability shield. Corporations, including those having made a Subchapter Selection, do not offer their shareholders all the pass-through tax benefits of a partnership. All state limited liability company acts contain provisions for a liability shield and partnership tax status.

Despite these two common themes, state limited liability company acts display a dazzling array of diversity. Multistate activities of businesses are widespread. Recognition of out-of-state limited liability companies varies. Unfortunately, this lack of uniformity manifests itself in basic but fundamentally important questions, such as: may a company be formed and operated by only one owner; may it be formed for purposes other than to make a profit; whether owners have the power and right to withdraw from a company and receive a distribution of the fair value of their interests; whether a member's dissociation threatens a dissolution of the company; who has the apparent authority to bind the company and the limits of that authority; what are the fiduciary duties of owners and managers to a company and each other; how are the rights to manage a company allocated among its owners and managers; do the owners have the right to sue a company and its other owners in their own right as well as derivatively on behalf of the company; may general and limited partnerships be converted to limited liability companies and may limited liability companies merge with other limited liability companies and other business organizations; what is the law governing foreign limited liability companies; and are any or all of these and other rules simply default rules that may be modified by agreement or are they nonwaivable.

Practitioners and entrepreneurs struggle to understand the law governing limited liability companies organized in their own State and to understand the burgeoning law of other States. Simple questions concerning where to organize are increasingly complex. Since most state limited liability company acts are in their infancy, little if any interpretative case law exists. Even when case law develops, it will have limited precedential value because of the diversity of the state acts.

Accordingly, uniform legislation in this area of the law appeared to have become urgent.

After a Study Committee appointed by the National Conference of Commissioners in late 1991 recommended that a comprehensive project be undertaken, the Conference appointed a Drafting Committee which worked on a Uniform Limited Liability Company Act (ULLCA) from early 1992 until its adoption by the Conference at its Annual Meeting in August 1994. The Drafting Committee was assisted by a blue ribbon panel of national experts and other interested and affected parties and organizations. Many, if not all, of those assisting the Committee brought substantial experience from drafting limited liability company legislation in their own States. Many are also authors of leading treatises and articles in the field. Those represented in the drafting process included an American Bar Association (ABA) liaison, four advisors representing the three separate ABA Sections of Business Law, Taxation, and Real Property, Trust and Probate, the United States Treasury Department, the Internal Revenue Service, and many observers representing several other organizations, including the California Bar Association, the New York City Bar Association, the American College of Real Estate Lawyers, the National Association of Certified Public Accountants, the National Association of Secretaries of State, the Chicago and Lawyers Title Companies, the American Land Title Association, and several university law and business school faculty members.

The Committee met nine times and engaged in numerous national telephonic conferences to discuss policies, review over fifteen drafts, evaluate legal developments and consider comments by our many knowledgeable advisers and observers, as well as an ABA subcommittee's earlier work on a prototype. In examining virtually every aspect of each state limited liability company act, the Committee maintained a single policy vision — to draft a flexible act with a comprehensive set of default rules designed to substitute as the essence of the bargain for small entrepreneurs and others.

This Act is flexible in the sense that the vast majority of its provisions may be modified by the owners in a private agreement. Only limited and specific fundamental matters may not be altered by private agreement. To simplify, those nonwaivable provisions are set forth in a single subsection. Helped thereby, sophisticated parties will negotiate their own deal with the benefit of counsel.

The Committee also recognized that small entrepreneurs without the benefit of counsel should also have access to the Act. To that end, the great bulk of the Act sets forth default rules designed to operate a limited liability company without sophisticated agreements and to recognize that members may also modify the default rules by oral agreements defined in part by their own conduct. Uniquely, the Act combines two simple default structures which depend upon the presence of designations in the articles of organization. All default rules under the Act flow from these two designations.

First, unless the articles reflect that a limited liability company is a term company and the duration of that term, the company will be an at-will company. Generally, the owners of an at-will company may demand a payment of the fair value of their interests at any time. Owners of a term company must generally wait until the expiration of the term to obtain the value of their interests. Secondly, unless the articles reflect that a company will be managed by managers, the company will be managed by its members. This designation controls whether the members or managers have apparent agency authority, management authority, and the nature of fiduciary duties in the company.

In January of 1995 the Executive Committee of the Conference adopted an amendment to harmonize the Act with new and important Internal Revenue Service announcements, and the amendment was ratified by the National Conference at its Annual Meeting in August of 1995. Those Internal Revenue Service announcements generally provide that a limited liability company will not be taxed like a corporation regardless of its organizational structure. Freed from the old tax classification restraints, the amendment modifies the Act's dissolution provision by eliminating member dissociation as a dissolution event. This important amendment significantly increases the stability of a limited liability company and places greater emphasis on a limited liability company's required purchase of a dissociated member's interest.

The adoption of ULLCA will provide much needed consistency among the States, with flexible default rules, and multistate recognition of limited liability on the part of company owners. It will also promote the development of precedential case law.

35-8-102. Definitions.

Official Comments

Uniform Limited Liability Company Act ("ULLCA") definitions, like the rest of the Act, are a blend of terms and concepts derived from the Uniform Partnership Act ("UPA"), the Uniform Partnership Act (1994) ("UPA 1994", also previously known as the Revised Uniform Partnership Act or "RUPA"), the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act ("RULPA"), the Uniform Commercial Code ("UCC"), and the Model Business Corporation Act ("MBCA"), or their revisions from time to time; some are tailored specially for this Act [Title 35, ch. 8].

"Business." A limited liability company may be organized to engage in an activity either for or not for profit. The extent to which contributions to a nonprofit company may be deductible for Federal income tax purposes is determined by federal law. Other state law determines the extent of exemptions from state and local income and property taxes.

"Debtor in bankruptcy." The filing of a voluntary petition operates immediately as an "order for relief." See Sections 601(7)(i) [35-8-803(7)(a)] and 602(b)(2)(iii) [35-8-804(2)(b)(iii)].

"Distribution." This term includes all sources of a member's distributions including the member's capital contributions, undistributed profits, and residual interest in the assets of the company after all claims, including those of third parties and debts to members, have been paid.

"Distributional interest." The term does not include a member's broader rights to participate in the management of the company. See Comments to Article 5 [Title 35, ch. 8, part 7].

"Foreign limited liability company." The term is not restricted to companies formed in the United States.

"Manager." The rules of agency apply to limited liability companies. Therefore, managers may designate agents with whatever titles, qualifications, and responsibilities they desire. For example, managers may designate an agent as "President."

"Manager-managed company." The term includes only a company designated as such in the articles of organization. In a manager-managed company agency authority is vested exclusively in one or more managers and not in the members. See Sections 101(10) (manager) [subsection 18], 203(a)(6) (articles designation) [35-8-202(1)(d)], and 301(b) [35-8-301(2)] (agency authority of members and managers).

"Member-managed limited liability company." The term includes every company not designated as "manager-managed" under Section 203(a)(6) [35-8-202(1)(d)] in its articles of organization.

"Operating agreement." This agreement may be oral. Members may agree upon the extent to which their relationships are to be governed by writings.

"Principal office." The address of the principal office must be set forth in the annual report required under Section 211(a)(3) [35-8-208(1)(c)].

"Record." This Act [Title 35, ch. 8] is the first Uniform Act promulgated with a definition of this term. The definition brings this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] in conformity with the present state of technology and accommodates prospective future technology in the communication and storage of information other than by human memory. Modern methods of communicating and storing information employed in commercial practices are no longer confined to physical documents.

The term includes any writing. A record need not be permanent or indestructible, but an oral or other unwritten communication must be stored or preserved on some medium to qualify as a record. Information that has not been retained other than through human memory does not qualify as a record. A record may be signed or may be created without the knowledge or intent of a particular person. Other law must be consulted to determine admissibility in evidence, the applicability of statute of frauds, and other questions regarding the use of records. Under Section 206(a) [35-8-205(1)], electronic filings may be permitted and even encouraged.

A foreign limited liability company that is not presently authorized to transact business in the State may reserve a fictitious name for a nonrenewable 120-day period. When its actual name is available, a company will generally register that name under Section 107 [35-8-108] because the registration is valid for a year and may be extended indefinitely.

35-8-105. Registered office and registered agent.Official Comments

Limited liability companies organized under Section 202 [35-8-201] or authorized to transact business under Section 1004 [see Title 35, ch. 8, part 10] are required to designate and continuously maintain an office in the State. Although the designated office need not be a place of business, it most often will be the only place of business of the company. The company must also designate an agent for service of process within the State and the agent's street address. The agent's address need not be the same as the company's designated office address. The initial office and agent designations must be set forth in the articles of organization, including the address of the designated office. See Section 203(a)(2) to (3) [35-8-202(i)(c)]. The current office and agent designations must be set forth in the company's annual report. See Section 211(a)(2) [35-8-208(1)(b)]. See also Section 109 (procedure for changing the office or agent designations) [35-8-105(3)], Section 110 (procedure for an agent to resign) [35-8-105(5)], and Section 111(b) (the filing officer is the service agent for the company if it fails to maintain its own service agent) [35-8-1103(2)].

35-8-107. Powers.Official Comments

A limited liability company may be organized for any lawful purpose unless the State has specifically prohibited a company from engaging in a specific activity. For example, many States require that certain regulated industries, such as banking and insurance, be conducted only by organizations that meet the special requirements. Also, many States impose restrictions on activities in which a limited liability company may engage. For example, the practice of certain professionals is often subject to special conditions.

A limited liability company has the power to engage in and perform important and necessary acts related to its operation and function. A company's power to enter into a transaction is distinguishable from the authority of an agent to enter into the transaction. See Section 301 (agency rules) [35-8-301].

35-8-109. Effect of operating agreement — nonwaivable provisions.

Official Comments

The operating agreement is the essential contract that governs the affairs of a limited liability company. Since it is binding on all members, amendments must be approved by all members unless otherwise provided in the agreement. Although many agreements will be in writing, the agreement and any amendments may be oral or may be in the form of a record. Course of dealing, course of performance and usage of trade are relevant to determine the meaning of the agreement unless the agreement provides that all amendments must be in writing.

This section makes clear that the only matters an operating agreement may not control are specified in subsection (b) [subsection (3)]. Accordingly, an operating agreement may modify or eliminate any rule specified in any section of this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] except matters specified in subsection (b) [subsection (3)]. To the extent not otherwise mentioned in subsection (b) [subsection (3)], every section of this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] is simply a default rule, regardless of whether the language of the section appears to be otherwise mandatory. This approach eliminates the necessity of repeating the phrase "unless otherwise agreed" in each section and its commentary.

Under subsection (b)(1) [subsection (3)(a)], an operating agreement may not unreasonably restrict the right to information or access to any records under Section 408 [35-8-405]. This does not create an independent obligation beyond Section 408 [35-8-405] to maintain any specific records. Under subsections (b)(2) to (4) [subsection (3)(b) through (3)(d)], an irreducible core of fiduciary responsibilities survive any contrary provision in the operating agreement. Subsection (b)(2)(i) [subsection (3)(b)(i)] authorizes an operating agreement to modify, but not eliminate, the three specific duties of loyalty set forth in Section 409(b)(1) to (3) [35-8-310(2)(a) through (2)(c)] provided the modification itself is not manifestly unreasonable, a question of fact. Subsection (b)(2)(ii) [subsection (3)(b)(ii)] preserves the common law right of the members to authorize future or ratify past violations of the duty of loyalty provided there has been a full disclosure of all material facts. The authorization or ratification must be unanimous unless otherwise provided in an operating agreement, because the authorization or ratification itself constitutes an amendment to the agreement. The authorization or ratification of specific past or future conduct may sanction conduct that would have been manifestly unreasonable under subsection (b)(2)(i) [subsection (3)(b)(i)].

Official Comments

Supplementary principles include, but are not limited to, the law of agency, estoppel, law merchant, and all other principles listed in UCC Section 1-103 [30-1-103], including the law relative to the capacity to contract, fraud, misrepresentation, duress, coercion, mistake, bankruptcy, and other validating and invalidating clauses. Other principles such as those mentioned in UCC Section 1-205 (Course of Dealing and Usage of Trade) [30-1-205] apply as well as course of performance. As with UPA 1994 Section 104 [35-10-104], upon which this provision is based, no substantive change from either the UPA or the UCC is intended. Section 104(b)

Formation*35-8-201. Formation.*Official Comments

A limited liability company is legally distinct from its members who are not normally liable for the debts, obligations, and liabilities of the company. See Section 303 [35-8-304]. Accordingly, members are not proper parties to suits against the company unless an object of the proceeding is to enforce members' rights against the company or to enforce their liability to the company.

Any person may organize a limited liability company by performing the ministerial act of signing and filing the articles of organization. The person need not be a member. As a matter of flexibility, a company may be organized and operated with only one member to enable sole proprietors to obtain the benefit of a liability shield. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that a one-member limited liability company will not be taxed like a corporation. Nor will it be taxed like a partnership since it lacks at least two members. Rather, a one-member limited liability company is disregarded for Federal tax purposes and its operations are reported on the return of its single owner.

The existence of a company begins when the articles are filed. Therefore, the filing of the articles of organization is conclusive as to the existence of the limited liability shield for persons who enter into transactions on behalf of the company. Until the articles are filed, a firm is not organized under this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] and is not a "limited liability company" as defined in Section 101(9) [35-8-102(16)]. In that case, the parties' relationships are not governed by this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] unless they have expressed a contractual intent to be bound by the provisions of the Act [Title 35, ch. 8]. Third parties would also not be governed by the provisions of this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] unless they have expressed a contractual intent to extend a limited liability shield to the members of the would-be limited liability company.

35-8-202. Articles of organization.

Official Comments

The articles serve primarily a notice function and generally do not reflect the substantive agreement of the members regarding the business affairs of the company. Those matters are generally reserved for an operating agreement which may be unwritten. Under Section 203(b) [subsection (1)], the articles may contain provisions permitted to be set forth in an operating agreement. Where the articles and operating agreement conflict, the operating agreement controls as to members but the articles control as to third parties. The articles may also contain any other matter not inconsistent with law. The most important is a Section 301(c) [35-8-702] limitation on the authority of a member or manager to transfer interests in the company's real property.

A company will be at-will unless it is designated as a term company and the duration of its term is specified in its articles under Section 203(a)(5) [subsection (1)(b)]. The duration of a term company may be specified in any manner which sets forth a specific and final date for the dissolution of the company. For example, the period specified may be in the form of "50 years from the date of filing of the articles" or "the period ending on January 1, 2020." Mere specification of a particular undertaking of an uncertain business duration is not sufficient unless the particular undertaking is within a longer fixed period. An example of this type of designation would include "2020 or until the building is completed, whichever occurs first." When the specified period is incorrectly specified, the company will be an at-will company. Notwithstanding the correct specification of a term in the articles, a company will be an at-will company among the members under Section 203(c)(1) [subsection (3)(a)] if an operating agreement so provides. A term company that continues after the expiration of its term specified in its articles will also be an at-will company.

A term company possesses several important default rule characteristics that differentiate it from an at-will company. An operating agreement may alter any of these rules. Generally, a member of an at-will company may rightfully dissociate at any time whereas a dissociation from a term company prior to the expiration of the specified term is wrongful. See Comments to Section 602(b) [35-8-804]. Accordingly, a dissociated member of an at-will company is entitled to have the company purchase that member's interest for its fair value determined as of the date of the member's dissociation. A dissociated member of a term company must generally await the expiration of the agreed term to withdraw the fair value of the interest determined as of the date of the expiration of the agreed term. Thus, a dissociated member in an at-will company receives the fair value of their interest sooner than in a term company [sic] and also does not bear the risk of valuation changes for the remainder of the specified term. See Comments to Section 701(a) [35-8-808(1)].

A company will be member-managed unless it is designated as manager-managed under Section 203(a)(6) [subsection (1)(d)(i)]. Absent further designation in the articles, a company will be a member-managed at-will company. The designation of a limited liability company as either member- or manager-managed is important because it defines who are agents and have the apparent authority to bind the company under Section 301 [35-8-302]. In a member-managed company, the members have the agency authority to bind the company. In a manager-managed company only the managers have that authority. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that the agency structure of a limited liability company will not cause it to be taxed like a corporation. The agency designation relates only to agency and does not preclude members of a manager-managed company from participating in the actual management of company business. See Comments to Section 404(b) [35-8-307(2)].

The definition and use of the term "record" permits filings with the filing office under this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] to conform to technological advances that have been adopted by the filing office. However, since Section 206(a) provides that the filing "must be in a medium permitted by the [Secretary of State]" [subsection (1) provides that the filing "conform to the filing requirements of this chapter"], the Act [Title 35, ch. 8] simply conforms to filing changes as they are adopted.

Part 3Relations of Members and Managers to Persons
Dealing With Limited Liability Company*35-8-301. Agency power of members and managers.*Official Comments

Members of a member-managed and managers of manager-managed company, as agents of the firm, have the apparent authority to bind a company to third parties. Members of a manager-managed company are not as such agents of the firm and do not have the apparent authority, as members, to bind a company. Members and managers with apparent authority possess actual authority by implication unless the actual authority is restricted in an operating agreement. Apparent authority extends to acts for carrying on in the ordinary course the company's business and business of the kind carried on by the company. Acts beyond this scope bind the company only where supported by actual authority created before the act or ratified after the act.

Ordinarily, restrictions on authority in an operating agreement do not affect the apparent authority of members and managers to bind the company to third parties without notice of the restriction. However, the restriction may make a member or manager's conduct wrongful and create liability to the company for the breach. This rule is subject to three important exceptions. First, under Section 301(c) [35-8-702(1)], a limitation reflected in the articles of organization on the authority of any member or manager to sign and deliver an instrument affecting an interest in company real property is effective when filed, even to persons without knowledge of the agent's lack of authority. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that the agency structure of a limited liability company will not cause it to be taxed like a corporation. Secondly, under Section 703 [35-8-811], a dissociated member's apparent authority terminates two years after dissociation, even to persons without knowledge of the dissociation. Thirdly, under Section 704 [35-8-812], a dissociated member's apparent authority may be terminated earlier than the two years by filing a statement of dissociation. The statement is effective 90 days after filing, even to persons without knowledge of the filing. Together, these three provisions provide constructive knowledge to the world of the lack of apparent authority of an agent to bind the company.

Official Comments

A member or manager, as an agent of the company, is not liable for the debts, obligations, and liabilities of the company simply because of the agency. A member or manager is responsible for acts or omissions to the extent those acts or omissions would be actionable in contract or tort against the member or manager if that person were acting in an individual capacity. Where a member or manager delegates or assigns the authority or duty to exercise appropriate company functions, the member or manager is ordinarily not personally liable for the acts or omissions of the officer, employee, or agent if the member or manager has complied with the duty of care set forth in Section 409(c) [35-8-310(3)].

Under Section 303(c) [subsection (3)], the usual liability shield may be waived, in whole or in part, provided the waiver is reflected in the articles of organization and the member has consented in writing to be bound by the waiver. The importance and unusual nature of the waiver consent requires that the consent be evidenced by a writing and not merely an unwritten record. See Comments to Section 205 [35-8-204]. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements [sic] clarify that the owner liability structure of a limited liability company (other than a foreign limited liability company formed outside the United States) will not cause it to be taxed like a corporation.

35-8-307. Management and voting.Official Comments

In a member-managed company, each member has equal rights in the management and conduct of the company's business unless otherwise provided in an operating agreement. For example, an operating agreement may allocate voting rights based upon capital contributions rather than the subsection (a) [subsection (1)] per capita rule. Also, member disputes as to any matter relating to the company's business may be resolved by a majority of the members unless the matter relates to a matter specified in subsection (c) (unanimous consent required) [subsection (3)]. Regardless of how the members allocate management rights, each member is an agent of the company with the apparent authority to bind the company in the ordinary course of its business. See Comments to Section 301(a) [35-8-301(1)]. A member's right to participate in management terminates upon dissociation. See Section 603(b)(1) [35-8-805(2)(a)].

In a manager-managed company, the members, unless also managers, have no rights in the management and conduct of the company's business unless otherwise provided in an operating agreement. If there is more than one manager, manager disputes as to any matter relating to the company's business may be resolved by a majority of the managers unless the matter relates to a matter specified in subsection (c) (unanimous member consent required) [subsection (3)]. Managers must be designated, appointed, or elected by a majority of the members. A manager need not be a member and is an agent of the company with the apparent authority to bind the company in the ordinary course of its business. See Sections 101(10) [35-8-102(18)] and 301(b) [35-8-301(2)].

To promote clarity and certainty, subsection (c) [subsection (3)] specifies those exclusive matters requiring the unanimous consent of the members, whether the company is member- or manager-managed. For example, interim distributions, including redemptions, may not be made without the unanimous consent of all the members. Unless otherwise agreed, all other company matters are to be determined under the majority of members or managers rules of subsections (a) and (b) [subsections (1) and (2)].

Case Notes

Sufficient Evidence to Warrant Award of Damages and Costs for Interference in Winding Up of Partnership: The District Court awarded defendant Weiss damages and legal costs after finding that Cullinan, one of the partners in a limited liability company, acted arbitrarily and wrongfully interfered with the orderly winding up and dissolution of the company. The partner appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Under 35-8-809, expenses and attorney fees are payable if a party to the proceeding did not act in good faith. The District Court found that Cullinan denied and attempted to renegotiate an exclusive marketing agreement, attempted to prevent payment of partnership debts, obstructed another partner's attempts to obtain financing, and attempted to terminate a partnership escrow arrangement. These actions constituted sufficient evidence of arbitrary and vexatious conduct by Cullinan to warrant the award of damages and fees. The District Court also correctly determined that Cullinan failed to prove that Weiss had breached any fiduciary obligations owed to the company or to Cullinan as a member of the company. Bio-Septic Systems, LLC v. Weiss, 2002 MT 318, 313 M 136, 60 P3d 943 (2002).

35-8-310. General standards of member's and manager's conduct.Official Comments

Under subsections (a), (c), and (h) [subsections (1), (3), and (8)], members and managers, and their delegates [sic], owe to the company and to the other members and managers only the fiduciary duties of loyalty and care set forth in subsections (b) and (c) [subsections (2) and (3)] and the obligation of good faith and fair dealing set forth in subsection (d) [subsection (4)]. An operating agreement may not waive or eliminate the duties or obligation, but may, if not manifestly unreasonable, identify activities and determine standards for measuring the performance of them. See Section 103(b)(2) to (4) [35-8-109(2)(b) through (2)(d)].

Upon a member's dissociation, the duty to account for personal profits under subsection (b)(1) [subsection (2)(a)], the duty to refrain from acting as or representing adverse interests under subsection (b)(2) [subsection (2)(b)], and the duty of care under subsection (c) [subsection (3)] are limited to those derived from matters arising or events occurring before the dissociation unless the member participates in winding up the company's business. Also, the duty not to compete terminates upon dissociation. See Section 603(b)(3) and (b)(2) [35-8-805(2)(c) and (2)(b)]. However, a dissociated member is not free to use confidential company information after dissociation. For example, a dissociated member of a company may immediately compete with the company for new clients but must exercise care in completing on-going client transactions and must account to the company for any fees from the old clients on account of those transactions. Subsection (c) [subsection (3)] adopts a gross negligence standard for the duty of care, the standard actually used in most partnerships and corporations.

Subsection (b)(2) [subsection (2)(b)] prohibits a member from acting adversely or representing an adverse party to the company. The rule is based on agency principles and seeks to avoid the conflict of opposing interests in the mind of the member agent whose duty is to act for the benefit of the principal company. As reflected in subsection (f) [subsection (6)], the rule does not prohibit the member from dealing with the company other than as an adversary. A member may generally deal with the company under subsection (f) [subsection (6)] when the transaction is approved by the company.

Subsection (e) [subsection (5)] makes clear that a member does not violate the obligation of good faith under subsection (d) [subsection (4)] merely because the member's conduct furthers that member's own interest. For example, a member's refusal to vote for an interim distribution because of negative tax implications to that member does not violate that member's obligation of good faith to the other members. Likewise, a member may vote against a proposal by the company to open a shopping center that would directly compete with another shopping center in which the member owns an interest.

35-8-405. Records and information.Official Comments

Recognizing the informality of many limited liability companies, subsection (a) [subsection (1)] does not require a company to maintain any records. In general, a company should maintain records necessary to enable members to determine their share of profits and losses and their rights on dissociation. If inadequate records are maintained to determine those and other critical rights, a member may maintain an action for an accounting under Section 410(a) [35-8-410(1)].

Normally, a company will maintain at least records required by state or federal authorities regarding tax and other filings.

The obligation to furnish access includes the obligation to insure that all records, if any, are accessible in intelligible form. For example, a company that switches computer systems has an obligation either to convert the records from the old system or retain at least one computer capable of accessing the records from the old system.

The right to inspect and copy records maintained is not conditioned on a member or former member's purpose or motive. However, an abuse of the access and copy right may create a remedy in favor of the other members as a violation of the requesting member or former member's obligation of good faith and fair dealing. See Section 409(d) [35-8-310(4)].

Although a company is not required to maintain any records under subsection (a) [subsection (1)], it is nevertheless subject to a disclosure duty to furnish specified information under subsection (b)(1) [subsection (3)]. A company must therefore furnish to members, without demand, information reasonably needed for members to exercise their rights and duties as members. A member's exercise of these duties justifies an unqualified right of access to the company's records. The member's right to company records may not be unreasonably restricted by the operating agreement. See Section 103(b)(1) [35-8-109(3)(a)].

35-8-410. Actions by members.

Official Comments

During the existence of the company, members have under this section access to the courts to resolve claims against the company and other members, leaving broad judicial discretion to fashion appropriate legal remedies. A member pursues only that member's claim against the company or another member under this section. Article 11 [35-8-1104] governs a member's derivative pursuit of a claim on behalf of the company.

A member may recover against the company and the other members under subsection (a)(3) [subsection (1)(c)] for personal injuries or damage to the member's property caused by another member. One member's negligence is therefore not imputed to bar another member's action.

35-8-411. Continuation of term company after expiration of specified term.

Official Comments

A term company will generally dissolve upon the expiration of its term unless either its articles are amended before the expiration of the original specified term to provide for an additional specified term or the members or managers simply continue the company as an at-will company under this section. Amendment of the articles specifying an additional term requires the unanimous consent of the members. See Section 404(c)(3) [35-8-307(3)(c)]. Therefore, any member has the right to block the amendment. Absent an amendment to the articles, a company may only be continued under subsection (b) [subsection (2)] as an at-will company. The decision to continue a term company as an at-will company does not require the unanimous consent of the members and is treated as an ordinary business matter with disputes resolved by a simple majority vote of either the members or managers. See Section 404 [35-8-307]. In that case, subsection (b) [subsection (2)] provides that the members' conduct amends or becomes part of an operating agreement to "continue" the company as an at-will company. The amendment to the operating agreement does not alter the rights of creditors who suffer detrimental reliance because the company does not liquidate after the expiration of its specified term. See Section 203(c)(2) [35-8-202(3)(b)].

Preexisting operating-agreement provisions continue to control the relationship of the members under subsection (a) [subsection (1)] except to the extent inconsistent with the rights and duties of members of an at-will company with an operating agreement containing the same provisions. However, the members could agree in advance that, if the company's business continues after the expiration of its specified term, the company continues as a company with a new specified term or that the provisions of its operating agreement survive the expiration of the specified term.

Official Comments

Unless otherwise provided in an operating agreement, admission of a member and the nature and valuation of a would-be member's contribution are matters requiring the consent of all of the other members. See Section 404(c)(7) [35-8-307(3)(g)]. An agreement to contribute to a company is controlled by the operating agreement and therefore may not be created or modified without amending that agreement through the unanimous consent of all the members, including the member to be bound by the new contribution terms. Official Comments

An obligation need not be in writing to be enforceable. Given the informality of some companies, a writing requirement may frustrate reasonable expectations of members based on a clear oral agreement. Obligations may be compromised with the consent of all of the members under Section 404(c)(5) [35-8-307(3)(e)], but the compromise is generally effective only among the consenting members. 35-8-504. Member's and manager's rights to payments and reimbursement.Official Comments

The presence of a liability shield will ordinarily prevent a member or manager from incurring personal liability on behalf of the company in the ordinary course of the company's business. Where a member of a member-managed or a manager of a manager-managed company incurs such liabilities, Section 403(a) [subsection (1)] provides that the company must indemnify the member or manager where that person acted in the ordinary course of the company's business or the preservation of its property. A member or manager is therefore entitled to indemnification only if the act was within the member or manager's actual authority. A member or manager is therefore not entitled to indemnification for conduct that violates the duty of care set forth in Section 409(c) [35-8-310(3)] or for tortious conduct against a third party. Since members of a manager-managed company do not possess the apparent authority to bind the company, it would be more unusual for such a member to incur a liability for indemnification in the ordinary course of the company's business.

Distributions*35-8-601. Sharing of distributions.*Official Comments

Recognizing the informality of many limited liability companies, this section creates a simple default rule regarding interim distributions. Any interim distributions made must be in equal shares and approved by all members. See Section 404(c)(6) [35-8-307(3)(f)]. The rule assumes that: profits will be shared equally; some distributions will constitute a return of contributions that should be shared equally rather than a distribution of profits; and property contributors should have the right to veto any distribution that threatens their return of contributions on liquidation. In the simple case where the members make equal contributions of property or equal contributions of services, those assumptions avoid the necessity of maintaining a complex capital account or determining profits. Where some members contribute services and others property, the unanimous vote necessary to approve interim distributions protects against unwanted distributions of contributions to service contributors. Consistently, Section 408(a) [35-8-405(1)] does not require the company to maintain a separate account for each member, the Act [Title 35, ch. 8] does not contain a default rule for allocating profits and losses, and Section 806(b) [35-8-905(3)] requires that liquidating distributions to members be made in equal shares after the return of contributions not previously returned. See Comments to Section 806(b) [35-8-905(3)].

Case Notes

Agreement Regarding Distribution of Partnership Income Based on Partners' Respective Work — Equal Shares Not Required: Members of a partnership, including Cullinan, agreed to distribute the partnership income based on the hours that each partner worked. Under the agreement, partner Weiss was to receive compensation for working full time, and the other partners were to receive compensation for 2 hours of work a day. Weiss received monthly payments, which were deducted from the amount owed to Weiss from the partnership, and the other partners kept track of any hours above 2 hours a day that they worked in order to receive compensation. The District Court adopted this valuation method, pursuant to the agreement, and Cullinan appealed on grounds that the agreement violated this section, which requires equal shares in any partnership distribution unless the partners agree otherwise. However, Cullinan's own documentation showed that he agreed to the compensation system and did not object to the distribution offered by Weiss, so the District Court properly relied on Weiss's valuation method. Bio-Septic Systems, LLC v. Weiss, 2002 MT 318, 313 M 136, 60 P3d 943 (2002).

35-8-604. Distributions.

Official Comments

This section establishes the validity of company distributions, which in turn determines the potential liability of members and managers for improper distributions under Section 407 [35-8-605]. Distributions are improper if the company is insolvent under subsection (a) [subsection (1)] at the time the distribution is measured under subsection (c) [subsection (3)]. In recognition of the informality of many limited liability companies, the solvency determination under subsection (b) [subsection (2)] may be made on the basis of a fair valuation or other method reasonable under the circumstances.

The application of the equity insolvency and balance sheet tests present special problems in the context of the purchase, redemption, or other acquisition of a company's distributional interests. Special rules establish the time of measurement of such transfers. Under Section 406(c)(1) [subsection (3)(a)], the time for measuring the effect of a distribution to purchase a distributional interest is the date of payment. The company may make payment either by transferring property or incurring a debt to transfer property in the future. In the latter case, subsection (c)(1) [subsection (3)(a)] establishes a clear rule that the legality of the distribution is tested when the debt is actually incurred, not later when the debt is actually paid. Under Section 406(e) [subsection (5)], indebtedness is not considered a liability for purposes of subsection (a) [subsection (1)] if the terms of the indebtedness itself provide that payments can be made only if and to the extent that a payment of a distribution could then be made under this section. The effect makes the holder of the indebtedness junior to all other creditors but senior to members in their capacity as members.

35-8-605. Liability upon wrongful distribution.

Official Comments

Whenever members or managers fail to meet the standards of conduct of Section 409 [35-8-310] and vote for or assent to an unlawful distribution, they are personally liable to the company for the portion of the distribution that exceeds the maximum amount that could have been lawfully distributed. The recovery remedy under this section extends only to the company, not the company's creditors. Under subsection (a) [subsection (1)], members and managers are not liable for an unlawful distribution provided their vote in favor of the distribution satisfies the duty of care of Section 409(c) [35-8-310(3)].

Subsection (a) [subsection (1)] creates personal liability in favor of the company against members or managers who approve an unlawful distribution for the entire amount of a distribution that could not be lawfully distributed. Subsection (b) [subsection (2)] creates personal liability against only members who knowingly received the unlawful distribution, but only in the amount measured by the portion of the actual distribution received that was not lawfully made. Members who both vote for or assent to an unlawful distribution and receive a portion or all of the distribution will be liable, at the election of the company, under either but not both subsections.

A member or manager who is liable under subsection (a) [subsection (1)] may seek contribution under subsection (c)(1) [subsection (3)(a)] from other members and managers who also voted for or assented to the same distribution and may also seek recoupment under subsection (c)(2) [subsection (3)(b)] from members who received the distribution, but only if they accepted the payments knowing they were unlawful.

The two-year statute of limitations of subsection (d) [subsection (4)] is measured from the date of the distribution. The date of the distribution is determined under Section 406(c) [35-8-604(3)].

(b) from each member for the amount the member received, knowing that the distribution was made in violation of 35-8-604 or the articles of organization or the operating agreement"; inserted (3) concerning impleading; inserted (4) establishing 2-year limitations period; and made minor changes in style. Official Comments

Members have no property interest in property owned by a limited liability company. A distributional interest is personal property and is defined under Section 101(6) [35-8-102(9)] as a member's interest in distributions only and does not include the member's broader rights to participate in management under Section 404 [35-8-307] and to inspect company records under Section 408 [35-8-405].

Under Section 405(a) [35-8-601], distributions are allocated in equal shares unless otherwise provided in an operating agreement. Whenever it is desirable to allocate distributions in proportion to contributions rather than per capita, certification may be useful to reduce valuation issues. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that certification of a limited liability company will not cause it to be taxed like a corporation.

35-8-707. Transfer of distributional interest — rights of transferee.

Official Comments

Under Sections 501(b) [35-8-703(2)] and 502 [subsection (1)], the only interest a member may freely transfer is that member's distributional interest. A member's transfer of all of a distributional interest constitutes an event of dissociation. See Section 601(3) [35-8-803(3)]. A transfer of less than all of a member's distributional interest is not an event of dissociation. A member ceases to be a member upon the transfer of all that member's distributional interest and that transfer is also an event of dissociation under Section 601(3) [35-8-803(3)]. Relating the event of dissociation to the member's transfer of all of the member's distributional interest avoids the need for the company to track potential future dissociation events associated with a member no longer financially interested in the company. Also, all the remaining members may expel a member upon the transfer of "substantially all" the member's distributional interest. The expulsion is an event of dissociation under Section 601(5)(ii) [35-8-803(5)(b)].

The only interest a member may freely transfer is the member's distributional interest. A transferee may acquire the remaining rights of a member only by being admitted as a member of the company by all of the remaining members. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that the transferability of membership interests of a limited liability company in excess of these default rules will not cause it to be taxed like a corporation. In many cases a limited liability company will be organized and operated with only a few members. These default rules were chosen in the interest of preserving the right of existing members in such companies to determine whether a transferee will become a member.

A transferee not admitted as a member is not entitled to participate in management, require access to information, or inspect or copy company records. The only rights of a transferee are to receive the distributions the transferor would otherwise be entitled, receive a limited statement of account, and seek a judicial dissolution under Section 801(a)(5) [35-8-902(2)(a)].

Subsection (e) [subsection (6)] sets forth the rights of a transferee of an existing member. Although the rights of a dissociated member to participate in the future management of the company parallel the rights of a transferee, a dissociated member retains additional rights that accrued from that person's membership such as the right to enforce Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] purchase rights. Part 8

Admission and Withdrawal of Members

35-8-803. Events causing member's dissociation.

Official Comments

The term "dissociation" refers to the change in the relationships among the dissociated member, the company and the other members caused by a member's ceasing to be associated in the carrying on of the company's business. Member dissociation from either an at-will or term company, whether member- or manager-managed is not an event of dissolution of the company unless otherwise specified in an operating agreement. See Section 801(a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)].

However, member dissociation will generally trigger the obligation of the company to purchase the dissociated member's interest under Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812].

A member may be expelled from the company under paragraph (5)(ii) [subsection (5)(b)] by the unanimous vote of the other members upon a transfer of "substantially all" of the member's distributional interest other than for a transfer as security for a loan. A transfer of "all" of the member's distributional interest is an event of dissociation under paragraph (3) [subsection (3)].

Although a member is dissociated upon death, the effect of the dissociation where the company does not dissolve depends upon whether the company is at-will or term. Only the decedent's distributional interest transfers to the decedent's estate which does not acquire the decedent member's management rights. See Section 603(b)(1) [35-8-805(2)(a)]. Unless otherwise agreed, if the company was at-will, the estate's distributional interest must be purchased by the company at fair value determined at the date of death. However, if a term company, the estate and its transferees continue only as the owner of the distributional interest with no management rights until the expiration of the specified term that existed on the date of death. At the expiration of that term, the company must purchase the interest of a dissociated member if the company continues for an additional term by amending its articles or simply continues as an at-will company. See Sections 411 [35-8-411] and 701(a)(2) [35-8-808(1)(b)] and Comments. Before that time, the estate and its transferees have the right to make application for a judicial dissolution of the company under Section 801(b)(5) [35-8-902(2)(a)] as successors in interest to a dissociated member. See Comments to Sections 801, 411, and 701 [35-8-901, 35-8-902, 35-8-411, and 35-8-808]. Where the members have allocated management rights on the basis of contributions rather than simply the number of members, a member's death will result in a transfer of management rights to the remaining members on a proportionate basis. This transfer of rights may be avoided by a provision in an operating agreement extending the Section 701(a)(1) [35-8-808(1)(a)] at-will purchase right to a decedent member of a term company.

Official Comments

A member has the power to withdraw from both an at-will company and a term company although the effects of the withdrawal are remarkably different. See Comments to Section 601 [35-8-803]. At a minimum, the exercise of a power to withdraw enables members to terminate their continuing duties of loyalty and care. See Section 603(b)(2) to (3) [35-8-805(2)(b) and (2)(c)].

A member's power to withdraw by express will may be eliminated by an operating agreement. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that alteration of a member's power to withdraw will not cause the limited liability company to be taxed like a corporation. An operating agreement may eliminate a member's power to withdraw by express will to promote the business continuity of an at-will company by removing member's right to force the company to purchase the member's distributional interest. See Section 701(a)(1) [35-8-808(1)(a)]. However, such a member retains the ability to seek a judicial dissolution of the company. See Section 801(a)(4) [35-8-902(1)].

If a member's power to withdraw by express will is not eliminated in an operating agreement, the withdrawal may nevertheless be made wrongful under subsection (b) [subsection (2)]. All dissociations, including withdrawal by express will, may be made wrongful under subsection (b)(1) [subsection (2)(a)] in both an at-will and term company by the inclusion of a provision in an operating agreement. Even where an operating agreement does not eliminate the power to withdraw by express will or make any dissociation wrongful, the dissociation of a member of a term company for the reasons specified under subsection (b)(2) [subsection (2)(b)] is wrongful. The member is liable to the company and other members for damages caused by a wrongful dissociation under subsection (c) [subsection (3)] and, under subsection (d) [subsection (4)], the damages may be offset against all distributions otherwise due the member after the dissociation.

Section 701(f) [35-8-808(6)] provides a similar rule permitting damages for wrongful dissociation to be offset against any company purchase of the member's distributional interest.

35-8-805. Effect of member's dissociation.

Official Comments

Member dissociation is not an event of dissolution of a company unless otherwise specified in an operating agreement. See Section 801(a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. Dissociation from an at-will company that does not dissolve the company causes the dissociated member's distributional interest to be immediately purchased under Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812]. See Comments to Sections 602 [35-8-804] and 603 [this section]. Dissociation from a term company that does not dissolve the company does not cause the dissociated member's distributional interest to be purchased under Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] until the expiration of the specified term that existed on the date of dissociation.

Subsection (b)(1) [subsection (2)(a)] provides that a dissociated member forfeits the right to participate in the future conduct of the company's business. Dissociation does not however forfeit that member's right to enforce the Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] rights that accrue by reason of the dissociation. Similarly, where dissociation occurs by death, the decedent member's successors in interest may enforce that member's Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] rights. See and compare Comments to Section 503(e) [35-8-707(5)].

Dissociation terminates the member's right to participate in management, including the member's actual authority to act for the company under Section 301 [35-8-301], and begins the two-year period after which a member's apparent authority conclusively ends. See Comments to Section 703 [35-8-811]. Dissociation also terminates a member's continuing duties of loyalty and care, except with regard to continuing transactions, to the company and other members unless the member participates in winding up the company's business. See Comments to Section 409 [35-8-310].

35-8-808. Company purchase of distributional interest.

Official Comments

This section sets forth default rules regarding an otherwise mandatory company purchase of a distributional interest. Even though a dissociated member's rights to participate in the future management of the company are equivalent to those of a transferee of a member, the dissociation does not forfeit that member's right to enforce the Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] purchase right. Similarly, if the dissociation occurs by reason of death, the decedent member's successors in interest may enforce the Article 7 [35-8-808, 35-8-809, 35-8-811, and 35-8-812] rights. See Comments to Sections 503(e) [35-8-707(5)] and 603(b)(1) [35-8-805(2)(a)].

An at-will company must purchase a dissociated member's distributional interest under subsection (a)(1) [subsection (1)(a)] when that member's dissociation does not result in a dissolution of the company under Section 801(a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. The purchase price is equal to the fair value of the interest determined as of the date of dissociation. Any damages for wrongful dissociation must be offset against the purchase price.

Dissociation from a term company does not require an immediate purchase of the member's interest but the operating agreement may specify that dissociation is an event of dissolution. See Section 801(a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. A term company must only purchase the dissociated member's distributional interest under subsection (a)(2) [subsection (1)(b)] on the expiration of the specified term that existed on the date of the member's dissociation. The purchase price is equal to the fair value of the interest determined as of the date of the expiration of that specified term. Any damages for wrongful dissociation must be offset against the purchase price.

The valuation dates differ between subsections (a)(1) and (a)(2) [subsections (1)(a) and (1)(b)] purchases. The former is valued on the date of member dissociation whereas the latter is valued on the date of the expiration of the specified term that existed on the date of dissociation. A subsection (a)(2) [subsection (1)(b)] dissociated member therefore assumes the risk of loss between the date of dissociation and the expiration of the then stated specified term. See Comments to Section 801 (dissociated member may file application to dissolve company under Section 801(a)(4) [35-8-902(1)]) [35-8-901 and 35-8-902].

The default valuation standard is fair value. See Comments to Section 702 [35-8-809]. An operating agreement may fix a method or formula for determining the purchase price and the terms of payment. The purchase right may be modified. For example, an operating agreement may eliminate a member's power to withdraw from an at-will company which narrows the dissociation events contemplated under subsection (a)(1) [subsection (1)(b)]. See Comments to Section 602(a) [35-8-804(1)]. However, a provision in an operating agreement providing for complete forfeiture of the purchase right may be unenforceable where the power to dissociate has not also been eliminated. See Section 104(a) [35-8-110(1)].

The company must deliver a purchase offer to the dissociated member within 30 days after the date determined under subsection (a) [subsection (1)]. The offer must be accompanied by information designed to enable the dissociated member to evaluate the fairness of the offer. The subsection (b)(3) [subsection (2)(c)] explanation of how the offer price was calculated need not be elaborate. For example, a mere statement of the basis of the calculation, such as "book value," may be sufficient.

The company and the dissociated member must reach an agreement on the purchase price and terms within 120 days after the date determined under subsection (a) [subsection (1)]. Otherwise, the dissociated member may file suit within another 120 days to enforce the purchase under subsection (d) [subsection (4)]. The court will then determine the fair value and terms of purchase under subsection (e) [subsection 5]. See Section 702 [35-8-809]. The member's lawsuit is not available under subsection (c) [subsection (3)] if the parties have previously agreed to price and terms in an operating agreement.

35-8-809. Court action to determine fair value of distributional interest.

Official Comments

The default valuation standard is fair value. Under this broad standard, a court is free to determine the fair value of a distributional interest on a fair market, liquidation, or any other method deemed appropriate under the circumstances. A fair market value standard is not used because it is too narrow, often inappropriate, and assumes a fact not contemplated by this section — a willing buyer and a willing seller.

The court has discretion under subsection (a)(2) [subsection (1)(b)] to include in its order any conditions the court deems necessary to safeguard the interests of the company and the dissociated member or transferee. The discretion may be based on the financial and other needs of the parties.

If the purchase is not consummated or the purchaser defaults, the dissociated member or transferee may make application for dissolution of the company under subsection (c) [subsection (3)]. The court may deny the petition for good cause but the proceeding affords the company an opportunity to be heard on the matter and avoid dissolution. See Comments to Section 801(a)(4) [35-8-902(1)].

The power of the court to award all costs and attorney's fees incurred in the suit under subsection (d) [subsection (4)] is an incentive for both parties to act in good faith. See Section 701(c) [35-8-808(3)].

Case Notes

Responsibility for Prototype Correctly Assigned to Partner Who Assumed Ownership: In winding up a partnership, the District Court determined that an experimental prototype belonged to partner Cullinan and assigned to Cullinan the responsibility of maintaining the unit. Cullinan appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Cullinan assumed ownership of the device after requesting the unit and paid for its storage. Weiss, the other interested partner, did not object to Cullinan's ownership. Absent an objection from Weiss, the District Court simply granted Cullinan's request for ownership of the prototype, and Cullinan could not then complain of the responsibility attached to the property interest in the unit. Bio-Septic Systems, LLC v. Weiss, 2002 MT 318, 313 M 136, 60 P3d 943 (2002).

Sufficient Evidence to Warrant Award of Damages and Costs for Interference in Winding Up of Partnership: The District Court awarded defendant Weiss damages and legal costs after finding that Cullinan, one of the partners in a limited liability company, acted arbitrarily and wrongfully interfered with the orderly winding up and dissolution of the company. The partner appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Under this section, expenses and attorney fees are payable if a party to the proceeding did not act in good faith. The District Court found that Cullinan denied and attempted to renegotiate an exclusive marketing agreement, attempted to prevent payment of partnership debts, obstructed another partner's attempts to obtain financing, and attempted to terminate a partnership escrow arrangement. These actions constituted sufficient evidence of arbitrary and vexatious conduct by Cullinan to warrant the award of damages and fees. The District Court also correctly determined that Cullinan failed to prove that Weiss had breached any fiduciary obligations owed to the company or to Cullinan as a member of the company. Bio-Septic Systems, LLC v. Weiss, 2002 MT 318, 313 M 136, 60 P3d 943 (2002).

35-8-811. Dissociated member's power to bind limited liability company.

Official Comments

Member dissociation will not dissolve the company unless otherwise specified in an operating agreement. See Section 801(a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. A dissociated member of a member-managed company does not have actual authority to act for the company. See Section 603(b)(1) [35-8-805(2)(a)]. Under Section 301(a) [35-8-301(1)], a dissociated member of a member-managed company has apparent authority to bind the company in ordinary course transactions except as to persons who knew or had notice of the dissociation. This section modifies that rule by requiring the person to show reasonable reliance on the member's status as a member provided a Section 704 [35-8-812] statement has not been filed within the previous 90 days. See also Section 804 (power to bind after dissolution) [35-8-904].

Part 9 Dissolution

35-8-901. Dissolution.

Official Comments

The dissolution rules of this section are mostly default rules and may be modified by an operating agreement. However, an operating agreement may not modify or eliminate the dissolution events specified in subsection (a)(3) (illegal business) [35-8-901(1)(c)] or subsection (a)(4) (member application) [35-8-902(1)]. See Section 103(b)(6) [35-8-109(3)(f)].

The relationship between member dissociation and company dissolution is set forth under subsection (a)(1) [35-8-901(1)(a)]. Unless member dissociation is specified as an event of dissolution in the operating agreement, such dissociation does not dissolve the company. New and important Internal Revenue Service announcements clarify that the failure of member dissociation to cause or threaten dissolution of a limited liability company will not cause the company to be taxed like a corporation.

A member or dissociated member whose interest is not required to be purchased by the company under Section 701 [35-8-808] may make application under subsection (a)(4) [35-8-902(1)] for the involuntary dissolution of both an at-will company and a term company. A transferee may make application under subsection (a)(5) [35-8-902(2)]. A transferee's application right, but not that of a member or dissociated member, may be modified by an operating agreement. See Section 103(b)(6) [35-8-109(3)(f)]. A dissociated member is not treated as a transferee for purposes of an application under subsections (a)(4) and (a)(5) [35-8-902 (1) and (2)]. See Section 603(b)(1) [35-8-805(2)(a)]. For example, this affords reasonable protection to a dissociated member of a term company to make application under subsection (a)(4) [35-8-902(1)] before the expiration of the term that existed at the time of dissociation. For purposes of a subsection (a)(4) [35-8-902(1)] application, a dissociated member includes a successor in interest, e.g., surviving spouse. See Comments to Section 601 [35-8-803].

The liability shield continues in effect for the winding up period because the legal existence of the company continues under subsection (a) [35-8-901(2)]. The company is terminated on the filing of articles of termination. See Section 805 [35-8-906].

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 302 substituted (1)(b) and (1)(c) concerning consent and unlawful events for former (2) and (3) that read: "(2) the written consent of all members;

(3) an event of dissociation of a member, unless the business of the limited liability company is continued by the consent of all the remaining members within 90 days following the occurrence of an event of dissociation or as otherwise provided in writing in the articles of organization or operating agreement"; inserted (1)(d) concerning expiration of term; inserted (2) concerning winding up; inserted (3) concerning waiver of winding up; and made minor changes in style. 35-8-902. Judicial dissolution.

Official Comments

In the case of applications under subsections (a)(4) and (a)(5) [35-8-902(1) and (2)], the applicant has the burden of proving either the existence of one or more of the circumstances listed under subsection (a)(4) [35-8-902(1)] or that it is equitable to wind up the company's business under subsection (a)(5) [35-8-902(2)]. Proof of the existence of one or more of the circumstances in subsection (a)(4) [35-8-902(1)], may be the basis of a subsection (a)(5) [35-8-902(2)] application. Even where the burden of proof is met, the court has the discretion to order relief other than the dissolution of the company. Examples include an accounting, a declaratory judgment, a distribution, the purchase of the distributional interest of the applicant or another member, or the appointment of a receiver. See Section 410 [35-8-410].

A court has the discretion to dissolve a company under subsection (a)(4)(i) [35-8-902(1)(a)] when the company has a very poor financial record that is not likely to improve. In this instance, dissolution is an alternative to placing the company in bankruptcy. A court may dissolve a company under subsections (a)(4)(ii), (a)(4)(iii), and (a)(4)(iv) [35-8-902(1)(b) through (1)(d)] for serious and protracted misconduct by one or more members. Subsection (a)(4)(v) [35-8-902(1)(e)] provides a specific remedy for an improper squeeze-out of a member.

In determining whether and what type of relief to order under subsections (a)(4) and (a)(5) [35-8-902(1) and (2)] involuntary dissolution suits, a court should take into account other rights and remedies of the applicant. For example, a court should not grant involuntary dissolution of an at-will company if the applicant member has the right to dissociate and force the company to purchase that member's distributional interest under Sections 701 [35-8-808] and 702 [35-8-809]. In other cases, involuntary dissolution or some other remedy such as a buy-out might be appropriate where, for example, one or more members have (i) engaged in fraudulent or unconscionable conduct, (ii) improperly expelled a member seeking an unfair advantage of a provision in an operating agreement that provides for a significantly lower price on expulsion than would be payable in the event of voluntary dissociation, or (iii) engaged in serious misconduct and the applicant member is a member of a term company and would not have a right to have the company purchase that member's distributional interest upon dissociation until the expiration of the company's specified term.

35-8-908. Known claims against dissolved or terminated limited liability companies.

Official Comments

A known claim will be barred when the company provides written notice to a claimant that a claim must be filed with the company no later than at least 120 days after receipt of the written notice and the claimant fails to file the claim. If the claim is timely received but is rejected by the company, the claim is nevertheless barred unless the claimant files suit to enforce the claim within 90 days after the receipt of the notice of rejection. A claim described in subsection (d) [subsection (4)] is not a "known" claim and is governed by Section 808 [35-8-909]. This section does not extend any other applicable statutes of limitation. See Section 104 [35-8-110]. Depending on the management of the company, members or managers must discharge or make provision for discharging all of the company's known liabilities before distributing the remaining assets to the members. See Sections 806(a) [35-8-905(1)], 406 [35-8-604], and 407 [35-8-605].

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 302 throughout section inserted references to termination; near middle of (1) after "by" deleted "filing articles of dissolution pursuant to 35-8-906 and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 12, 1999.

35-8-909. Unknown claims against dissolved or terminated limited liability companies.

Official Comments

An unknown claim will be barred when the company publishes notice requesting claimants to file claims with the company and stating that claims will be barred unless the claimant files suit to enforce the claim within five years after the date of publication. The procedure also bars known claims where the claimant either did not receive written notice described in Section 807 [35-8-908] or received notice, mailed a claim, but the company did not act on the claim.

Depending on the management of the company, members or managers must discharge or make provision for discharging all of the company's known liabilities before distributing the remaining assets to the members. See Comment to Section 807 [35-8-908]. This section does not contemplate that a company will postpone member distributions until all unknown claims are barred under this section. In appropriate cases, the company may purchase insurance or set aside funds permitting a distribution of the remaining assets. Where winding up distributions have been made to members, subsection (d)(2) [subsection (5)(b)] authorizes recovery against those members. However, a claimant's recovery against a member is limited to the lesser of the member's proportionate share of the claim or the amount received in the distribution. This section does not extend any other applicable statutes of limitation. See Section 104 [35-8-110].

The law where a foreign limited liability company is organized, rather than this Act [Title 35, ch. 8], governs that company's internal affairs and the liability of its owners. Accordingly, any difference between the laws of the foreign jurisdiction and this Act [Title 35, ch. 8] will not constitute grounds for denial of a certificate of authority to transact business in this State. However, a foreign limited liability company transacting business in this State by virtue of a certificate of authority is limited to the business and powers that a limited liability company may lawfully pursue and exercise under Section 112 [35-8-107].

This section sets forth a "safe harbor" for cross-entity mergers of limited liability companies with both domestic and foreign: corporations, general and limited partnerships, and other limited liability companies. Subsection (c) [subsection (3)] makes clear that the terms and conditions of the plan of merger must be approved by all of the partners unless applicable state law specifies otherwise for the merger.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 302 substituted current text concerning plan of merger for former text that read: "(1) Pursuant to any agreement, a domestic limited liability company may merge with or into one or more limited liability companies formed under the laws of this state or any other state. The surviving limited liability company is as provided in the merger agreement.

(2) A domestic limited liability company that is not the surviving limited liability company in the merger shall file articles of dissolution that must have an effective date not later than the effective date of the merger.

(3) If, following a merger of one or more domestic limited liability companies or one or more limited liability companies formed under the laws of any other state, the surviving limited liability company is not a domestic limited liability company, there must be attached to the articles of dissolution for each domestic limited liability company articles of merger executed by the surviving limited liability company:

(a) stating that the surviving limited liability company may be served with process in the state of Montana in any action, suit, or proceeding for the enforcement of any obligation of the domestic limited liability company;

(b) irrevocably appointing the secretary of state as the surviving limited liability company's agent to accept service of process in any action, suit, or proceeding; and

(c) specifying the address to which a copy of process must be mailed to the surviving limited liability company by the secretary of state.

(4) When the articles of dissolution required by subsection (2) have become effective, the following must be vested in and enforced against the surviving limited liability company as they were in each of the limited liability companies that merged:

(a) all of the rights, privileges, and powers of each of the limited liability companies that merged;

(b) all property, real, personal, and mixed;

(c) all debts due to any of the limited liability companies; and

(d) all other things and causes of action belonging to each of the limited liability companies."

CHAPTER 9
MONTANA CLOSE CORPORATION ACT

Chapter Official Comments

Source: The official comments to this chapter were written by the Committee on Corporate Laws, Section of Corporation, Banking, and Business Law, American Bar Association.

Introductory Comment: The Model Statutory Close Corporation Supplement [Title 35, chapter 9, MCA] is an optional statute developed for states that determine that it is advisable to enact an integrated statute dealing with the problems of closely held corporations. This Supplement is not part of the Revised Model Business Corporation Act, and the decision whether to enact this Supplement should be considered independently of the enactment of the Model Act.

This Supplement was developed on the assumption that the state in question has enacted the Revised Model Business Corporation Act, or at least a statute with the same degree of flexibility as the Revised Model Act in the following areas: issuance of shares for nontraditional forms of consideration (MBCA §6.21) [35-1-605, 35-1-606, 35-1-610 (all repealed)], preemptive rights (MBCA §6.30) [35-1-511 (now repealed)], supermajority voting rights for shareholders (MBCA §§7.27, 10.21) [35-1-214, 35-1-505, 35-1-507 (all repealed)] and directors (MBCA §§8.24, 10.22) [35-1-401, 35-1-405 (both repealed)], action by shareholders or board of directors without a meeting (MBCA §§7.04, 8.21) [35-1-406, 35-1-509 (both repealed)], voting by voting groups (MBCA §7.27) [35-1-507 (now repealed) (Montana version differs)], cumulative voting for directors (MBCA §7.28) [35-1-506 (now repealed) varies significantly], shareholder voting agreements (MBCA §7.31) [35-1-508 (now repealed)], voting trusts (MBCA §7.30) [35-1-508 (now repealed)], irrevocable proxies (MBCA §7.22(d)) [35-1-506 (now repealed)], share transfer restrictions (MBCA §6.27) [35-1-617 (now repealed)], protection of class voting rights for the election and removal of directors (MBCA §§8.04 [no Montana provision], 8.08(b), 8.08(c)) [35-1-408 (now repealed)], filling of vacancies on the board of directors (MBCA §8.10(b)) [no Montana provision], flexibility in appointment of officers (MBCA §8.40) [no Montana provision], shareholders' voting rights with respect to amendments of articles of incorporation and mergers (MBCA §§10.04, 11.03(f)) [35-1-208, 35-1-803 (both repealed)], dissenters' rights (MBCA ch. 13) [35-1-810, 35-1-812 (both repealed)], and judicial dissolution (MBCA §14.30) [35-1-921 (now repealed), 35-6-102].

In addition, section 8.01 of the 1984 Model Act [35-1-401, 35-1-515 (both repealed)] authorizes a corporation with less than 50 shareholders [25 in Montana] to dispense with the board of directors or limit its authority in whole or in part. This authorization is replicated in the Model Statutory Close Corporation Supplement.

Under a statute with the flexibility of the Revised Model Act it is usually possible to achieve any desired legal result within a closely held corporation without recourse to the Close Corporation Supplement by the use of sophisticated contracts among the shareholders and special provisions in the articles of incorporation and the bylaws. This Supplement therefore does not significantly change the results that may be obtained under the Revised Model Act; rather, the advantages of the Supplement lie in the certainty and flexibility that it provides. Also, in many situations, the Supplement facilitates the achievement of desired results with significantly less drafting and significantly lower probabilities that some factor has been overlooked. The Supplement further provides an optional standard-form buy-out arrangement in the recurring situation where a shareholder in a closely held corporation has died or been incapacitated leaving a spouse who is unable or unwilling to work in the enterprise.

Many states have adopted a variety of different provisions relating to closely held corporations; the Model Statutory Close Corporation Supplement draws from this broad experience within various states, and develops principles for closely held corporations based on this experience. Not all states, however, have adopted integrated statutes analogous to the Supplement; some state legislatures have not adopted special provisions relating to close corporations; others have chosen to enact such provisions on a nonintegrated basis as part of their general corporation statutes. The 1969 Model Act essentially adopted a nonintegrated approach.

Examples of situations in which the Supplement may be advantageous include:

(1) A small enterprise that is likely to remain a closely held business, all or substantially all of whose shareholders are active in the business, may avoid the expense of drafting an elaborate set of specially tailored close corporation documents. If the shareholders elect to be governed by the Supplement, the share transfer restriction in sections 11 [35-9-202] and 12 [35-9-203] automatically apply and a right to have their shares purchased at death may be provided by including the statement in the articles of incorporation that sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] shall apply (with such modifications or alterations as are deemed appropriate).

(2) A professional corporation whose shareholders wish to be taxed as a corporation may operate internally as a partnership. Under sections 20 and 21 [35-9-301, 35-9-302] the corporation may be managed entirely by the shareholders, who may provide for voting on a one-vote-per-shareholder basis rather than on the basis of the usual rule of one-vote-per-share.

(3) A wholly owned subsidiary corporation may be created and operated with a very simple corporate structure. Such a subsidiary corporation may operate without a board of directors (§21) [35-9-302], need not adopt bylaws (§22) [35-9-303], need not hold annual meetings except upon a demand from a shareholder (§23(b)) [35-9-304], and may have a single officer with authority to sign all legal documents on behalf of the corporation (§24) [35-9-305].

This Supplement may also be useful in situations in which the shareholders of a closely held corporation obtain basic protection of their rights through sophisticated contractual arrangements, but cannot achieve desired management flexibility and remedies under the general business corporation statute. The shareholders, for example, may wish to authorize director proxies (§20) [35-9-301] or to allow less than a majority to elect to dissolve the corporation (§33) [35-9-404].

Chapter Case Notes

No Right of Individual Guarantor to Sue on Behalf of Corporation: Under Rule 17(a), M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), an action must be brought by the person who is entitled to enforce the right according to the governing substantive law and will not necessarily be brought in the name of the person who will ultimately benefit from the recovery. In the case of corporations, neither the Montana Business Corporation Act nor the Montana Close Corporation Act provides for an individual guarantor to sue on behalf of the corporation. Therefore, the District Court did not err in determining that claims for misuse and misappropriation of corporate funds could not be brought by individual plaintiffs. Kondelik v. First Fidelity Bank of Glendive, 259 M 446, 857 P2d 687, 50 St. Rep. 874 (1993).

Part 1 General

Part Case Notes

Lawsuit by Shareholder Causing Damages Considered Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Care: Sletteland brought a suit against two other corporate shareholders for charging excessive attorney fees and seeking their removal as corporate directors. The District Court held that the fees were excessive, but found no grounds for removal. The other shareholders filed a counterclaim against Sletteland, alleging that he breached his fiduciary duty in bringing the lawsuit because the timing of the suit caused refinancing of a project to fail, resulting in damage to the corporation and to other shareholders. The District Court agreed, and both parties appealed their respective issues. The Supreme Court reversed on the issue of excessive fees, but affirmed on the issue of breach of fiduciary duty. The fiduciary duty between shareholders of a close corporation is one of utmost good faith and loyalty. Sletteland admittedly knew of the refinancing and, as an attorney and investment banker, also knew the effect that a lawsuit alleging misconduct by board members would have on a refinancing effort. In fact, it appeared that the suit was brought to specifically derail the refinancing. Sletteland was the person who determined the timing of the suit, which was filed immediately before the individuals involved in the refinancing were to meet for discussions, and when asked to withdraw the suit so refinancing could conclude, he refused to do so. Sletteland did not use the care that an ordinarily prudent person would use in a similar situation, resulting in the breach of fiduciary duty. The Supreme Court also affirmed the award of damages. Although future damages could not be calculated exactly in this case, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in basing its calculations on expert testimony of a well-known regional economist. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

Fiduciary Duty Between Shareholders in Close Corporation When No Other Type of Relationship Exists: The fiduciary duty between stockholders of a close corporation is one of utmost good faith and loyalty. However, the controlling group should not be stymied by a minority stockholder's grievances if the controlling group can demonstrate a legitimate business purpose and the minority stockholder cannot demonstrate a less harmful alternative. If called on to settle a dispute between the stockholders, the court must weigh the legitimate business purpose, if any, against the practicability of a less harmful alternative. Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990), citing Donahue v. Rodd Electrotype Co. of New England, Inc., 328 NE 2d 505 (Mass. 1975), and *Wilkes v. Official Comments

Provisions in the Revised Model Business Corporation Act apply to all statutory close corporations except to the extent they are not consistent with the provisions in this Supplement. The relationship between this Supplement [chapter] and the Model Act [Title 35, chapter 1, MCA] is analogous to the relationship between the Uniform Partnership Act and the Uniform Limited Partnership Act. Whenever this Supplement [chapter] is silent on an issue, the corresponding provision of the Model Act [Title 35, chapter 1, MCA] applies. These corresponding provisions are referred to in the cross-references following each section of the supplement [chapter]. See also the Official Comments to sections 31 [35-9-402] and 32 [35-9-403] for discussion of the applicability of these statutes when a corporation terminates its status as a statutory close corporation.

Under section 2(b) [35-9-102(2)] the provisions of this Supplement [chapter] apply to all professional corporations that elect to be statutory close corporations, except to the extent the provisions are inconsistent with the provisions of the Model Professional Corporation Supplement [Title 35, chapter 4]. See the Official Comment to section 2 [35-4-109] of the Model Professional Corporation Supplement and the Revised Model Business Corporation Act.

Section 2(c) [35-9-102(3)], which is derived from section 356 of the Delaware Corporation Law, makes clear that enactment of the Supplement [chapter] does not affect the law applicable to corporations, including closely held corporations, that are not statutory close corporations.

35-9-103. Definition and election of statutory close corporation status.

Official Comments

1. 50-SHAREHOLDER LIMIT [25 in Montana]

With the exception of a corporation having more than 50 [25 in Montana] shareholders at the time it wishes to become a statutory close corporation, all corporations are potentially eligible to make the election. (See MBCA section 1.42 [not adopted in Montana] for the method of determining the number of shareholders.) The election is made by including in the articles of incorporation a statement that the corporation is a statutory close corporation. An electing corporation continues to be governed by the Supplement [this chapter] unless the shareholders revoke this election. Other terminating events, such as an increase in the number of shareholders beyond some arbitrary maximum or the making of a public share offering, commonly found in existing close corporation statutes create the undesirable possibility of inadvertent terminations of close corporation status and do not seem to serve any purpose except to complicate the statutory framework.

The danger that a large corporation with numerous shareholders might attempt to elect close corporation status in order to operate without a board of directors, although highly unlikely as a practical matter, is the reason for the 50 shareholder limit [25 in Montana] in section 3(b) [35-9-103(2)]. A new corporation that wishes to elect statutory close corporation status at the time of its initial incorporation is eligible, however, regardless of the number of subscribers. Likewise, a new or existing corporation that becomes a statutory close corporation at a time when it has fewer than 50 shareholders [25 in Montana] may continue to operate as a statutory close corporation even though it subsequently has more than 50 shareholders [25 in Montana]. The potential for abuse by evasion of the normal rules governing corporations is not considered to be sufficiently great to justify an absolute numerical limitation, which inevitably creates the possibility of an unknowing change in status, and complexity of statutory provisions designed to deal with those changes of status.

2. SPECIAL DESIGNATION

Consideration was given to requiring a statutory close corporation to use a special designation, such as "A Statutory Close Corporation" or "S.C.C.," on all letterhead and documents to distinguish it from a regular corporation. Special designations are used in European corporation statutes to distinguish between public and private companies. This practice has not been used in the past in the United States except with respect to professional corporations. See section 15 [35-4-206] of the Model Professional Corporation Supplement, which under section 2(b) [35-9-102(2)] of the Supplement applies to a professional corporation that elects to become a statutory close corporation. The only purpose served by the designation is to provide special notice to creditors and shareholders; of course, the usual name of a corporation gives a creditor notice of the company's limited liability and shareholders have notice of the corporation's special status because of the notice on the share certificates required by section 10 [35-9-201].

3. ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

The articles of incorporation contain the basic information about a corporation. They may also give notice to prospective shareholders and creditors of special or unusual contractual arrangements among the shareholders.

The only required difference between articles of incorporation for a statutory close corporation and for a regular corporation is the the [sic] statement designating the corporation to be a statutory close corporation. Although statutory close corporations may use a form of articles of incorporation identical to that for any corporation, a special format that takes into account the provisions respecting share transfer restrictions (sections 11 and 14) [35-9-202 and 35-9-205], the possibility that the corporation will not have a board of directors (section 21) [35-9-302], and other optional provisions that can be utilized by statutory close corporations may be more useful. See for example, the format published in 37 BUS. LAW. 309 (1981).

4. REQUIRED VOTE

Some states, e.g. Maryland and Texas, require unanimous consent of the shareholders for an existing corporation to become a statutory close corporation. Most states, however, follow the pattern of the Delaware statute that requires a two-thirds vote of all outstanding shares. The Close Corporation Supplement adopts a compromise between the two positions by requiring a two-thirds vote of each class or series of shares, voting as separate voting groups, but shareholders opposed to the election are granted dissenters' rights.

5. TRANSITION PROVISIONS

A state having an existing close corporation statute when it enacts the Model Close Corporation Supplement may allow existing close corporations to qualify automatically for close corporation status by filing amended articles of incorporation complying with section 3 [this section]. See section 50 [sec. 29, Ch. 432, L. 1987].

Part 2

Share Transfer Restrictions

35-9-201. Notice of statutory close corporation status on issued shares.

Official Comments

The purpose of this section is to put shareholders in a statutory close corporation on notice that their shares are subject to transfer restrictions and that their rights and liabilities may be different from those of shareholders in other corporations. The notice is essential to bind third parties who are not signatories to the original agreements establishing the rights of shareholders among themselves.

The notice is also drafted to satisfy the notice requirements in cases where a statutory close corporation has uncertificated shares. Under section 6.26 [35-1-610 (now repealed)] of the Revised Model Act, the notice required by this section would appear in the transaction statement.

35-9-202. Share transfer prohibition.

Official Comments

This section sets out a standardized transfer prohibition that automatically applies unless the articles of incorporation provide otherwise. The prohibition is designed to accomplish two purposes: first, to provide a prohibition that fits the needs of the "typical" close corporation; and second, to facilitate alteration in order to fit the special needs of the shareholders in a particular corporation.

1. COVERED TRANSFERS

The definition of transfer in subsection (a) [subsection (1)] is intended to cover every possible type of transaction that might create an interest in corporate shares, including purchase, sale, discount, negotiation, gift, trust, legacy, inheritance, pledge, mortgage, lien, creation of a security interest, hypothecation, bankruptcy, or transfer pursuant to court order.

2. EXEMPT TRANSFERS

Subsection (b) [subsection (2)] describes a number of exemptions to the prohibition of subsection (a) [subsection (1)]. Intrashareholder and intrafamily transfers are exempt on the assumption that most "typical" close corporation shareholders would want these transfers to be exempt. Transfers to executors, administrators, trustees, or receivers that result from death, bankruptcy, liquidation, or dissolution of a shareholder are also exempt. In addition, transfers that are in effect merely internal recapitalizations and transfers having the approval of all the shareholders are exempt. Transactions in which the stock is pledged or hypothecated are also exempt when no voting rights are given to the pledgee. In all these situations, however, further attempted transfers by the transferees are subject to the prohibitions unless the subsequent transfer qualifies under one of the exemptions. For example, although a pledge of shares as collateral for a loan is an exempt transaction (unless the pledgee is given the power to vote the shares), a subsequent sale of the pledged stock by the pledgee in a foreclosure proceeding can only be made in accordance with section 12 [35-9-203] unless the transfer is exempt under subsection (b) [subsection (2)].

A final type of exempt transfer is one made after the corporation ceases to be a statutory close corporation. The automatic elimination of the restrictions on transfer at termination of the close corporation election is justified on the assumption that in most cases the shareholders would want the prohibition to be ineffective after termination. The right to receive the fair value of his shares by voting against the termination (see section 31) [35-9-402] is a reasonable remedy for the shareholders opposed to termination on any ground. Alternative methods for continuing the restriction after termination of statutory close corporation status exist. See the Official Comment to section 31 [35-9-402].

3. BUILT-IN FLEXIBILITY

The statutory prohibition can be limited or modified simply by stating in the articles of incorporation that it does not apply or by specifying in the articles of incorporation the changes from the statutory language. For example, if the shareholders wanted all pledges to be subject to the transfer prohibition but otherwise found the statutory prohibition acceptable, the attorney drafting the articles of incorporation may simply provide in the articles of incorporation: "Subsection 11(b)(6) [35-9-202(2)(f)] does not apply." All shareholders thus have some automatic basic protection against unwanted transfers plus maximum flexibility to alter or replace the statutory scheme. See generally the annotation to section 6.27 of the revised Model Business Corporation Act, for a discussion of cases involving share transfer restrictions.

35-9-203. Share transfer after first refusal by corporation.

Official Comments

If the proposed transfer is not exempt under section 11(b) [35-9-202(2)], the shareholder may sell his shares only if he obtains an offer from a nonshareholder who meets the requirements of subsection (b)(1) and (2) [subsection (2)(a) and (b)] of this section. These requirements are designed to protect the corporation and other shareholders against serious adverse tax consequences that might result from having the third person as a shareholder. The mere offer by a shareholder to sell his shares to the corporation at a price he designates does not trigger the first refusal option and other rights provided by this subsection. Any broader rights guaranteeing a market for the shares by the corporation or other shareholders must be provided in a buy-out agreement. See the Official Comment to section 14 [35-9-205].

Subsection (a) [subsection (1)] also requires that any third-party offer submitted to the corporation be a cash offer. An offer based on other consideration, such as shares in another corporation, is not a qualifying offer, and unless the shareholder can convince the third party to make a cash offer, the shareholder has no right to sell or transfer his shares to the third party should the corporation refuse to consent to the transfer or to purchase the offered shares. The decision to exclude noncash offers reflects that most third-party offers are made for cash and that the mechanics of dealing with noncash offers would unduly complicate the statutory framework. If the possibility of receiving noncash offers is considered significant, appropriate language dealing with such offers may be included in the articles of incorporation. Since the corporation cannot match in specie the noncash portion of the third-party offer, some mechanism, such as arbitration, must be set out to resolve any disputes over the adequacy of an offer made by the corporation to purchase the offered shares.

With respect to a proposed transfer to a third party, subsection (c) [subsection (3)] encourages the parties to reach an agreement in a reasonably short period of time. The 15-day interval between the last day for holding a shareholders' meeting to consider the third-party offer and the cutoff date for the notice of acceptance is designed to allow time for the corporation and the other shareholders to contact potential third-party purchasers or shareholders not present at the meeting at which the decision to purchase the shares was taken and to make any necessary arrangements to finance the purchase.

If the corporation does not arrange the purchase of the offered shares, subsection (f) [subsection (6)] permits their transfer to the third person only if made within 120 days of the date the shareholder notifies the corporation of the third-party offer. Additionally, the transaction must be consummated on the terms set forth in the notice of the offer. For example, a sale for less than the total price specified in the notice or an installment purchase when a cash sale is specified in the notice would not qualify under this section. If the transfer to the third person is not validly made, the offering shareholder remains subject to the provisions of this section. Thus the shareholder may make a transfer exempt under section 11(b) [35-9-202(2)] or obtain another qualifying offer from a third person at any time in the future.

If the transfer to the third party occurs, the shares remain subject to the transfer prohibition in section 11 [35-9-202] unless the transferee has no notice or knowledge of the restrictions. See sections 10 [35-9-201] and 13 [35-9-204].

35-9-204. Attempted share transfer in breach of prohibition.

Official Comments

This section provides additional protection for the effectiveness of the transfer restrictions applicable to the shares of a statutory close corporation. If the required notice of the restrictions has not been given (see section 10) [35-9-201] and the transferee does not have actual notice of the restrictions, the corporation is given a 30-day option to purchase the shares. If the corporation exercises its option, the proposed transferee may pursue a breach of warranty claim or any other appropriate remedy against the proposed transferor. Section 13 [35-9-204] is derived from the Delaware law.

This section also gives the corporation an option to purchase shares attempted to be transferred in violation of a transfer restriction that has been held unenforceable by a court.

35-9-205. Compulsory purchase of shares after death of shareholder.

Official Comments

1. INTRODUCTION

Sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208], which are operative only if the articles of incorporation specifically so provide, guarantee a buy-out at the death of a shareholder. By including appropriate language in the articles of incorporation, the mandatory buy-out authorized by this section may be limited to the death of one or more specified shareholders, or to shareholders holding a particular class of shares. It may also be expanded to cover other contingencies—for example, shareholders who retire or who are disabled. Moreover, the statutory language may be modified to change the type of buy-out. Other commonly used buy-out arrangements include an optional sell-optional purchase, mandatory sell-optional purchase, and mandatory sell-mandatory purchase, with the seller being a shareholder wishing to dispose of his shares and the purchaser being the corporation, the remaining shareholders, or a combination of the two. The optional sell-mandatory purchase option was chosen on the ground that it was the one most likely to be chosen by a shareholder in a closely held corporation, all other factors being equal.

The decision to utilize any kind of buy-out arrangement should be made only after careful consideration of the factors involved in the particular situation. If sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] are used, the election must be made in the articles of incorporation by specifying that sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] apply. The articles of incorporation may also vary the statutory provisions in any desired manner.

These sections are intended to work in tandem with the share transfer prohibition of section 11 [35-9-202]. Under the share transfer prohibition there is no obligation to purchase, while under sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] there is an obligation to purchase by the corporation or the other shareholders if the estate wants to sell; if this obligation is not met, the corporation will be dissolved.

The statute grants the estate of a deceased shareholder the right to compel a purchase of the decedent's shares since this is the situation most often covered in privately drafted contractual buy-outs. The problem of illiquidity of close corporation shares is most acute in this situation because the estate frequently needs cash for estate taxes and other purposes. At the same time the remaining shareholders are often concerned about having the decedent's spouse and children involved in the management of the corporation. A significant amount of shareholder litigation involving close corporations involves disputes between the surviving shareholders and the successors in interest of a deceased shareholder. Having a guaranteed market for the decedent's shares reduces the likelihood that disputes will arise. Life insurance may be used to fund part or all of the purchase obligation. In the absence of available cash, an installment arrangement may help to alleviate any financial strain on the corporation. The remaining shareholders may agree to purchase some or all of the shares or find a third-party purchaser if it is undesirable for the corporation to purchase all of the offered shares. Furthermore, if the parties do not have an existing agreement containing a binding price formula or other terms often contained in buy-out agreements and are unable to agree voluntarily on the price or other terms, a court action may be brought in which a judge in his discretion may resolve the differences and structure a buy-out plan that is realistic in light of the corporation's finances.

In summary, assuming some sort of mandatory buy-out in a particular situation is desirable, the major advantage of electing sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] is that they provide basic protection in the event the shareholders have failed to enter into an appropriate private agreement, or have entered into a buy-out agreement but have failed to agree upon a buy-out price formula, or have agreed upon a formula but have neglected to provide other necessary terms such as interest rates or number of installments in the event deferred purchases are authorized or necessary. Sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] do not prevent the shareholders from having an all-inclusive, buy-out agreement. See section 14(f) [35-9-205(6)]. An attorney drafting such an agreement, however, may use the provisions of sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] as the basis of the agreement, making any necessary additions and modifications. The procedure may substantially reduce the amount of drafting required.

2. REDEMPTION PROBLEMS

The ability of a corporation to redeem its shares is subject to legal limitations. Section 6.40 of the revised Model Business Corporation Act [35-1-711 (now repealed)] sets forth a clear set of principles dealing with permissible redemptions of shares. In states that have not adopted section 6.40 [35-1-711 (now repealed)], however, the rules vary in many respects. Some states apply the same limitations to redemptions that apply to dividends. Some, however, apply different tests. The result is that a wide variety of insolvency and surplus tests, sometimes in combination, exist. If corporate indebtedness is incurred in connection with a redemption, further it is often unclear in states that have not adopted section 6.40 [35-1-711 (now repealed)] whether the applicable test must be met at the time the transaction is entered into, at the time payments are made, or at both times. The priority ranking of redemption related corporate debt is also unclear in many of these states.

3. TAX CONSIDERATIONS

Redemptions also involve complex tax considerations. Some redemptions, principally those that satisfy the requirements of sections 302 and 303 of the Internal Revenue Code, are taxed at capital gains rates rather than as dividends under section 301.

Sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] are designed to provide flexibility to permit the affected parties to negotiate a purchase scheme that takes tax considerations into account. For example, under section 15(d) [35-9-206(4)], a portion or all of the purchase of the decedent's shares may, with shareholder approval, be allocated to the remaining shareholders or to third parties. This provides the framework by which the interested parties may allocate the shares to minimize the corporate law and tax problems discussed above. If an acceptable allocation cannot be agreed upon, the selling shareholder may, under section 16 [35-9-207], reject the offer made by the corporation and file a petition requesting the court to compel a purchase. In framing its decree, the court may consider the problems discussed here. The court may also, under section 16(c) [35-9-207(3)], modify its decree on the basis of legal and financial constraints.

Flexibility to deal with other tax problems is also built into sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208]. If certain conditions are met, payment of the estate tax on the deceased shareholder's estate may be deferred for up to 15 years under section 6166 of the Internal Revenue Code, and interest on the deferred tax will be assessed at a rate considerably lower than the normal rate applicable to late payments. A redemption keyed into maximum use of these provisions may in appropriate cases be quite advantageous to both the estate of the deceased shareholder and to the corporation. Nothing in these sections prohibit [sic] the estate of the deceased shareholder and the corporation from working out a redemption plan with the aid of tax and corporate counsel.

An additional tax problem is to assure that the price set for shares in a buy-out agreement will be accepted for tax purposes as the value of the shares. Tax counsel should be consulted to determine what adjustments, if any, will be necessary to achieve this result under a section 14 [35-9-205] buy-out agreement.

4. MODIFICATION OF STATUTORY SCHEME

Sections 14(b) and (c) [35-9-205(2) and (3)] permit the modification of the provisions of sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] by a two-thirds vote of all the shares. Section 14(d) [35-9-205(4)] provides that a shareholder who votes against a modification that terminates or substantially alters buy-out rights previously granted him under these sections has dissenters' rights to obtain the fair value of his shares. Authorization of dissenters' rights when statutory buy-out rights are materially altered represents a compromise between requiring unanimous approval by all interested persons for the alteration and requiring less than unanimous approval but providing no statutory remedy for those opposed to the termination whose rights are adversely affected.

35-9-206. Exercise of compulsory purchase right.

Official Comments

Section 15 [35-9-206] sets out the mechanics of exercising the buy-out option. The procedures are similar to those in section 12 [35-9-203] relating to third-party offers. Like section 12 [35-9-203], this section requires that the selling shareholder offer all of his shares for sale on the premise that a shareholder desiring to cash out his interest in the corporation ought to divest himself of all his equity interest in the business. If fewer than all his shares are offered, the shareholder may pursue his rights, if any, under the corporation's share transfer restrictions.

Compiler's Comments

35-9-207. Court action to compel purchase.

Official Comments

The rationale for a judicial proceeding to determine the fair value of shares and other terms of the buy-out is explained in the Official Comment to section 15 [35-9-206]. The power of the court under section 17 [35-9-208] to allocate all costs and counsel fees incurred in the suit should provide an adequate incentive for both sides to act in good faith. No court action will be necessary, however, if the buy-out price and other terms are established pursuant to a written agreement among the shareholders or provisions in the articles of incorporation or bylaws. See section 15(e) [35-9-606(5)].

If a suit to determine the fair value of shares is brought, the court has discretion to include in its order any conditions it feels are justified on the basis of the financial and other needs of the selling shareholder and of the purchaser. The court, for example, may authorize an installment sale. The order may include a provision for interest and may require collateral to secure the unpaid installments.

If the purchase is not consummated or the purchasers default, the shareholder may petition for dissolution of the corporation. The court may deny the petition for good cause shown. The proceeding, however, affords the corporation an opportunity to be heard on the matter and an opportunity to avoid dissolution. Mandatory dissolution in the event the offered shares are not purchased provides a strong incentive for the corporation and the remaining shareholders either to purchase the shares or to find another purchaser. Presumably, the corporation and other shareholders would refuse to purchase if the corporation's financial prospects were bleak. If this is the case, then dissolution may be the appropriate solution. Under section 15 [35-9-206] the other shareholders are given reasonable time to come up with a purchasing group and the court has power to authorize an installment purchase and any other terms that are necessary to enable the purchasing group to finance the purchase without undue financial strain on the corporation or other purchasers.

Part 3 Regulation and Operation

35-9-301. Shareholder agreements.

Official Comments

This section authorizes the shareholders to make any agreement they wish regulating the business of the corporation and their relationship to one another and to the corporation. Examples of provisions that may be included in an agreement are:

- (1) The management of the business and the affairs of the corporation in whole or part may be by or under the direction of all the shareholders of the corporation or by or under the direction of one or more shareholders or third parties selected by the shareholders.
- (2) One or more shareholders may be given power to dissolve the corporation at will or upon the occurrence of a specified event or contingency.
- (3) The manner of exercising or dividing voting power by the shareholders and directors may be established, and the use of director as well as shareholder proxies may be authorized.
- (4) The terms and conditions of employment of any officer or employee by the corporation may be established, regardless of the length of employment.
- (5) The identity of the directors and officers of the corporation may be established.
- (6) The payment of dividends or division of profits may be established.
- (7) Issues as to which the shareholders or directors are deadlocked may be made subject to arbitration, or arbitration may be required for any issue of disagreement between a shareholder in his capacity as a shareholder, director, officer, or employee and the corporation, or the other shareholders.

All the shareholders must enter into the agreement and, if the agreement specifies that the corporation is not to have a board of directors or that one or more shareholders is to have a special right to dissolve the corporation, the articles of incorporation must include appropriate language authorizing these provisions. See sections 21 and 33 [35-9-302 and 35-9-404].

A shareholder agreement is valid and enforceable under this section even if it, in effect, permits the business to be operated essentially as a partnership without a board of directors. See subsection (b) [subsection (2)]. Close corporations in which most or all of the shareholders are employees of the corporation are often referred to as "incorporated partnerships." This section gives legal sanction to the customary arrangements made by the shareholders of these corporations. Section 25 [35-9-306] reinforces this concept by providing that shareholder limited liability is to be recognized in spite of an agreement that the corporation is to be operated essentially as a partnership.

This Supplement does not deal with the effect of a shareholder agreement on the tax status of the corporation. In some circumstances the agreement may result in the taxation of the business as a partnership. See Treas. Regs. §§301.7701-1 through -3 (1960).

The requirement of unanimity for adoption and amendment is based on the unusual nature of an agreement that so radically alters the normal corporate structure.

Subsection (h) [subsection (8)] preserves the right of shareholders to enter into any other type of shareholder voting agreement or voting trust or similar agreement that is authorized in the state's general business corporation or professional corporation statutes. These statutes do not ordinarily require unanimous approval by the shareholders but in general they do not authorize as much flexibility, particularly with respect to restrictions on the normal powers of directors, as is permitted under this section. They also often contain time limitations and other restrictions that may be undesirable. See, e.g. MBCA section 7.30 [35-1-508 (now repealed)] (voting trust is valid for 10 years).

The shareholders of a statutory close corporation may choose to operate with or without a board of directors. Section 21 [35-9-302] deals specifically with the requirements for making this election and the legal consequences of operating without a board of directors. If the corporation has a board of directors, any responsibilities required to be exercised by the board of directors may be delegated to one or more of the shareholders or to third parties selected by the shareholders.

If the shareholders exercise the traditional management rights and duties required by statute to be exercised by the board of directors or have delegated these rights and duties to others, they also assume the same liability as would otherwise be imposed on the directors for failure to exercise these rights or to carry out those duties in an appropriate fashion. The shareholders who assume the duties of directors would, however, be eligible for indemnification under chapter 8E of the Revised Model Act [35-1-414 (now repealed)]. See the Official Comment to section 21 [35-9-302]. If the corporation has a board of directors, the directors are responsible for the appropriate exercise of any management rights they have power to exercise and would be liable for their failure to carry out their duties.

This section is derived from similar provisions in the Maryland and Texas close corporation statutes with stylistic changes.

Case Notes

Error in Modification of Rate for Legal Work: The partnership agreement of a limited partnership included a limitation on the general partners' ability to incur legal expenses, but provided that two of the partners could be employed to perform legal services for the partnership, and limited compensation to reasonable hourly rates in an amount not to exceed a total of $60,000 a year without approval. A dispute between partners resulted in a claim that the attorneys had charged excessive rates of $225 an hour and thus should be removed as directors. The District Court found that the attorneys overcharged and required repayment based on a reduced hourly rate. The Supreme Court disagreed and reversed. The contract language clearly allowed for employment of the attorneys, and the partnership was aware in advance of the attorneys' hourly rate. The fees were reasonable given the complexity of the specialized work and the fact that other attorneys in that field charged even higher rates. The District Court erred in modifying the rate for legal work. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

Declaratory Judgment Action by Ranching Corporation Not Action for Full Value of Minority Shares: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that she should have been paid the full value of her shares because certain actions of MRI were illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial. The Supreme Court held that the actions of MRI in paying outstanding corporate debts, ceasing payment of dividends, and leasing corporate property did not constitute illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial acts. The Supreme Court also held that the action brought by Sharon was not pursuant to 35-9-501 because it was brought as a declaratory judgment action by the corporation. *McCann Ranch, Inc. v. 35-9-302. Elimination of board of directors.

Official Comments

This section permits a statutory close corporation to dispense with a board of directors if a statement to that effect is included in its articles of incorporation. See the Official Comment to section 3 [35-9-103]. It also sets out the consequences of this election. It is derived from the Maryland close corporation statute.

The shareholders of a statutory close corporation operating without a board of directors have the legal liability imposed by law on directors for managing the business and affairs of the corporation. They may appoint one or more persons to perform their duties but they are collectively liable for any mismanagement. They also have the usual duties of directors and must either hold a meeting or join in a written consent to initiate or to approve action required by statute to be taken by directors. If this option is exercised, it also is not necessary to call for an organizational meeting of directors or to hold other directors' meetings; the statutory requirements may be fulfilled by shareholders' meetings.

One difference between this section and the Maryland provision and the provisions found in the statutes of other states that have followed the Maryland model is found in subsection (c)(5) [subsection (3)(e)], authorizing "designated directors" to satisfy a party dealing with the corporation who requests that certain documents be signed or approved by "directors." Some banks and creditors have in the past refused to accept documents that do not meet specified corporate formalities. This subsection creates an admittedly artificial but practical method of satisfying this objection. The designated directors do not expose themselves to additional liability by signing documents as designated directors.

Subsection (c)(2) [subsection (3)(b)] provides that the shareholder vote on action normally requiring director approval is tallied in the same manner as at any meeting of shareholders, i.e. the vote is tallied by shares rather than per capita by individual shareholders. This rule may be changed by an appropriate provision in the articles of incorporation. For example, if the articles of incorporation so state, shareholders may vote on a one-vote-per-person basis (as is the normal rule for directors' votes) rather than the one-vote-per-share rule applicable to shareholders. The shareholder voting rule is utilized as the standard rule because it is the option most likely to be chosen. A weighted voting plan that gives one or more shareholders either a general veto power or the power to veto in designated cases is also permissible. If a corporation has different classes or series of shares with voting rights or the corporate statutes grant voting rights to all classes or series of shares on a particular issue, either together or as separate voting groups, the requisite vote of the various classes or series of shares must be obtained to validate the transaction. The vote under subsection (c)(2) [subsection (3)(b)] only satisfies any requirement for director approval of proposed action.

Although unanimous approval is necessary to elect to dispense with a board of directors, the election can be terminated under subsection (d) [subsection (4)] by a two-thirds vote of all shares. Operating without a board of directors is such a radical departure from traditional corporate law that it should not be undertaken unless all the shareholders agree because additional liabilities may be incurred as a result of the election. Terminating the election, however, reinstates the statutory requirements for a board of directors; and a two-thirds vote, which is the voting standard used in this Supplement for most fundamental structural changes, seems sufficient. A corporation with 50 or fewer shareholders [25 in Montana] that elects not to have a board of directors under section 8.01 of the Revised Model Act [35-1-401, 35-1-515 (both repealed)], however, may make and terminate the election under that statute by majority vote.

If a corporation without a board of directors terminates its status as a statutory close corporation, it must immediately elect directors unless it has 50 or fewer shareholders [25 in Montana] and chooses to operate without a board under MBCA §8.01 [35-1-401, 35-1-515 (both repealed)].

35-9-303. Bylaws.

Official Comments

The purpose of bylaws is to provide regulations for the management of a corporation. Business corporation statutes universally require that a corporation adopt bylaws. Very few, however, specify more than a few mandatory provisions that must be included in the bylaws. For example, under the MBCA, the mandatory requirements are: (1) the time and place of shareholder meetings (section 7.01) [35-1-501 (now repealed)]; (2) the number of directors (section 8.03) [35-1-402 (now repealed)]; (3) the notice to be given of directors' meetings (section 8.22) [35-1-404 (now repealed)]; and (4) the time, method of election, and authority of the officers (sections 8.40 and 8.41) [35-1-410 (now repealed)]. Moreover, under section 2.06 [35-1-214 (now repealed)] any provision required or permitted to be in the bylaws may be placed in the articles of incorporation.

Since the type of shareholder agreement contemplated by section 20 [35-9-301] includes much of the information normally included in bylaws, requiring the adoption of bylaws in many cases involves unnecessary duplication. This is particularly true in closely held corporations in which most or all of the investors are active in the business. These corporations normally operate on an informal basis. The highly structured formalities in typical bylaws, although necessary in larger corporations with numerous shareholders, can be cumbersome when imposed on closely held corporations.

This section gives a statutory close corporation the option to dispense with bylaws, if the matters required by statute to be included in bylaws are contained in either a section 20 [35-9-301] shareholder agreement or in the articles of incorporation. Although this represents a break with tradition, it is generally consistent with the "incorporated partnership" concept (see the Comment to section 20 [35-9-301]) and makes certain that all the information legally required to be in bylaws will be readily accessible to the shareholders.

35-9-304. Annual meeting.

Official Comments

This section, which is derived from the Maryland close corporation statute, requires that a statutory close corporation establish a date for an annual shareholders' meeting but provides that the meeting need not be held unless demanded. Under the Revised Model Business Corporation Act and most state corporation statutes, an annual meeting appears to be mandatory. 35-9-306. Limited liability.

Official Comments

The purpose of this section is to eliminate the possible argument that the shareholders in a statutory close corporation are individually liable for the debts and torts of the business because the corporation did not follow the classical model of a corporation. Pursuant to sections 20, 21, and 33 [35-9-301, 35-9-302, and 35-9-404], a statutory close corporation may in effect function like a partnership, although legally the business is still a corporation. This section does not prevent a court from "piercing the corporate veil" of a statutory close corporation if the circumstances should justify imposing personal liability on the shareholders were the corporation not a statutory close corporation. It merely prevents a court from "piercing the corporate veil" because it is a statutory close corporation.

The section is derived from the California close corporation provisions.

Official Comments

Section 31 [35-9-402] requires a minimum two-thirds vote of every class or series of shares whether or not otherwise entitled to vote to terminate close corporation status. Each class or series is entitled to vote as a separate voting group. Section 30 [35-9-401] imposes the same voting requirement in transactions that have the effect of terminating a corporation's status as a statutory close corporation.

In addition, under subsection (a)(2) [subsection (1)(b)], the shareholders of a corporation that will become a statutory close corporation in a merger or share exchange must approve the transaction by the same minimum two-thirds vote. This is consistent with section 3(b) [35-9-103(2)] which requires that an amendment to the articles of incorporation that results in an existing corporation becoming a statutory close corporation also be approved by a two-thirds vote.

The exceptions to shareholder approval of mergers or share exchanges for subsidiary mergers and some other types of transactions (in MBCA chapter 11) [35-1-801 through 35-1-807 (all repealed)] do not apply to statutory close corporations since a shareholder vote is required in all circumstances where statutory close corporation status is elected or terminated.

Shareholders of a statutory close corporation who vote against the merger, share exchange, or sale not in the regular course of business of all or substantially all the assets have dissenters' rights under MBCA chapter 13 [35-1-810, 35-1-812 (both repealed)].

Section 31(b) [35-9-402(2)] requires that a sale of all or substantially all the assets of a corporation not in the regular course of business be approved by a two-thirds vote of all classes or series of shares, voting as separate voting groups, whether or not they are otherwise entitled to vote. Chapter 12 of the Revised Model Business Corporation Act [35-1-808, 35-1-809 (both repealed)] does not require a vote by voting groups on such a sale (unless otherwise required by the articles of incorporation or by action of the board of directors) and limit the right to vote to shareholders who are entitled to vote generally.

35-9-402. Termination of statutory close corporation status.

Official Comments

Sections 31 and 32 [35-9-402 and 35-9-403] deal with issues that arise when it is decided to terminate a corporation's status as a statutory close corporation.

Termination is accomplished by amendment of the articles of incorporation to eliminate the special designation required by section 3 [35-9-103]. This amendment must be approved by the same vote (two-thirds) that is necessary to elect close corporation status (unless the articles specify a higher vote); and shareholders who vote against the termination have dissenters' rights. This is consistent with the provisions in section 3(b) [35-9-103(2)] for election by an existing corporation to become a statutory close corporation.

If the status of a statutory close corporation that is operating without a board of directors is to be terminated, in addition to amending the articles of incorporation to delete the reference to the statutory close corporation election, the statement that it has no board of directors must also be deleted, and the corporation must immediately elect a board of directors. Or, if MBCA section 8.01(c) [no similar provision in Montana] is applicable, the corporation must amend its articles of incorporation to describe who will perform some or all of the duties of the board of directors under that section.

In the absence of agreement upon rights and duties of the shareholders, the corporation upon termination automatically becomes subject to the state's general business corporation statute, or professional corporation act if the corporation was organized as a professional corporation. Further, except for transfer restrictions under section 11 [35-9-202] and authority to operate without a board of directors under MBCA section 8.01(c) [no similar provision in Montana], any existing rights of the shareholders established by agreement (UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE §1-201(3) [30-1-201(3)]) between the shareholders or with the corporation and any rights granted to the shareholders in the articles of incorporation that are valid under the general business or professional corporation acts remain in effect.

If the shareholders desire to have transfer restrictions applicable under section 11 [35-9-202] to continue after termination of statutory close corporation status, the restrictions must meet all requirements specified in MBCA section 6.27 [35-1-617 (now repealed)], or analogous section of the state's general corporation statute. An alternative method of continuing the section 11 [35-9-202] transfer restrictions after termination is to include a provision in the articles of incorporation that section 11(b)(7) [35-9-202(2)(g)] (which exempts transfers made after termination of statutory close corporation status from the statutory transfer restrictions) does not apply. This eliminates the need to draft a complete set of transfer restrictions. To be binding on third parties, however, all new shares issued after the termination is effective must contain a notice meeting the requirements of MBCA section 6.27(b) [35-1-617(1) (now repealed)] (or analogous provisions in state corporation statutes) and other applicable law. See UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE §8.204 [30-8-204, now repealed]. The notice required as to shares of statutory close corporations by section 10 [35-9-201] is no longer appropriate, although it may be effective notice with respect to all shares outstanding at the time of termination.

If the Revised Model Business Corporation Act and the Model Professional Corporation Supplement have been enacted, most of the special control and distribution arrangements among the shareholders and the optional provisions that may be included in the articles of incorporation are not affected by the termination. For example, if sections 14 through 17 [35-9-205 through 35-9-208] have been elected, the buy-out purchase option at the death of a shareholder continues to apply, unless the articles of incorporation are amended to terminate the option. See the Official Comment to section 14 [35-9-205]. Some provisions, however, may be of doubtful validity after termination. One that may be in this category is a provision in the articles of incorporation giving one or more minority shareholders the right to dissolve the corporation as authorized by section 33 [35-9-404]. At the time of termination, all relevant documents relating to the corporation and the shareholders should be carefully reviewed, and where necessary revised. This Supplement gives some automatic protection by providing in section 32(b) [35-9-403(2)] that the special control and contractual arrangements automatically continue in effect unless they are invalid under other applicable statutes or case law.

35-9-404. Shareholder option to dissolve corporation.

Official Comments

The purpose of this section is to give shareholders in a statutory close corporation, if they so elect, basically the same power to dissolve the business as general partners have under the Uniform Partnership Act. The section applies only if it is elected in the corporation's original or amended articles of incorporation. The right may be given to a single shareholder or to any group of shareholders and may be exercisable at will or restricted to certain designated circumstances. Rights under this section are in addition to other rights a shareholder may have under the state's general business corporation or professional corporation acts or this Supplement [Title 35, chapter 9, MCA] to dissolve the corporation.

This section gives considerable leverage to the shareholder or group of shareholders having the power to dissolve over the other shareholders. It should therefore be utilized with caution. Investors may wish to alter the statutory language to provide that the remaining shareholders have an option to purchase the shares of the shareholder(s) giving notice of dissolution under this section.

This section is generally patterned after the Delaware statute.

Part 5 Shareholder Protection

Part Case Notes

Lawsuit by Shareholder Causing Damages Considered Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Care: Sletteland brought a suit against two other corporate shareholders for charging excessive attorney fees and seeking their removal as corporate directors. The District Court held that the fees were excessive, but found no grounds for removal. The other shareholders filed a counterclaim against Sletteland, alleging that he breached his fiduciary duty in bringing the lawsuit because the timing of the suit caused refinancing of a project to fail, resulting in damage to the corporation and to other shareholders. The District Court agreed, and both parties appealed their respective issues. The Supreme Court reversed on the issue of excessive fees, but affirmed on the issue of breach of fiduciary duty. The fiduciary duty between shareholders of a close corporation is one of utmost good faith and loyalty. Sletteland admittedly knew of the refinancing and, as an attorney and investment banker, also knew the effect that a lawsuit alleging misconduct by board members would have on a refinancing effort. In fact, it appeared that the suit was brought to specifically derail the refinancing. Sletteland was the person who determined the timing of the suit, which was filed immediately before the individuals involved in the refinancing were to meet for discussions, and when asked to withdraw the suit so refinancing could conclude, he refused to do so. Sletteland did not use the care that an ordinarily prudent person would use in a similar situation, resulting in the breach of fiduciary duty. The Supreme Court also affirmed the award of damages. Although future damages could not be calculated exactly in this case, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in basing its calculations on expert testimony of a well-known regional economist. Sletteland v. Roberts, 2000 MT 382, 304 M 21, 16 P3d 1062, 57 St. Rep. 1639 (2000).

Fiduciary Duty Between Shareholders in Close Corporation When No Other Type of Relationship Exists: The fiduciary duty between stockholders of a close corporation is one of utmost good faith and loyalty. However, the controlling group should not be stymied by a minority stockholder's grievances if the controlling group can demonstrate a legitimate business purpose and the minority stockholder cannot demonstrate a less harmful alternative. If called on to settle a dispute between the stockholders, the court must weigh the legitimate business purpose, if any, against the practicability of a less harmful alternative. *Daniels v. 35-9-501. Court action to protect shareholders.

Official Comments

1. INTRODUCTION

Sections 40 through 43 [35-9-501 through 35-9-504] are derived from similar provisions in the California, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, and South Carolina statutes, which in turn are derived from former section 210 of the 1948 English Companies Act (reenacted as section 75 of the 1980 English Companies Act). There are two major differences between these statutes and sections 40 through 43 [35-9-501 through 35-9-504]: (1) the statutes, either specifically or by implication, provide that a shareholder may obtain relief only if he has statutory grounds therefor, whereas section 43 [35-9-504] does not tie relief either to a suit to compel dissolution or to the establishment of grounds for dissolution; and (2) the range of relief available to the court is spelled out in greater detail.

The primary danger in granting relief for oppression and related conduct by dissolution is that the remedy is drastic and courts have usually refused to order dissolution of a solvent corporation, except in extreme cases of fraudulent conduct. Moreover, even though authority may exist to grant relief other than dissolution, courts have often been reluctant to grant any relief unless the fact situation itself justifies dissolution. This approach makes the grounds for relief too narrow to protect in an adequate fashion the rights of minority shareholders. At the same time the threat of dissolution gives minority shareholders a powerful weapon to hold over the head of the majority. Under this Supplement [Title 35, chapter 9, MCA], dissolution is one form of relief that may be ordered by the court, but it is appropriate only as a last resort after other possibilities of resolving the dispute have failed. If a shareholder is actually seeking liquidation of the corporation, he may bring an action for dissolution under the state's general business corporation act (assuming he qualifies to bring the proceeding) or under the option-to-dissolve provisions of section 33 [35-9-404].

Although sections 40 through 43 [35-9-501 through 35-9-504] probably will be invoked most frequently by minority shareholders, the ground for relief described in section 40(a)(2) [35-9-501(1)(b)] may be used by the holders of the majority of shares to seek relief from deadlocks created by veto rights given minority shareholders which threaten the corporation's continued existence. Moreover, even in suits brought by minority shareholders, the court has power under section 42 [35-9-503] to order the petitioning shareholders to sell their shares to the corporation or to the remaining shareholders, even if this is not the relief requested.

Relief available under sections 40 through 43 [35-9-501 through 35-9-504] is circumscribed to minimize the danger of abuse by shareholders. No relief of any kind may be ordered unless the court affirmatively finds that one or more of the specific conditions listed in section 40(a) [35-9-501(1)]—fraud, oppression, unfairly prejudicial conduct, deadlock, or grounds for involuntary dissolution—exist. The petitioner has the burden of proof on this issue. The court may award expenses and counsel fees to either side under section 41(b) [35-9-502(2)] in order to discourage or punish the bringing of harassment suits. Finally, if the complaining shareholder has agreed to arbitrate the dispute in question or to resolve it in some other nonjudicial manner, these remedies must be exhausted under section 40(c) [35-9-501(3)] before a suit under this section may be filed.

2. GROUNDS FOR RELIEF

Only shareholders of record or beneficial owners of shares held by a voting trust may bring an action under section 40(a) [35-9-501(1)] (see the definition of "shareholder" in MBCA section 1.40 [35-1-102 (now repealed)]). This parallels the limitations imposed on shareholder derivative proceedings by section 7.40 of the MBCA [35-1-514 (now repealed)]. Relief may be granted if any of the three categories of circumstances specified exist.

Section 40(a)(1) [35-9-501(1)(a)] provides relief from oppression and related conduct that adversely affects a minority shareholder in any relationship with the corporation. Attempted squeeze-outs in close corporations often involve removing a shareholder from his various offices or diminishing his compensation. The subsection makes clear that relief is not limited to those situations in which the value of the shareholder's share interest has been adversely affected.

No attempt has been made to define oppression, fraud, or unfairly prejudicial conduct. These are elastic terms whose meaning varies with the circumstances presented in a particular case, and it is felt that existing case law provides sufficient guidelines for courts and litigants. See, e.g., Annot., "What amounts to 'oppressive conduct' under statute authorizing dissolution of corporation at suit of minority stockholders," 56 A.L.R.3d 358 (1974).

Section 40(a)(2) [35-9-501(1)(b)] allows relief when the corporation is deadlocked. Whether a deadlock is created by majority or minority shareholders is immaterial and either majority or minority shareholders may claim relief under this subsection. Relief may be granted even though the corporation's financial condition is not threatened with irreparable injury if the court finds that the interest of all the shareholders is being damaged by the deadlock.

Section 40(a)(3) [35-9-501(1)(c)] permits a shareholder to claim relief under this section if grounds for involuntary dissolution exist (see MBCA section 14.30 [35-1-921 (now repealed)]). By filing an action under this section, a greater range of relief is made available to the shareholder. For example, the petitioning shareholder may not wish the corporation dissolved, even though grounds for dissolution exist.

3. PREREQUISITES TO GRANTING RELIEF

Under section 40(c) [35-9-501(3)], nonjudicial remedies that the petitioning shareholder has agreed to seek must be exhausted before a suit may be brought under this section. Arbitration clauses covering a wide variety of intracorporate disputes are commonly included in shareholder agreements. If a dispute is covered by an arbitration agreement, the shareholder must submit the claim to arbitration before filing suit under this section and the right to file under this section after the arbitration proceeding is commenced depends on the preclusive effect of the arbitration under state law independent of the corporation statutes.

The requirement in section 40(d) [35-9-501(4)] that a shareholder who has dissenters' rights with respect to a transaction must file suit challenging the transaction under this section before the time he is required to perfect his dissenters' rights is designed to prevent a shareholder who has foregone his dissenters' rights from filing suit under this section to prevent a proposed transaction from being consummated. If the complaining shareholder has not taken timely action to perfect his dissenters' rights, he is relegated to whatever other rights might be available to him under state or federal law. See, e.g. Official Comment 2 to MBCA section 13.02 [35-1-810 (now repealed)]. If the shareholder does file a timely proceeding under this section, the court must first determine whether relief under this section is warranted. If the court finds that a share purchase is the appropriate remedy, the proceeding should be treated as a valuation proceeding in a dissenters' rights case and consolidated with any other similar dissenters' rights proceedings involving the same transaction.

Section 40(e) [35-9-501(5)] makes clear that the remedies available under this and sections 41 through 43 [35-9-502 through 35-9-504] are cumulative and are in addition to any other remedies the petitioner may have, except as otherwise provided in sections 40(c) and 40(d) [35-9-501(3) and 35-9-501(4)].

Case Notes

Exchange of Corporate Property Not Contemplated in Stockholder Agreement — Minority Shareholder Entitled to Notice of Dissenters' Rights: The provisions of a stockholders' agreement dealt with procedures for the sale and transfer of shares but did not contemplate an exchange transaction of all corporate property or a fundamental change in the corporate form. Therefore, the Montana Business Corporation Act, Title 35, ch. 1, including provisions giving rise to dissenters' rights, rather than the provisions of the stockholders' agreement itself, controlled the resolution of the exchange transaction. Under the Act, a dissenting shareholder may demand that the corporation buy back that shareholder's shares at fair value if the corporation takes an action that fundamentally alters the character of the shareholder's investment. Because the corporation president and majority shareholder exchanged virtually all the corporate property other than in the ordinary course of business, all minority shareholders should have been notified of the proposed exchange or should have been allowed to vote on the proposal at a stockholders' meeting and should have been notified of dissenters' rights within 10 days after the exchange. The minority shareholders' mere failure to object to the exchange did not constitute a waiver of their dissenters' rights because they were never given notice of their right to dissent. Hansen v. 75 Ranch Co., 1998 MT 77, 288 M 310, 957 P2d 32, 55 St. Rep. 322 (1998).

Declaratory Judgment Action by Ranching Corporation Not Action for Full Value of Minority Shares: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that she should have been paid the full value of her shares because certain actions of MRI were illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial. The Supreme Court held that the actions of MRI in paying outstanding corporate debts, ceasing payment of dividends, and leasing corporate property did not constitute illegal, oppressive, fraudulent, or unfairly prejudicial acts. The Supreme Court also held that the action brought by Sharon was not pursuant to this section because it was brought as a declaratory judgment action by the corporation. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996).

Payment of Attorney Fees Not Required — Inclusion of Litigation Cost in Corporate Value Approved: McCann Ranch, Inc. (MRI), brought a declaratory judgment action against Sharon in order to determine the value of her 600 minority shares for purposes of the dissolution of her marriage. Sharon argued that the District Court erred in refusing to award her attorney fees and costs. The Supreme Court held that inasmuch as the action was a declaratory judgment action brought by the corporation, attorney fees were not payable. The Supreme Court noted that even if the action had been a minority shareholder action, award of attorney fees was discretionary. The District Court did not abuse its discretion because there was no "prevailing party" in the action. The Supreme Court also held that the District Court did not err in the calculation of MRI's litigation expenses for inclusion in the corporate assets prior to valuation of Sharon's shares because the expenses as valued by Sharon were not supported by the record. McCann Ranch, Inc. v. Quigley-McCann, 276 M 205, 915 P2d 239, 53 St. Rep. 349 (1996).

Official Comments

The purpose of listing the types of relief available, in this section and in sections 42 and 43 [35-9-503 and 35-9-504], is to overcome the reluctance some courts have shown in the past to ordering anything other than dissolution, or possibly a buy-out. See, e.g., Gruenberg v. Goldmine Plantation, Inc., 360 So.2d 884 (La. Ct. App. 1978); Harkey v. Mobley, 552 S.W.2d 79 (Mo. Ct. App. 1977); White v. Perkins, 213 Va.129, 189 S.E.2d 315 (1972). A court should have broad discretion to fashion the most appropriate remedy to resolve the dispute. What works in one case may not work in another. Detailed standards are not provided since they might encourage litigation and also unduly restrict the court's discretion. The dangers of including detailed standards, however, outweigh the advantages. Existing cases applying principles of equity, are, of course, precedents for the exercise of a judge's discretion under this section.

Although most close corporation statutes contain special provisions similar to sections 40(a)(6) and (7) [(sic) correct reference is apparently 35-9-502(1)(f) and (1)(g)], authorizing the appointment of custodians and provisional directors, the number of actual cases in which appointments will be the most appropriate remedy are probably few. Usually the threat of an outsider running the company or acting as a tie-breaker in a deadlock situation leads to a settlement of the controversy.

35-9-503. Extraordinary relief — share purchase.

Official Comments

A court-ordered buy-out is a drastic remedy, particularly if the shareholder ordered to sell his shares does not wish to sell. For this reason section 42 [35-9-503] authorizes a share purchase order only if other relief short of liquidation will not, in the judge's opinion, resolve the dispute. If a buy-out ordered by the court is not consummated, however, an order dissolving the corporation is authorized. This may place pressure on the remaining shareholders to obey the order but also gives them the option of dissolution if they think the order is too onerous.

If the court orders a buy-out, it must also determine the fair value and other terms of the buy-out in accordance with subsection (b) [35-9-503(2)]. Fair value is to be determined under principles developed in dissenters' rights and other valuation cases. The court may require the selling shareholder to enter into a covenant not to compete and also may order an installment sale in order to protect the business and to minimize the financial strain on the purchasers. See also the Official Comment to section 14 [35-9-205].

This section permits the designated purchasers either to consummate the purchase or to permit the corporation to be dissolved. Presumably the remaining shareholders will elect to have the corporation dissolved if its economic prospects are bleak. Leaving the choice to the remaining shareholders is fairer than ordering dissolution without giving the remaining shareholders the opportunity to buy out the complaining shareholder or requiring the remaining shareholders to purchase the shares without giving them the option of voluntary dissolution (which they would not have unless they held sufficient voting shares to approve a dissolution).

If the remaining shareholders agree to comply with the court ordered buy-out, the sale operates as a release of all claims the selling shareholder may have against the corporation, or its directors, officers, or shareholders. The selling shareholder may still pursue any contractual claim he might have against the corporation—for example, a claim for breach of a long term employment contract—to the extent the claim is not dealt with in the court's order. Normally, however, the order should dispose of these contractual claims. The selling shareholder also retains the right to collect any unpaid balance due on the purchase price of his shares, including the right to realize on any collateral given as security for the unpaid balance. Quite frequently the shares being sold have been pledged as security; in these situations, if there is a default, the former shareholder has the choice of foreclosing on the note and again becoming a shareholder or suing to have the corporation dissolved under section 43 [35-9-504].

Under section 42(c) [35-9-503(3)] the court has power to modify its final order at any time upon the petition of any party. For example, should financial or legal constraints prevent the purchasers from fulfilling the terms of a mandated buy-out, the court might modify its order. See also the Official Comment to section 14 [35-9-205].

Finally, the buy-out and dissolution remedies provided by this section and section 43 [35-9-504] are cumulative of ordinary remedies available under section 41 [35-9-502]; for example, a court may award damages in addition to compelling a buy-out. See the Official Comment to section 40 [35-9-501].

Uniform State Law: This chapter constitutes the "Uniform Partnership Act" approved by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws in 1914. The Uniform Partnership Act has been adopted in 46 states and in the District of Columbia, Guam, and the Virgin Islands. Substantially similar provisions have been adopted in Alabama and Nebraska. Georgia, Louisiana, and Puerto Rico have not adopted the Uniform Act.

Partnerships — Capacity to Sue in Own Name: On certification from the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, the Montana Supreme Court held that a joint venture between two out-of-state corporations had the capacity to bring suit as a plaintiff against a corporation under Montana law. Relying on the Uniform Partnership Act and Montana statutes that allow a partnership to be sued in its own name and to sue in Small Claims Court, the Supreme Court found clear legislative intent to treat partnerships as distinct entities with the power to sue. 35-10-103. Knowledge and notice.

Official Comment

The word "notice" in judicial opinions and in other legal writings is often used when "knowledge" as here defined is intended. This has led to a great deal of confusion, of which the extraordinary expression "constructive notice" is evidence. To avoid this confusion the word "notice" as here defined designates definite things only, which, if proved to have been done, enable the person doing them to assert that notice has been had and claim the benefit thereof, irrespective of whether the person charged has had knowledge or not. By adhering strictly to this conception throughout the act, the things which a person must do in order to be confident that he can claim the benefit of "notice" are made plain.

A definition of the word "knowledge" enables it to be indicated clearly when "knowledge" as distinguished from "notice" must be had.

The present law in regard to that which must be done by the person who desired to be in a position to claim the benefit of "notice" is in considerable confusion. Under our case law, as a rule, in ordinary transactions, except those which relate to commercial paper, no one has had "notice" until he has "knowledge"; though, of course, "notice" to an agent is notice to a principal. Whether the delivery of a letter containing a "statement of a fact" would or would not be sufficient if the addressee did not read the letter is doubtful. The court might as well hold that the addressee, by his neglect to read the statement, was estopped from denying that he had "notice." The change in the law, if it is a change, which the present section as now drawn effects, is, it is submitted, in the right direction. The section does not go to the extent of saying that the mere deposit of a "written statement of the fact" in the mail is enough to charge the addressee with "notice." The addressor by selecting the post-office, telegraph or other public service corporation, as the method by which the letter shall be transferred, makes them his agents, not the agents of the addressee. On the other hand the section does go to the extent of declaring that if such written statement is received at the residence or place of business of the addressee in the usual way, the addressor, having done all that was reasonably possible to do to give the addressee "knowledge," should have the benefit of his diligence.

The section as drawn, in dealing with the character of the "statement of fact," where the statement is not a verbal statement merely requires a "written statement." The omission of the word "printed" is after deliberation. To insert the word "printed" might raise a doubt as to the effect of the delivery of a newspaper containing a "statement of the fact." There ought to be no doubt that this is an insufficient statement. Unquestionably, such delivery is not a delivery of a "written statement of the fact," but, on the other hand, if a printed or typewritten statement of the fact—as the dissolution of the partnership—is made on a separate card which is enclosed in an envelope and given to the addressee, there would appear to be no doubt that any court would hold that "a written statement of the fact" had been delivered to such person. The principle is clear. Nothing should be regarded as "a written statement of the fact" which is not so prepared as to cause the one to whom it is addressed, as a reasonably prudent man, to read it. An exact definition of the character of the statement which is to be made is practically impossible; neither do we believe it to be desirable. The words employed, "written statement of the fact," do not preclude the statement from being typewritten or printed but they do emphasize—that which it is necessary to emphasize—that the statement must be a separate statement of the fact made to the addressee, and not a general statement for all the world to read or not as fancy dictates.

The notes to [35-10-104], in regard to "estoppel" and "agency," will perhaps answer some questions which may arise in connection with the present section.

(2) A person has "notice" of a fact within the meaning of this chapter when the person who claims the benefit of the notice:

- (b) delivers through the mail or by other means of communication a written statement of the fact to such person or to a proper person at his place of business or residence."

2004 Annotations to the MCA

35-10-104. Uniformity of application and construction.Official Comment

[Subsection] (1). This provision is customary in American Codes [Cal.C.C., section 4; 1 Ala. Code (1907), section 12; 1 Idaho Rev.Codes, section 4].

[Subsection] (2). This paragraph, applying to the whole act, obviates the necessity of constant repetition of the principle. Its necessity is illustrated in the provisions relating to "notice," [35-10-103(2)]. A "written statement" may be delivered in such a way as to induce the person to whom it is delivered to abstain from reading it. No one who has thus delivered a written statement should be permitted to claim the benefit of the notice. This result might be attained by inserting after the word "delivers," [35-10-103(2)(b)], the words "in good faith;" but these words would not provide for the case where the person who has delivered a written notice in good faith, changes his mind, and in bad faith reacquires the writing before it is read.

[Subsection] (3). This act is a partnership act and not an act relating to agency or any branch thereof. One of the causes of the present confused use of the word notice is due to the attempt to mix two distinct things: what is notice to a person of a fact, and how far notice to an agent is notice to a principal. The second question is wholly a question of the law of agency; the first has nothing to do with the law of agency. The first is dealt with in [35-10-103]; the second is not a question within the scope of a partnership act.

This [subsection] also avoids constant reference throughout the act to agents. For instance, in [35-10-301], there is provision that a partner cannot bind the partnership where the person dealing with him has knowledge that the partner with whom he deals has no authority to bind the partnership. The knowledge of an authorized agent of such person should, of course, be effectual. This [subsection] in regard to the law of agency avoids any possibility of a different construction, and renders unnecessary the insertion of the words "or authorized agent" after the word "person" in the section referred to and other similar sections.

[Subsection] (5). The wording is based on the American Codes. [Idaho Rev.Codes, section 4; Cal.C.C., section 4; Rev.Stat. of Colo. (1908), sections 467, 468; Gen.Stat. of Kans. (1905), 1633; 1 Burns Anno.Ind.Stat. (1908), sections 240, 241, 1356, 1359; Cobbey's Rev.Stat.Neb. 11, 363; 2 S. Dak.Comp.Laws (1908), 313, 316, 318.]

35-10-106. Effect of partnership agreement — nonwaivable provisions.Case Notes

Allocation of Losses in Other Than Equal Proportion Than Division of Profits: One of two equal partners claimed all of the partnership's losses on his personal taxes for the purpose of receiving a tax benefit. When the time came for final settlement, it was contended that half the losses suffered by the partnership should be assigned to the estate and that because the losses for which the estate was allegedly responsible were greater than the assets to which the estate was entitled, nothing was owed to the estate from the partnership. The District Court held that because one partner benefited from the partnership losses, he must also bear the burden of the action and was effectively precluded from trying to assign a share of the losses to the estate. Citing section 704(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, the Supreme Court agreed, holding that when partners exercise their right to allot partnership losses in some fashion other than in equal proportion to their division of profits, that allotment controls for purposes of determining losses during settlement. The District Court did not err in refusing to allocate partnership losses to the estate, which would have diminished the value of the estate's interest in the partnership. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998).

Partners' Failure to Comply With Agreement Terms Resulting in No Explicit Partnership Value — Fair Market Value Properly Ascribed: A 1968 agreement established the value of a partnership at $47,790.30 and required the partners to arrive annually at a new and updated value that would serve for the following year as the value of the partnership. However, the partners never reestablished any different value during the duration of the partnership. After one partner died in 1995, the District Court properly concluded that fair market value at the time of death should apply because the partners failed to comply with the terms of the agreement and thus were left without an explicitly agreed-upon value. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998), following Chapman v. Dunnegan, 665 SW 2d 643 (Mo. Ct. Ct. 1984).

Part 2Nature of Partnership*35-10-201. Partnership as entity.*Official Comment

[Subsection] (1). Explanation of the Reason for the Words Employed in the Definition. The first inquiry is, Why say a partnership is "an association of two or more persons"? In view of the fact that the word "association" itself implies the acting together of two or more persons, why not merely say that a partnership is an association to carry on business in which the members are co-owners of the business? The word person includes, as stated in [35-10-102], "individuals, partnerships, corporations, and other associations." The definition as worded thus asserts, what would be doubtful if the words "of two or more persons" were omitted, namely, that any one of these associations may become members of a partnership. It is true that if two or more corporations attempt to form a partnership the contract may be ultra vires as to both (Boyd v. American Carbon Black Co., (1897) 37 Atl. 937, 182 Pa.St. 206); but the capacity of corporations to contract is a question of corporation law. Under the present law it appears that a partnership can, as such, be a member of another partnership, if that was the intent of the parties. [Raymond v. Putman, (1862) 44 N.H. 160; Cheap v. Cramond, (1821), 4 Barn. & Ald. 663, 6 E.C.L. 645; In re Hamilton, (1880) 1 Fed. 800; Riddle v. Whitehill, (1890) 10 S.Ct. 924, 135 U.S. 621, 34 U.S. (L.Ed.) 282.]

The words "to carry on as co-owners a business" remove any doubt in the following case: A and B sign partnership articles and make their agreed contributions to the common fund. A refuses to carry on business as agreed. Is there a partnership to be wound up in accordance with the provisions of Part [6] "Dissolution and Winding-up"? The words quoted require an affirmative answer to this question. If the words "carrying on business" had been used, in the case given, no partnership would exist, and Part [6] would not apply.

The definition asserts that the associates are "co-owners" of the business. This distinguishes a partnership from an agency—an association of principal and agent. A business is a series of acts directed toward an end. Ownership involves the power of ultimate control. To state that partners are co-owners of a business is to state that they each have the power of ultimate control.

Lastly, the definition asserts that the business is for profit. Partnership is a branch of our commercial law; it has developed in connection with a particular business association, and it is, therefore, essential that the operation of the act should be confined to associations organized for profit.

In view of the many definitions of a partnership which have been proposed, it is desirable to note the reasons for the omission of certain ideas expressed in some of the definitions cited by Lindley in his work on Partnership, pp. 11, 12.

It is not indicated that the association must be a voluntary one. In the domain of private law the term association necessarily involves the idea that the association is voluntary.

To say that the association must be created by contract, is not only unnecessary, but in view of the varied use of the word "contract" in our law, if the word is used an explanation would have to be made as to whether the contract could be implied, and if so, whether it could be implied in law or only implied as a fact. By merely saying that it is an association these difficulties are avoided.

Again, it is not said that the business must be lawful business. The effect of the unlawfulness of the business is dealt with under Part [6] "Dissolution and Winding-up." Section [35-10-603(3), now repealed], provides that dissolution is produced "[b]y any event which makes it unlawful for the business of the partnership to be carried on or for the members to carry it on in partnership." If the business is wholly unlawful, then the partnership is dissolved the moment it is created. The omission of the word "lawful" in the definition does not prevent this result. Very often, however, a business may be in part lawful and in part unlawful. Hotelkeepers may run a "dive." Placing the word "lawful" before the word business in the definition would tend to throw a doubt on the propriety of the orderly winding up of such a business as a partnership.

[Subsection] (2). The reason for not following the English act and attempting to enumerate the associations which are excluded because formed under special statutes, is because such an enumeration is unnecessary, and because the [subsection] would have to be differently worded for each state. The [subsection] as drawn makes any association formed under a statute a partnership if it would have been a partnership in the state if the act had not been adopted. If the association would not have been a partnership had the act not been adopted, the adoption of the act does not make it a partnership. In short, the adoption of the act does not change the legal status in the state of any association formed under a statute.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present section defining a partnership as an entity for former language that read: "(1) A partnership is an association of two or more persons to carry on as co-owners a business for profit.

(2) But any association formed under any other statute of this state or any statute adopted by authority other than the authority of this state is not a partnership under this chapter unless such association would have been a partnership in this state prior to the adoption of this chapter. But this chapter shall apply to limited partnerships except insofar as the statutes relating to such partnerships are inconsistent herewith."

(2) [This act] does not impair the obligations of a contract existing on October 1, 1993, or affect an action or proceeding begun or right accrued before October 1, 1993.

DECISIONS AFTER 1993 REVISION

No Liability for Unpaid Wage Claim by Former Business Partner: Donald and Gail Peterson owned and operated a bar and casino. When Gail discovered an intimate relationship between Donald and plaintiff who was an employee, she demanded that they leave the establishment, and Gail then operated the business alone. The Petersons agreed to divorce, and as part of the settlement, Donald was allowed to operate the jointly owned business, receive all the profits, and assume all liabilities generated by the operation of the business, and Gail ceased any involvement with the day-to-day operations. Donald and plaintiff continued to operate the business as a couple, but Donald paid plaintiff no wages for 18 months. Gail eventually purchased the business assets and assumed the business debts and liabilities, at which point plaintiff brought a claim against Gail for the unpaid wages. An administrative judge held that the Petersons were jointly and severally liable as partners. The District Court upheld the decision, and Gail appealed. The Supreme Court noted that all four criteria in MacArthur Co. v. Stein, 282 M 85, 934 P2d 214 (1997), must be established to prove the existence of a partnership. Here, three of the four criteria did not exist after Gail relinquished control of the business to Donald. Because Gail was not a partner during the time that the wage claim arose, she bore no responsibility for wages owing during the period in question. In re Wage Claim of Harker v. Peterson, 2003 MT 175, 316 M 393, 72 P3d 949 (2003). See also In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767 (1998).

Whether Partnership Exists — Mixed Question of Fact and Law: The question of whether a partnership exists constitutes a mixed question of fact and law. Courts must decide as a matter of law what constitutes a partnership, but the determination of whether the evidence in a given case supports the existence of a partnership is a question of fact. When the facts are undisputed or susceptible of only one inference, the question of whether a partnership exists between particular persons is one of law for the court. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998). DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Joint Purchase of Real Estate — Finding of Partnership: The joint purchase of undeveloped real estate as tenants in common with equal contributions and with intent to resell the property for a profit, the subsequent consent to exchange the property for a commercial building, and the right to share in profits from the sale of the building are evidence that the parties were engaged together in business for profit. Barrett v. Larsen, 256 M 330, 846 P2d 1012, 50 St. Rep. 96 (1993).

Elements of Joint Venture: To qualify as a joint venture, four elements must be met: (1) an express or implied agreement or contract creating the joint venture; (2) a common purpose among the parties; (3) community of interest; and (4) an equal right to control of the venture. Weingart v. C&W Taylor Partnership, 248 M 76, 809 P2d 576, 48 St. Rep. 332 (1991).

Failure to Establish Partnership: Elements necessary to establish a partnership are outlined in Bender v. Bender, 144 M 470, 397 P2d 957 (1965). Partnership was not established where a party failed to provide sufficient evidence of: (1) commencement of partnership; (2) intent to form a partnership; (3) agreement to share profits and losses; and (4) the party's right to control partnership assets. Smith v. Estate of Smith, 230 M 140, 749 P2d 512, 45 St. Rep. 93 (1988), followed in Antonick v. Jones, 236 M 279, 769 P2d 1240, 46 St. Rep. 359 (1989), and in Wiberg v. 17 Bar, Inc., 241 M 490, 788 P2d 292, 47 St. Rep. 429 (1990), with Wiberg distinguished in Barrett v. Larsen, 256 M 330, 846 P2d 1012, 50 St. Rep. 96 (1993). See also Mont. Bank of Red Lodge v. Lightfield, 237 M 41, 771 P2d 571, 46 St. Rep. 605 (1989), Weingart v. Stein, 282 M 85, 934 P2d 214, 54 St. Rep. 254 (1997), and In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998).

Insubstantial Evidence of Partnership: There was conflicting evidence of an intention to form a partnership among three brothers—Jim, Fred, and Ross. There was: (1) no evidence of a contribution by Ross of anything promoting the partnership enterprise; (2) no joint proprietary interest in or right of mutual control over the business or its assets; and (3) a finding that, with regard to taxes, Ross received a share of net profits and losses of the business as payment of wages as an employee. The lower court properly held that Ross was a business employee rather than a partner. Pulliam v. Pulliam, 226 M 94, 733 P2d 1299, 44 St. Rep. 483 (1987).

Finding of Partnership — Splitting of Profits, Advertising, and Merging of Resources and Talents — Lack of Intent Not Controlling: Father and son shared equipment as needed, stored seed potatoes together in son's warehouse, advertised under the name of "Wilbur Kimm and Son", and split profits in a joint account. Son's insurer sued father's insurer for contribution for claims paid that were filed by buyers against son for crop damages caused by seeds treated by son. District Court found no partnership existed, primarily based on father's and son's testimony that they did not intend for a partnership to exist. The Supreme Court reversed and ordered judgment granting plaintiff insurer's motion for summary judgment. The Supreme Court held that splitting of profits, coupled with advertising under a joint name and the merging of resources and talents for the growing of the potatoes, preponderated against the District Court's finding of no partnership. Truck Ins. Exch. v. Indus. Indem. Co., 212 M 297, 688 P2d 1243, 41 St. Rep. 1835 (1984), followed in MacArthur Co. v. Stein, 282 M 85, 934 P2d 214, 54 St. Rep. 254 (1997).

Finding of Partnership — Authority of Partner: The Ellingson Agency and The Four Seasons Motor Inn held a lot as tenants in common. They made equal contributions to the purchase price and received equal distributions of the proceeds. They had made similar purchases for resale in the past. The Ellingson Agency collected the rent on the property and kept records of the amounts collected. The rent proceeds were used to pay property taxes and maintain a house on the property. These facts were sufficient to find that the corporations were acting as a partnership. Ellingson, as a partner, had the authority to enter into an agreement to convey the property. The buyer was able to compel specific performance of the buy-sell agreement. Walsh v. Ellingson Agency, 188 M 367, 613 P2d 1381 (1980), overruling Ivins v. Hardy, 120 M 35, 179 P2d 745 (1947), with Walsh followed in Barrett v. Larsen, 256 M 330, 846 P2d 1012, 50 St. Rep. 96 (1993).

DECISIONS AFTER 1993 REVISION

Judgment Not Creating Lien Prior to Execution on Personal Property: In settling the assets of a partnership, the District Court stated that its judgment constituted a lien against all personal property of the partnership. The remaining partner contended that based on 25-9-301, the court lacked authority to create a lien against personal property and that a judgment cannot become a lien against personal property until there has been an execution to enforce the judgment. Reversing, the Supreme Court agreed that there is no authority for a District Court to summarily convert a judgment to a lien against personal property, noting that a lien does not arise prior to execution on personal property. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998).

Real Property Properly Not Considered Partnership Asset: The District Court refused to consider certain real property as a partnership asset, concluding that it was never intended by the partners that the property should become an asset subject to distribution or taken into account upon dissolution of the partnership or death of a partner. The Supreme Court noted that the question of whether property belongs to a partnership depends primarily on the intent of the partners, and that intent may be inferred from a variety of sources, such as an agreement between the partners or by their conduct, although no single factor is determinative. The presumption that property is partnership property if it is acquired with partnership assets is rebuttable. In the present case, one partner contributed land for partnership use, but reserved title and the right to sell the land. The partners' intent clearly indicated that the property was not intended to become a partnership asset, and the District Court did not err when it refused to award the estate a share of the value of the land. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Master's Report Conclusive Unless Clearly Erroneous: The plaintiff, in a partnership dissolution action, argued that the lower court had erred in finding that a tavern he had given his ex-wife during his divorce was partnership property and that the court erred in placing a $50,000 value on the property. The Supreme Court held that there was sufficient evidence to find that the tavern had been originally purchased with partnership funds and therefore remained a partnership asset. The court also ruled that the valuation placed on the property was that arrived at by a court-appointed master and that unless clearly erroneous, the valuation was binding on the lower court. Mehl v. Mehl, 241 M 310, 786 P2d 1173, 47 St. Rep. 292 (1990).

Death of Partner — Disposition of Property Held Jointly by Partners: Robert and William, brothers, opened a joint checking account in 1947, paid all ranch expenses through the account, put all ranch income in the account, and equally split net profits. All cattle were branded with either of two brands, each of which was registered in the name of "William Palmer or Robert Palmer". The brothers were also joint tenants in a commodity brokerage account. The Supreme Court held that the cattle and both accounts were partnership property not held in joint tenancy and remained so upon Robert's death. Thus, they did not pass to William as the surviving joint tenant; rather, they remained in the partnership for the purpose of winding up the partnership and paying its liabilities, after which William must account to Robert's survivor, his widow, for Robert's share of the partnership. By its very nature, partnership property must be treated differently than property of individuals, including property held by individuals as joint tenants but who are not in partnership. This rule applies regardless of the formal legal manner in which the property is held. This is a rule of equity developed over hundreds of years and codified in the Uniform Partnership Act. In re Estate of Palmer, 218 M 285, 708 P2d 242, 42 St. Rep. 1585 (1985), followed in Fiedler v. Fiedler, 266 M 133, 879 P2d 675, 51 St. Rep. 691 (1994).

Acquisition of Real Property by Partnership: A partnership can acquire real estate by having the partners take title as cotenants. Robertson v. Robertson, 180 M 226, 590 P2d 113 (1978).

Ownership of Real Property: As against purchasers and lien creditors dealing with the owners of land on the faith of a recorded title and without notice that ownership is different from what appears on record, parol evidence is inadmissible to show that land conveyed to the grantees as individuals was held by them as partnership property. Robertson v. Robertson, 180 M 226, 590 P2d 113 (1978).

Individual Liability of Partners — General Rule: The Supreme Court cited the Wisconsin case of Phillip Lithographing Co. v. Babich, 135 NW 2d 343 (1965), in determining whether certain partners were individually liable on a contract. The general rule is that partners who continue to hold themselves out as such after the formation of a corporation cannot escape responsibility for contracts entered into after the change in business status without adequate notice that the partnership has been dissolved. This is especially true when the corporation operates under the same name and circumstances as the partnership. Springer v. Opsahl, 229 M 10, 744 P2d 884, 44 St. Rep. 1738 (1987).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Property Not Assignable Without Consent of All Partners: Two partners, without the knowledge or consent of the third partner who had instigated an action to dissolve the partnership, executed a trust indenture assigning marina property owned by the partnership as collateral for the loan. The Supreme Court held that the marina was partnership property and that the two partners had no authority to bind the partnership or encumber their individual one-third interests in the partnership property without the consent of all partners. The savings and loan had no interest in the property. Schrammeck v. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. 258 M 391, 853 P2d 702, 50 St. Rep. 580 (1993).

Partnership by Estoppel — Corporate Shareholders: The shareholders of a corporation can be liable as partners to a person dealing with the corporation if through some action or inaction of the corporation the person reasonably believes he is dealing with a partnership and relies upon that belief in dealing with the corporation. In this case there were various partnerships and a corporation, all with similar names and consisting of the same people, and although some evidence tended to show that operations of the corporation were apparently partnership operations, the existence of a partnership by estoppel is a factual issue, and in this case summary judgment finding such a partnership was improperly granted because factual issues remained. Gamble Robinson Co. v. Carousel Properties, 212 M 305, 688 P2d 283, 41 St. Rep. 1757 (1984).

Realtor Buying Property — Not Usual Way of Doing Business: As part of a real estate transaction in which the buyers needed to sell a piece of property in order to purchase other property, the realtor acting on behalf of the buyers executed a memorandum stating that if the property was not sold by a set time, she would purchase the property at a stated price. The memorandum was not signed by the realtor's alleged partner. On appeal, he contended he could not be bound by the memorandum under the Statute of Frauds. The Supreme Court held that the realtor could not bind her ostensible partner since there was no written authority of agency and because the purchase of real estate was not the realtor's usual way of doing business. The alleged partner could not be bound to the contract evidenced by the memo absent his authorization thereunto in writing. McNabb v. Norine, 204 M 330, 664 P2d 927, 40 St. Rep. 878 (1983).

Finding of Partnership — Authority of Partner: The Ellingson Agency and The Four Seasons Motor Inn held a lot as tenants in common. They made equal contributions to the purchase price and received equal distributions of the proceeds. They had made similar purchases for resale in the past. The Ellingson Agency collected the rent on the property and kept records of the amounts collected. The rent proceeds were used to pay property taxes and maintain a house on the property. These facts were sufficient to find that the corporations were acting as a partnership. Ellingson, as a partner, had the authority to enter into an agreement to convey the property. The buyer was able to compel specific performance of the buy-sell agreement. Walsh v. Ellingson Agency, 188 M 367, 613 P2d 1381 (1980), overruling Ivins v. Hardy, 120 M 35, 179 P2d 745 (1947).

Business of Partnership: The sale of all the property of a partnership is not the "carrying on in the usual way the business of the partnership" within meaning of this section. Ditzel v. Kent, 131 M 129, 308 P2d 628 (1957).

Sale of Partnership Property: When real estate broker dealing with members of a partnership knew that certain partner did not have authority to bind the other partners, he could not bring action for breach of contract for payment of commission when the only signer to contract was that partner. *Ditzel v. 1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present section regarding transfer of partnership property for former language that read: "(1) Where title to real property is in the partnership name, any partner may convey title to such property by a conveyance executed in the partnership name, but the partnership may recover such property unless the partner's act binds the partnership under the provisions of 35-10-301(1) or unless such property has been conveyed by the grantee or a person claiming through such grantee to a holder for value without knowledge that the partner, in making the conveyance, has exceeded his authority.

(2) Where title to real property is in the name of the partnership, a conveyance executed by a partner in his own name passes the equitable interest of the partnership, provided the act is one within the authority of the partner under the provisions of 35-10-301(1).

(3) Where title to real property is in the name of one or more but not all the partners and the record does not disclose the right of the partnership, the partners in whose name the title stands may convey title to such property, but the partnership may recover such property if the partner's act does not bind the partnership under the provisions of 35-10-301(1), unless the purchaser or his assignee is a holder for value without knowledge.

(4) Where the title to real property is in the name of one or more or all the partners or in a third person in trust for the partnership, a conveyance executed by a partner in the partnership name or in his own name passes the equitable interest of the partnership, provided the act is one within the authority of the partner under the provisions of 35-10-301(1).

(5) Where the title to real property is in the names of all the partners, a conveyance executed by all the partners passes all their rights in such property."

Official Comment

The actual condition of the American statute law affecting the nature of partnership liability is as follows:

In the following states by specific declaration of statutes all partnership liability is made both joint and several: [Miss.Code (1906), par. 2683; Mo.Anno.Stat. (1906), pars. 889, 892; 2 Ala.Code, par. 2506; N.Mex.Comp.L. (1897), pars. 2894, 2895, 2942, 2943; Md.Gen. Law (1904), p. 1357; W.Va.Code (1906), pars. 1996, 3467, 3787; D.C.Code (1889), par. 1205; Iowa (1897), pars. 3465, 3468; Gen.Stat.Kansas (1900), par. 1641; Minn.Rev.Laws (1905), pars. 4282, 4283; N.C.Rev.Laws (1905), par. 413; Ark.Statutes, Kirby (1904), pars. 4420, 4422]. In some of these states the liability is merely "deemed to be joint and several for the purpose of suit." In some of the states referred to the statutes are general; that is, they include all joint liability; while in others, there is the general statement followed by specific enumeration of partnership liability. But in all the states referred to the statutes, taken as a whole, effect, not only partnership liability, but also all joint liability.

In Illinois the court refused to interpret a general statute making all liability joint and several so as to include partnership liability. [Fleming v. Ross, (1907) 225 Ill. 149, 80 N.E. 92, 8 Ann.Cas. 314]; also the courts of Colorado [Erskine v. Russell, (1908) 43 Colo. 449, 453, 96 Pac. 249]. In New York, though the statute apparently made partners liable jointly and severally (3 Cons.L., p. 2522, par. 6), the court refused so to interpret the act [Seligman v. Friedlander, (1910) 138 App.Div. 784, 123 N.Y.S. 583].

In Texas, Oklahoma, Montana, Pennsylvania, New York, Colorado, Illinois, North Dakota, South Dakota, Ohio, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Georgia, Vermont, Virginia, Rhode Island, Kentucky, Michigan, Maine, Connecticut, Idaho and Indiana, partnership liability is joint. In many of these states, however, the results of joint liability as known to the common law have been modified by statute and decision. The extent of the modification varies. In some each partner must be sued severally or all jointly, an election being required. In some the partnership may be sued in the partnership name, and thereafter the partners separately until satisfaction is had. In all the estate of the deceased partner is subject to liability, but in some only after action first had against the survivors; in others proof of no partnership property must first be made; in others proceedings may be first had against the estate.

The purpose of the statutes in those states which have made the liability joint and several was to effect certain procedural results, rather than to affect the substantive law. Where, therefore, a state has already declared the liability to be joint and several, then the principle of uniformity would not be affected by that state so altering this paragraph as to make the liability joint and several, as this change would affect only the procedural law and this act is one to make uniform the substantive law of partnership.

(1) jointly and severally for everything chargeable to the partnership under 35-10-305 and 35-10-306;

(2) jointly for all other debts and obligations of the partnership, but any partner may enter into a separate obligation to perform a partnership contract."

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Liability of Innocent Partner for Restitution of Insurance Proceeds Paid Guilty Partner: Partners in a bar and motel business that was destroyed by fire threatened a bad faith claim against their insurer when 6 months had passed and no payments for the losses had been made. After payment was made, the insurer sought restitution from both partners after discovering that the fire was arson caused by one of the partners, even though one of the partners was not involved in the criminal activity. The Supreme Court found restitution to be proper from both partners because the insurance proceeds had been obtained through filing of a fraudulent claim, which voided the policy. A change in circumstances could not be argued by the innocent partner under the insurance exception set out in Comment b of Restatement of Restitution, sec. 142. Under this section, both partners were liable jointly for all debts and obligations of the partnership. (See 1993 and 1995 amendments.) Tyler v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 255 M 174, 841 P2d 538, 49 St. Rep. 958 (1992).

Dismissal of Partner Sued in Individual Capacity: It was not error for the trial court to dismiss a partner sued in his individual capacity when there was no evidence he was personally involved with any alleged wrongful acts. The dismissal did not affect his liability as a partner. Niles v. Big Sky Eyewear, 236 M 455, 771 P2d 114, 46 St. Rep. 504 (1989).

Joint Venture: Since joint ventures and partnerships are similar, employee of joint venture covered under Workmen's Compensation Act (now Workers' Compensation Act) was employee of individual members of joint venture and consequently could not maintain an action to recover damages from individual member of joint venture for negligence. Hamman v. U.S., 267 F. Supp. 420 (D.C. Mont. 1967).

Official Comment

This section clears several doubts and confusions of our existing case law. It has been held that a person is liable if he has been held out as a partner and knows that he is being held out, unless he prevents such holding out, even if to do so he has to take legal action. (Fletcher v. Pullen, (1889) 16 Atl. 887, 70 Md. 205, 14 Am.St.Rep. 355; Tanner, etc., Engine Co. v. Hall, (1888) 5 So. 584, 86 Ala. 305; Rittenhouse v. Leigh, (1850) 57 Miss. 697; Speer v. Bishop, (1874) 24 Ohio St. 598; Prof. Burdick in 30 Cyc. 393.) On the other hand, the weight of authority is to the effect that to be held as a partner he must consent to the holding and that consent is a matter of fact. The act as drafted follows this weight of authority and better reasoning. Morgan v. Farrell, (1890) 20 Atl. 614, 58 Conn. 413, 18 Am.St.Rep. 282; Bishop v. Georgeson, (1871) 60 Ill. 484; Thompson v. Toledo First Nat. Bank, (1884) 4 S.Ct. 689, 111 U.S. 529, 28 U.S.(L.Ed.) 507; Fisher v. A. Y. McDonald Co., (1899) 85 Ill.App. 653; Ihmsen v. Lathrop, (1883) 104 Pa.St. 365.

Another confusion of our existing case law arises when A is held out with his consent as a partner of B who is in business by himself. Here no partnership in fact exists. Can anyone who relies on the representation have priority on the property in the business over those creditors of B who trusted only B and not A and B? The case of Thayer v. Humphrey, (1895) 64 N.W. 1007, 91 Wis. 276, 51 Am.St.Rep. 887, 30 L.R.A. 549, answers this question in the affirmative. Other cases have reached an opposite conclusion. Burdick, Partnership, p. 16 et seq. Clause (b) affirms this opposite conclusion. In the case put A and B would be liable jointly, but as there was in fact no partnership fund, the creditors who thought there was a firm of A and B would have no priority on the assets which B had in his business as distinguished from his other assets.

Partnership by Estoppel Found: Whether or not he was legally a partner, it was proper to consider defendant a partner of the business that had engaged the contractor's services for a remodeling job when defendant: first, during the remodeling, personally assured the contractor that the bill would be paid when the remodeling was completed; and second, informed the contractor that he had signed a lease in which he and the other lessees agreed to pay for any remodeling costs beyond the $25,000 which the lessor had agreed to pay. Price Bldg. Serv., Inc. v. Holms, 214 M 456, 693 P2d 553, 42 St. Rep. 84 (1985).

Partnership by Estoppel — Corporate Shareholders: The shareholders of a corporation can be liable as partners to a person dealing with the corporation if through some action or inaction of the corporation the person reasonably believes he is dealing with a partnership and relies upon that belief in dealing with the corporation. In this case there were various partnerships and a corporation, all with similar names and consisting of the same people, and although some evidence tended to show that operations of the corporation were apparently partnership operations, the existence of a partnership by estoppel is a factual issue, and in this case summary judgment finding such a partnership was improperly granted because factual issues remained. Gamble Robinson Co. v. Carousel Properties, 212 M 305, 688 P2d 283, 41 St. Rep. 1757 (1984).

Effect When No Representation of Partnership: Where defendant, in sale of real estate to plaintiff, introduced plaintiff to builder, whom defendant claimed to be reliable, and builder later defaulted in action brought by plaintiff, the court found no partnership by estoppel between defendant and builder, because no representation of partnership appeared in or could be inferred from the record. Krone v. McCann, 196 M 260, 642 P2d 584, 39 St. Rep. 500 (1982).

Operation and Effect: When defendant furnished working capital of firm, countersigned firm's checks, other members of firm said he was a partner, and defendant himself did not inform plaintiff otherwise, it was question for the jury whether the defendant should be treated as if he were a partner. Gustafson v. Taber, 125 M 225, 234 P2d 471 (1951).

35-10-309. Liability of incoming partner.

Official Comment

The present section eliminates the difficulty which arises when a new partner is admitted without liquidation of firm debts. The present theory of the common law is that a new partnership is formed; all the property of the partnership which existed up to the moment of the entrance of the new partner being transferred to the new partnership. The result of this theory is that if the business fails, the creditors who have extended credit after the admission of the new partner have a prior claim on the assets in the business. The inequitable character of this result has led the courts, where no notice of the change of membership is had by the creditors, to be diligent in finding an assumption of liability on the part of the new partnership of the debts of the old partnership.

Though this section changes the formal statement of the law, which is to the effect that an incoming partner is not liable for debts contracted before his admission, as a matter of fact the section as worded conforms to the actual decisions of the courts, which however, are arrived at by making every effort to impress an assumption of liability on the part of the new partnership, formed as a result of the admission of the new partner, of the debts of the old partnership.

The difficulty, which is overcome by this section as worded, is illustrated by the common case where all the property of the existing partnership is taken over, without notice of any break in the conduct of business, by the new partnership composed of all the members of the existing partnership and the incoming partner; thereby depriving the existing partnership of all its property. Both the existing and the subsequent creditors may believe it is one and the same partnership, but, as stated, such would not be the case under the present law. There is no peculiar equity in the subsequent creditors giving them a right to be preferred, as against the property employed in the business, to the existing creditors. The incoming partner partakes of the benefit of the partnership property and an established business. He has every means of obtaining full knowledge and protecting himself, because he may insist on the liquidation or settlement of existing partnership debts. The creditors have no means of protecting themselves. So as to preserve the present law as nearly as possible it is declared that the liability of the incoming partner shall be satisfied only out of partnership property. It, therefore, results that existing and subsequent creditors have equal rights as against partnership property and the separate property of all the previously existing members of the partnership, while only the subsequent creditors have rights against the separate estate of the newly admitted partner.

The section should be read in connection with [35-10-613, now repealed]. Both sections are based on the principle that where there has been one continuous business the fact that A has been admitted to the business, or C ceased to be connected with it, should not be allowed to cause, as at present, endless confusion as to the claims of the creditors on the property employed in the business; but that all creditors of the business, irrespective of the times when they became creditors and the exact combinations of persons then owning the business, should have equal rights in such property. The recognition of this principle solves one of the most perplexing problems of present partnership law.

Case Notes

Personal Liability of Person Not a Partner When Obligations Incurred: The lower court held that the general partner was personally liable for the partnership's debt because the obligations did not arise until the final adjudication in a previous contract action between the parties. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that a general partner is not personally liable for obligations incurred before he becomes a partner. The Supreme Court held that a judgment only controls rights previously existing between the parties. An obligation arises when the contract is executed. The contract was executed prior to the defendant becoming a general partner, so he was not personally liable. Magers v. Mallas, 244 M 117, 796 P2d 571, 47 St. Rep. 1438 (1990).

35-10-401. Partner's rights and duties.Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 449 in (1) and (2) inserted last sentence concerning limitations on personal liability for charges; and inserted last sentence of (3) limiting personal liability for indemnification.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present (1) and (2) regarding partner accounts for former language that read: "The rights and duties of the partners in relation to the partnership shall be determined, subject to any agreement between them, by the following rules: (1) Each partner shall be repaid his contributions whether by way of capital or advances to the partnership property and share equally in the profits and surplus remaining after all liabilities, including those to partners, are satisfied and must contribute towards the losses, whether of capital or otherwise, sustained by the partnership according to his share in the profits"; in (3), after "payments", inserted "reasonably" and before "liabilities" deleted "personal"; in (4), after "contribute", deleted "shall be paid interest from the date of the payment or advance"; substituted (5) concerning a payment constituting a loan for former language that read: "A partner shall receive interest on the capital contributed by him only from the date when repayment should be made"; inserted (7) restricting use and possession of partnership property; inserted (11) regarding effect of partnership obligations on other persons; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 62, Ch. 238, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Application to Existing Relationships: Section 63, Ch. 238, L. 1993, provided: "(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, [this act] applies to all partnerships in existence on October 1, 1993, that were formed under Title 35, chapter 10, or any other predecessor law providing for the formation, operation, and liquidation of partnerships.

(2) [This act] does not impair the obligations of a contract existing on October 1, 1993, or affect an action or proceeding begun or right accrued before October 1, 1993.

(3) A judgment against a partnership or a partner in an action commenced before October 1, 1993, may be enforced in the same manner as a judgment rendered before October 1, 1993."

Case NotesDECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Agreement to Convey Partnership Property Void for Lack of Consideration — Agreement to Fund and Forbearance in Dissolving Partnership Held Insufficient: Marsha and Mac formed M&M Walkers, a partnership for the breeding, raising, training, and marketing of Tennessee Walker horses. Their partnership agreement was oral and was sealed with a handshake. When Marsha became concerned about the amount of time and money that she was putting into the partnership, Mac executed a written conveyance of his share of partnership property, which said that if anything happened to him, Marsha was to get all the partnership property. After Mac died, Marsha tried to enforce Mac's written statement against his estate, but the District Court held the statement to be invalid for lack of consideration. The Supreme Court held that while the written instrument is presumptive evidence of consideration, that presumption could be rebutted by Mac's estate, which sought to invalidate the statement. Marsha contended that her agreement to continue funding the partnership was sufficient consideration, but the Supreme Court held that because she had a legal duty to contribute to the partnership in accordance with her share of the profits, her "agreement" was not sufficient consideration. Marsha also argued that her forbearance from dissolving the partnership was also sufficient consideration. Citing Rudio v. Yellowstone Merchandising Corp., 200 M 537, 652 P2d 1163 (1982), the Supreme Court noted that it had held that forbearance is sufficient consideration only if there is an agreement to forbear, and in this case, there was no evidence in the record that Marsha had made such an agreement with Mac. The Supreme Court therefore affirmed the District Court's finding that there was insufficient consideration to support Mac's written conveyance of the partnership's property to Marsha. Nitzel v. Wickman, 283 M 304, 940 P2d 451, 54 St. Rep. 684 (1997). See also St. v. Keys, 1999 MT 10, 293 M 81, 973 P2d 812, 56 St. Rep. 44 (1999).

Lack of Element of Intent to Associate as Partners: Direct testimony that one of the alleged partners did not wish to be associated in a partnership, coupled with evidence that the brand used to identify the business was never transferred to the partnership, that the partnership name was never registered with the Secretary of State, and that the parties filed separate rather than partnership tax returns mitigated against a clear manifestation of the parties' intent to form a partnership. Tondu v. Akerley, 259 M 194, 855 P2d 116, 50 St. Rep. 754 (1993).

Liability of Partners for Attorney Fees Incurred on Behalf of Partnership: The partnership attorney represented the partnership in a legal matter until one partner, Doting, hired her own attorney, who subsequently filed an answer on Doting's behalf. The partnership attorney continued as counsel for the other partners, Trunks. Trunks maintained that the partnership should pay all fees and costs of the partnership attorney because Doting's attorney merely adopted and ratified the partnership attorney's work on the case. However, the District Court properly found that Trunks should pay Doting one-half of the sums paid by the partnership to the partnership attorney for representation of the partnership after Doting's attorney filed an answer for Doting in the suit. Doting v. Trunk, 253 M 350, 833 P2d 1028, 49 St. Rep. 429 (1992).

Partner Failing to Keep Records Estopped From Objecting to Court's Division of Property: The defendant in a partnership dissolution action objected to the lower court's ruling that the partnership property be divided equally. The Supreme Court held that the defendant was estopped from objecting to the property division because it had been his responsibility to keep the partnership records and he had failed to do so. Frank v. Birky, 250 M 11, 817 P2d 696, 48 St. Rep. 850 (1991).

Ex-Partner Not Liable for Partnership's Debts: The defendants argued that the plaintiff, a former partner, was liable for a portion of the partnership's debts regardless of the date of the dissolution of the partnership. The Supreme Court held that under this section, a partner's rights and duties are subject to any agreement between the partners. The partners had agreed to reimburse the plaintiff for his original contribution, and therefore he was not liable for any debts incurred after that time. Westfall v. Anderson, 244 M 113, 795 P2d 976, 47 St. Rep. 1431 (1990).

No Wages for Winding Up Affairs: The plaintiff, in a partnership dissolution action, argued that the lower court erred in not awarding him wages for winding up the partnership's affairs. The Supreme Court ruled that this section clearly states that wages may only be given for winding up the partnership's affairs in those cases where one of the partners has died or where the agreement provides for wages. Mehl v. Mehl, 241 M 310, 786 P2d 1173, 47 St. Rep. 292 (1990).

Wages Paid to One Partner's Children: The plaintiff, in an action for dissolution of a partnership, argued that the lower court erred in holding that wages paid to the other partner's children were partnership expenditures. The plaintiff alleged that the children had been hired because the defendant's health prevented him from doing his share of the work and that therefore the amount paid his children should have been deducted from the defendant's share of the assets. The Supreme Court ruled that the plaintiff had acquiesced to the arrangement and had shared in the resultant tax advantage; therefore, the wages were properly designated a partnership expense. Mehl v. Mehl, 241 M 310, 786 P2d 1173, 47 St. Rep. 292 (1990).

Partnership Agreement Inadequate to Cover Situation — Section Prevails: Felton Investment Group was a retirement benefit investment partnership, with partners consisting of employees of Felton Construction Company. In its partnership agreement, persons who voluntarily terminated employment or who were discharged for misconduct received contribution refunds and those who were involuntarily terminated from employment because of disability, death, or retirement retained a full interest in the partnership. The plaintiffs in this action were involuntarily terminated for refusing to disassociate with their union—a termination that the District Court determined to be a contingency not covered by the partnership agreement. Thus, the provisions of this section control repayment of contributions by providing for a pro rata repayment to the partners. Felton Inv. Group v. Taurman, 222 M 238, 722 P2d 1135, 43 St. Rep. 1228 (1986).

Finding of Partnership — Splitting of Profits, Advertising, and Merging of Resources and Talents — Lack of Intent Not Controlling: Father and son shared equipment as needed, stored seed potatoes together in son's warehouse, advertised under the name of "Wilbur Kimm and Son", and split profits in a joint account. Son's insurer sued father's insurer for contribution for claims paid that were filed by buyers against son for crop damages caused by seeds treated by son. District Court found no partnership existed, primarily based on father's and son's testimony that they did not intend for a partnership to exist. The Supreme Court reversed and ordered judgment granting plaintiff insurer's motion for summary judgment. The Supreme Court held that splitting of profits, coupled with advertising under a joint name and the merging of resources and talents for the growing of the potatoes, preponderated against the District Court's finding of no partnership. Truck Ins. Exch. v. Indus. Indem. Co., 212 M 297, 688 P2d 1243, 41 St. Rep. 1835 (1984).

Default in Joint Venture: Absent a default agreement, the members of a joint venture cannot forfeit the rights of a member and exclude him from participation in the enterprise because he is in default. The remedy for members not in default is an action for rescission or breach of contract. Murphy v. Redland, 178 M 296, 583 P2d 1049 (1978).

Agreement Providing for Termination on Project Completion — Division of Assets — Renegotiation Costs: When partnership agreement provided for termination of partnership upon completion of project and equal division of assets and dividends, three partners had no right to $8,500 paid to other two partners as a part of renegotiation cost for excess profits of $35,000. The $8,500 was paid to the two partners and deducted from total renegotiation cost of $35,000 in order to secure to those two partners tax benefits which they would not be able to obtain as a refund, while the other three partners could claim as a refund their tax benefits after payment of $26,500 to federal government. Pappin v. Dudley, 125 M 248, 236 P2d 280 (1951).

35-10-405. General standards of partner's conduct.Official Comment

[Subsection] (1) removes a doubt in the existing law. At present it is not clear whether the obligation to account where the partner has money or other property in his hands, is or is not an obligation in the nature of a trust. For instance: A, B and C are partners; A, as a result of a transaction connected with the conduct of the partnership, has in his hands, so that it may be traced, a specific sum of money or other property. A is insolvent. Is the claim of the partnership against A a claim against him as an ordinary creditor, or is it a claim to the specific property or money in his hands? The words "and hold as trustee for the partnership any profits" indicate clearly that the partnership can claim as their own any property or money that can be traced.

Case Notes

Partners' Failure to Comply With Agreement Terms Resulting in No Explicit Partnership Value — Fair Market Value Properly Ascribed: A 1968 agreement established the value of a partnership at $47,790.30 and required the partners to arrive annually at a new and updated value that would serve for the following year as the value of the partnership. However, the partners never reestablished any different value during the duration of the partnership. After one partner died in 1995, the District Court properly concluded that fair market value at the time of death should apply because the partners failed to comply with the terms of the agreement and thus were left without an explicitly agreed-upon value. In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767, 55 St. Rep. 1251 (1998), following Chapman v. Dunnegan, 665 SW 2d 643 (Mo. Ct. App. 1984).

Property Rights of a Partner

Part Case Notes

Property Not Assignable Without Consent of All Partners: Two partners, without the knowledge or consent of the third partner who had instigated an action to dissolve the partnership, executed a trust indenture assigning marina property owned by the partnership as collateral for the loan. The Supreme Court held that the marina was partnership property and that the two partners had no authority to bind the partnership or encumber their individual one-third interests in the partnership property without the consent of all partners. The savings and loan had no interest in the property. Schrammeck v. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. 258 M 391, 853 P2d 702, 50 St. Rep. 580 (1993).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Partnership Interest in Property No Defense to Charge of Theft: Kuntz claimed that he could not be convicted of theft of partnership property because under Montana common law, a partner cannot be guilty of stealing partnership property because a partner's interest extends to every portion of partnership property. He also argued that nothing in the Uniform Partnership Act in effect prior to the 1993 revision superseded the common law. The Supreme Court ruled that Kuntz was entitled only to an interest in the property for partnership purposes and that state criminal law specifically abandoned the common-law theory and made it a crime to steal property in which an individual has an interest but to which the individual is not entitled. St. v. Kuntz, 265 M 253, 875 P2d 1034, 51 St. Rep. 502 (1994).

Breach of Joint Venture Fiduciary Trust — Award of Investment Plus Interest Affirmed: Kelly and Rust agreed to purchase land, subdivide it, and sell it at a profit. Rust advanced Kelly $4,000 as one-half the purchase price. Kelly paid the $4,000 balance and recorded the deed, but did not include Rust on the recorded deed. Rust moved from the area and later attempted, through his agent, to purchase Kelly's interest in the land. The agent was told the land was already sold, so Rust brought an action to recover his investment plus interest. The trial court properly held that: (1) the parties had entered into a joint venture; (2) Kelly was required in equity to hold the property in a constructive trust; (3) Kelly breached the joint venture fiduciary duty and attempted to deprive Rust of his interest in the property; and (4) Rust was entitled to return of his $4,000 investment plus interest. Rust v. Kelly, 228 M 220, 741 P2d 786, 44 St. Rep. 1471 (1987).

Death of Partner — Disposition of Property Held Jointly by Partners: Robert and William, brothers, opened a joint checking account in 1947, paid all ranch expenses through the account, put all ranch income in the account, and equally split net profits. All cattle were branded with either of two brands, each of which was registered in the name of "William Palmer or Robert Palmer". The brothers were also joint tenants in a commodity brokerage account. The Supreme Court held that the cattle and both accounts were partnership property not held in joint tenancy and remained so upon Robert's death. Thus, they did not pass to William as the surviving joint tenant; rather, they remained in the partnership for the purpose of winding up the partnership and paying its liabilities, after which William must account to Robert's survivor, his widow, for Robert's share of the partnership. By its very nature, partnership property must be treated differently than property of individuals, including property held by individuals as joint tenants but who are not in partnership. This rule applies regardless of the formal legal manner in which the property is held. This is a rule of equity developed over hundreds of years and codified in the Uniform Partnership Act. In re Estate of Palmer, 218 M 285, 708 P2d 242, 42 St. Rep. 1585 (1985), followed in Fiedler v. Fiedler, 266 M 133, 879 P2d 675, 51 St. Rep. 691 (1994).

35-10-505. Partner's transferable interest subject to charging order.

Official Comment

[Section 35-10-505(1)] is taken from section 23(2) of the English Partnership Act. The operation of the provision has given great satisfaction. The judgment creditor does not acquire any greater rights than the debtor is entitled to for his own benefit. [Sutton v. English, etc., Produce Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 502; Howard v. Sadler, [1893] 1 Q.B. 1; Cooper v. Griffin, [1892] 1 Q.B. 740; Scott v. Hastings, (1858) 4 Kay & J. 633].

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 238 substituted present section regarding partner's transferable interest for former language that read: "(1) On due application to a competent court by any judgment creditor of a partner, the court which entered the judgment, order, or decree or any other court may charge the interest of the debtor partner with payment of the unsatisfied amount of such judgment debt with interest thereon and may then or later appoint a receiver of his share of the profits and of any other money due or to fall due to him in respect of the partnership and make all other orders, directions, accounts, and inquiries which the debtor partner might have made or which the circumstances of the case may require.

(2) The interest charged may be redeemed at any time before foreclosure or, in case of a sale being directed by the court, may be purchased without thereby causing a dissolution:

(a) with separate property, by any one or more of the partners; or

(b) with partnership property, by any one or more of the partners with the consent of all the partners whose interests are not so charged or sold.

(3) Nothing in this chapter shall be held to deprive a partner of his right, if any, under the exemption laws as regards his interest in the partnership."

Severability: Section 62, Ch. 238, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Application to Existing Relationships: Section 63, Ch. 238, L. 1993, provided: "(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, [this act] applies to all partnerships in existence on October 1, 1993, that were formed under Title 35, chapter 10, or any other predecessor law providing for the formation, operation, and liquidation of partnerships.

(2) [This act] does not impair the obligations of a contract existing on October 1, 1993, or affect an action or proceeding begun or right accrued before October 1, 1993.

Question of Validity of Offset Moot — Dismissal of Counterclaim and Motion for Partial Summary Judgment Proper: A promissory note related to a stock sale provided for acceleration upon notice of default. Following defendants' default, plaintiff paid an escrow agent an amount that satisfied plaintiff's obligation under the sale agreement, and the agent then deducted from that payment the amount owed by defendants under the promissory note, transferred the balance back to plaintiff in satisfaction of the note, and forwarded the balance of plaintiff's payment to defendants. Defendants filed a counterclaim and moved for partial summary judgment based on the validity of the offset. The District Court dismissed both, and defendants appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Because both parties received the money owed to them, and because the acceleration and offset were appropriate, the issues raised by defendants lost any practical purpose. The issue of the validity of the offset was moot, and the Supreme Court declined to address the issue further. Lewistown Propane Co. v. Moncur, 2002 MT 349, 313 M 368, 61 P3d 780 (2002).

Dissolution and Winding Up

Part Case Notes

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Court Dissolution of Partnership Prior to Winding Up — Equity: Even though certain contract receivables would not be paid in full during the 60-day period ordered for winding up the partnership affairs, the District Court properly ordered the partnership dissolved as a matter of equity, given the extreme animosity between the parties and the fact that dissolution does not terminate a partnership for purposes of winding up and suing and being sued while winding up. Doting v. Trunk, 253 M 350, 833 P2d 1028, 49 St. Rep. 429 (1992).

Split of Expenses Related to Dissolution Proceeding: Noting that each party should pay for its own defense in a dissolution action, the District Court properly held each partner liable for paying one-half of the amount attributable to legitimate partnership expenses incurred as the result of the dissolution. Doting v. Trunk, 253 M 350, 833 P2d 1028, 49 St. Rep. 429 (1992).

When Reason for Partnership Ceases, Damages and Attorney Fees Not Payable Upon Dissolution: The District Court correctly found that Doting owed no damages or attorney fees to Trunks as the result of the dissolution of the parties' partnership because: (1) the reason for the partnership ceased to exist when the partnership assets were sold; (2) Trunks had moved out of state; and (3) the partnership agreement Doting was alleged to have violated did not provide for dissolution, only buyout. Doting v. Trunk, 253 M 350, 833 P2d 1028, 49 St. Rep. 429 (1992).

Proper Date of Valuation of Deceased Partner's Interest: Where one partner died and the surviving partners continued the business, continued to graze cattle on the partnership land, and did not elect to liquidate partnership assets, the business was continued under 35-10-613(2) and (3) (now repealed). Therefore, 35-10-614 (now repealed) applies, and the deceased partner's interest is properly valued as of the date of his death. Webb v. Wolfe, 230 M 322, 749 P2d 531, 45 St. Rep. 242 (1988).

Death of Partner — Disposition of Property Held Jointly by Partners: Robert and William, brothers, opened a joint checking account in 1947, paid all ranch expenses through the account, put all ranch income in the account, and equally split net profits. All cattle were branded with either of two brands, each of which was registered in the name of "William Palmer or Robert Palmer". The brothers were also joint tenants in a commodity brokerage account. The Supreme Court held that the cattle and both accounts were partnership property not held in joint tenancy and remained so upon Robert's death. Thus, they did not pass to William as the surviving joint tenant; rather, they remained in the partnership for the purpose of winding up the partnership and paying its liabilities, after which William must account to Robert's survivor, his widow, for Robert's share of the partnership. By its very nature, partnership property must be treated differently than property of individuals, including property held by individuals as joint tenants but who are not in partnership. This rule applies regardless of the formal legal manner in which the property is held. This is a rule of equity developed over hundreds of years and codified in the Uniform Partnership Act. In re Estate of Palmer, 218 M 285, 708 P2d 242, 42 St. Rep. 1585 (1985), followed in Fiedler v. Fiedler, 266 M 133, 879 P2d 675, 51 St. Rep. 691 (1994).

Partnership Accounting: When no balance of the partnership business could be arrived at without an accounting and the defendant made all his records available and it was clear from the record that the defendant in good faith had thought there was a loss instead of a profit, interest on the amount due was figured from date of judgment rather than date of termination of partnership. Shidu v. Hollenback, 133 M 265, 322 P2d 325 (1958).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1993 REVISION

Termination Reasonable: The Uniform Partnership Act does not require that every transaction be completed before a partnership can be terminated. The District Court did not err in ordering termination of the partnership on the date of final distribution to the parties from the partnership's trust account. Property may be held as trust in common after partnership affairs are settled. An escrow agent could make pro rata distributions to the partners when payments are received on contracts for deed without continuing the partnership. Doting v. Trunk, 259 M 343, 856 P2d 536, 50 St. Rep. 826 (1993).

Court Dissolution of Partnership Prior to Winding Up — Equity: Even though certain contract receivables would not be paid in full during the 60-day period ordered for winding up the partnership affairs, the District Court properly ordered the partnership dissolved as a matter of equity, given the extreme animosity between the parties and the fact that dissolution does not terminate a partnership for purposes of winding up and suing and being sued while winding up. Doting v. Trunk, 253 M 350, 833 P2d 1028, 49 St. Rep. 429 (1992).

Disposition of Assets: When surviving partners of law partnership were unable to agree on distribution of pending cases, an asset of the partnership, and it became necessary to appoint special master to facilitate final dissolution, decision to split returns of unfinished business, two-thirds to partner handling business and one-third to other, was fair. Case Notes

No Liability for Unpaid Wage Claim by Former Business Partner: Donald and Gail Peterson owned and operated a bar and casino. When Gail discovered an intimate relationship between Donald and plaintiff who was an employee, she demanded that they leave the establishment, and Gail then operated the business alone. The Petersons agreed to divorce, and as part of the settlement, Donald was allowed to operate the jointly owned business, receive all the profits, and assume all liabilities generated by the operation of the business, and Gail ceased any involvement with the day-to-day operations. Donald and plaintiff continued to operate the business as a couple, but Donald paid plaintiff no wages for 18 months. Gail eventually purchased the business assets and assumed the business debts and liabilities, at which point plaintiff brought a claim against Gail for the unpaid wages. An administrative judge held that the Petersons were jointly and severally liable as partners. The District Court upheld the decision, and Gail appealed. The Supreme Court noted that all four criteria in MacArthur Co. v. Stein, 282 M 85, 934 P2d 214 (1997), must be established to prove the existence of a partnership. Here, three of the four criteria did not exist after Gail relinquished control of the business to Donald. Because Gail was not a partner during the time that the wage claim arose, she bore no responsibility for wages owing during the period in question. In re Wage Claim of Harker v. Peterson, 2003 MT 175, 316 M 393, 72 P3d 949 (2003). See also In re Estate of Bolinger, 1998 MT 303, 292 M 97, 971 P2d 767 (1998).

Case Notes

Allocation of Losses in Other Than Equal Proportion Than Division of Profits: One of two equal partners claimed all of the partnership's losses on his personal taxes for the purpose of receiving a tax benefit. When the time came for final settlement, it was contended that half the losses suffered by the partnership should be assigned to the estate and that because the losses for which the estate was allegedly responsible were greater than the assets to which the estate was entitled, nothing was owed to the estate from the partnership. The District Court held that because one partner benefited from the partnership losses, he must also bear the burden of the action and was effectively precluded from trying to assign a share of the losses to the estate. Citing section 704(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, the Supreme Court agreed, holding that when partners exercise their right to allot partnership losses in some fashion other than in equal proportion to their division of profits, that allotment controls for purposes of determining losses during settlement. The District Court did not err in refusing to allocate partnership losses to the estate, which would have diminished the value of the estate's interest in the partnership. CHAPTER 12 LIMITED PARTNERSHIPS

Chapter Commissioners' Comments

The Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act adopted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws in August, 1976, was intended to modernize the prior uniform law while retaining the special character of limited partnerships as compared with corporations. The draftsman of a limited partnership agreement has a degree of flexibility in defining the relations among the partners that is not available in the corporate form. Moreover, the relationship among partners is consensual, and requires a degree of privity that forces the general partner to seek approval of the partners (sometimes unanimous approval) under circumstances that corporate management would find unthinkable. The limited partnership was not intended to be an alternative in all cases where corporate form is undesirable for tax or other reasons, and the new act was not intended to make it so. The new act clarifies many ambiguities and fills interstices in the prior uniform law by adding more detailed language and mechanics. In addition, some important substantive changes and additions have been made.

[Part 5] provides a list of all of the definitions used in the act, integrates the use of limited partnership names with corporate names and provides for an office and agent for service of process in the state of organization. All of these provisions are new. [Part 6] collects in one place all provisions dealing with execution and filing of certificates of limited partnership and certificates of amendment and cancellation. [Parts 5 and 6] reflect an important change in the statutory scheme; recognition that the basic document in any partnership, including a limited partnership, is the partnership agreement. The certificate of limited partnership is not a constitutive document (except in the sense that it is a statutory prerequisite to creation of the limited partnership), and merely reflects matters as to which creditors should be put on notice.

[Part 7] deals with the single most difficult issue facing lawyers who use the limited partnership form of organization: the powers and potential liabilities of limited partners. Section [35-12-703] lists a number of activities in which a limited partner may engage without being held to have so participated in the control of the business that he assumes the liability of a general partner. Moreover, it goes on to confine the liability of a limited partner who merely steps over the line of participation in control to persons who actually know of that participation in control. General liability for partnership debts is imposed only on those limited partners who are, in effect, "silent general partners". With that exception, the provisions of the new act that impose liability on a limited partner who has somehow permitted third parties to be misled to their detriment as to the limited partner's true status confine that liability to those who have actually been misled. The provisions relating to general partners are collected in [part 8].

[Part 9], the finance section, makes some important changes from the prior uniform law. The contribution of services and promises to contribute cash, property or services are now explicitly permitted as contributions. And those who fail to perform promised services are required, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, to pay the value of the services stated in the certificate of limited partnership.

A number of changes from the prior uniform law are made in [part 10], dealing with distributions from and the withdrawal of partners from the partnership. For example, [35-12-1008] creates a statute of limitations on the right of a limited partnership to recover all or part of a contribution that has been returned to a limited partner, whether to satisfy creditors or otherwise.

The assignability of partnership interests is dealt with in considerable detail in [part 11]. The provisions relating to dissolution appear in [part 12], which, among other things, imposes a new standard for seeking judicial dissolution of a limited partnership.

One of the thorniest questions for those who operate limited partnerships in more than one state has been the status of the partnership in a state other than the state of organization. Neither existing case law nor administrative practice makes it clear whether the limited partners continue to possess their limited liability and which law governs the partnership. [Part 13] deals with this problem by providing for registration of foreign limited partnerships and specifying choice-of-law rules.

Finally, [part 14] of the new act authorizes derivative actions to be brought by limited partners.

Source: Parts 5 through 14 are drawn from the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act adopted in 1976 by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

Saving Clause: Section 63, Ch. 522, L. 1981, provided: "(1) This act does not impair the obligation of any contract existing on October 1, 1981, or affect any rights accrued, duties incurred, or proceedings begun before October 1, 1981.

(2) A limited partnership formed under any statute of this state before October 1, 1981, may elect to be governed by this chapter. The general partner or partners may make the election for the limited partnership at any time on or after October 1, 1981, by complying with 35-12-601 of this chapter, except that the limited partners shall not be required to execute a new certificate of limited partnership. Notwithstanding such election by the general partner or partners:

(a) 35-12-901, 35-12-902, and 35-12-1008 apply only to contributions and distributions made after the date of the election;

(b) 35-12-1104 applies only to assignments made after the date of the election; and

(c) 35-12-1204 does not change the priority of creditors for transactions entered into before the date of the election.

(3) A limited partnership formed under any statute of this state before October 1, 1981, until or unless it elects to be governed by this chapter, shall be governed by 35-12-101 through 35-12-403, or other applicable prior law."

Uniform State Law: The "Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act" replaces the former "Uniform Limited Partnership Act" (former parts 1 through 4 of Title 35, chapter 12). 35-12-504. Definitions.

Commissioners' Comments

The definitions in this section clarify a number of uncertainties in [former] law and make certain changes.

Contribution: this definition makes it clear that a present contribution of services and a promise to make a future payment of cash, contribution of property or performance of services are permissible forms for a contribution. Accordingly, the present services or promise must be accorded a value in the certificate of limited partnership [35-12-601], and, in the case of a promise, that value may determine the liability of a partner who fails to honor his agreement [35-12-902]. Section 3 of the prior uniform law [35-12-103, now repealed] did not permit a limited partner's contribution to be in the form of services, although that inhibition did not apply to general partners.

Foreign limited partnership: the act only deals with foreign limited partnerships formed under the laws of another "State" of the United States [see 35-12-504(12)], and any adopting State that desires to deal by statute with the status of entities formed under the laws of foreign countries must make appropriate changes throughout the act. The exclusion of such entities from the act was not intended to suggest that their "limited partners" should not be accorded limited liability by the courts of a State adopting the act. That question would be resolved by the choice-of-law rules of the forum State.

General partner: this definition recognizes the separate functions of the partnership agreement and the certificate of limited partnership. The partnership agreement establishes the basic grant of management power to the persons named as general partners; but because of the passive role played by the limited partners, the separate, formal step of embodying that grant of power in the certificate of limited partnership has been preserved to emphasize its importance.

Limited partner: as in the case of general partners, this definition provides for admission of limited partners through the partnership agreement and solemnization in the certificate of limited partnership. In addition, the definition makes it clear that being named in the certificate of limited partnership is a prerequisite to limited partner status. Failure to file does not, however, mean that the participant is a general partner or that he has general liability. See [35-12-602(5) and 35-12-703].

Partnership agreement: the prior uniform law did not refer to the partnership agreement, assuming that all important matters affecting limited partners would be set forth in the certificate of limited partnership. Under modern practice, however, it has been common for the partners to enter into a comprehensive partnership agreement, only part of which was required to be included in the certificate of limited partnership. As reflected in [35-12-601], the certificate of limited partnership is confined principally to matters respecting the addition and withdrawal of partners and of capital, and other important issues are left to the partnership agreement.

Partnership interest: this definition is new and is intended to define what it is that is transferred when a partnership interest is assigned.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in definition of certificate of limited partnership, after "amended", inserted "or restated"; and in definition of limited partner, after "agreement", deleted "and who is named in the certificate of limited partnership as a limited partner".

Commissioners' Comments

[Subsection] (2) of [this section] has been carried over from Section 5 of the prior uniform law [35-12-205, now repealed] with certain editorial changes. The remainder of [this section] is new and primarily reflects the intention to integrate the registration of limited partnership names with that of corporate names. Accordingly, [35-12-601] provides for central, state-wide filing of certificates of limited partnership, and [subsections] (3), (4) and (5) of [this section] contain standards to be applied by the filing officer in determining whether the certificate should be filed. [Subsection] (1) requires that the proper name of a limited partnership contain the words "limited partnership" in full.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 27 inserted (1)(c) prohibiting the use of a business name identifier in the name of a limited partnership; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 229 inserted (2) providing that use of limited partnership's name is governed by 35-1-308; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 2, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1) substituted "the abbreviation "l.p.", or the designation "lp"" for "in full"; deleted former (3) that read: "may not contain any word or phrase indicating or implying that it is organized other than for a purpose stated in its certificate of limited partnership"; at beginning of (4) substituted "must be distinguishable on the record from" for "may not be the same as or deceptively similar to"; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 120 in (4) inserted reference to limited liability company.

35-12-507. Specified office and agent.Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is new. It requires that a limited partnership have certain minimum contacts with its state of organization, i.e., an office at which the constitutive documents and basic financial information is kept and an agent for service of process.

35-12-508. Records to be kept.Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is new. In view of the passive nature of the limited partner's position, it has been widely felt that limited partners are entitled to access to certain basic documents, including the certificate of limited partnership and any partnership agreement. In view of the great diversity among limited partnerships, it was thought inappropriate to require a standard form of financial report, and [35-12-508] does no more than require retention of tax returns and any other financial statements that are prepared. The names and addresses of the partners are made available to the general public.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1)(a), after "partner", substituted "separately identifying the general partners" for "set forth" and at end inserted "and the limited partners, in alphabetical order"; inserted (1)(e) regarding a record of the contributions of the partners and events triggering dissolution; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-509. Nature of business.Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is identical to Section 3 of the prior uniform law [35-12-103, now repealed]. Many states require that certain regulated industries, such as banking, may be carried on only by entities organized pursuant to special statutes, and it is contemplated that the prohibited activities would be confined to the matters covered by those statutes.

[This section] makes a number of important changes in Section 13 of the prior uniform law [35-12-310, now repealed]. Section 13, in effect, created a special fraudulent conveyance provision applicable to the making of secured loans by limited partners and the repayment by limited partnerships of loans from limited partners. [Section 35-12-510] leaves that question to a State's general fraudulent conveyance statute. In addition, [this section] eliminates the prohibition in former Section 13 against a general partner (as opposed to a limited partner) sharing pro rata with general creditors in the case of an unsecured loan. Of course, other doctrines developed under bankruptcy and insolvency laws may require the subordination of loans by partners under appropriate circumstances.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 396 in first sentence after "fees" deleted "reasonably related to the costs" and substituted last sentence requiring that fees must be set and deposited in accordance with 2-15-405 for "The secretary of state shall maintain records sufficient to support the fee charged for the filing requirements"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 near beginning of first sentence, after "state", substituted "shall" for "is authorized and required to" and after "certificate of amendment" inserted "or restatement".

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 161 (Ch. 522, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because section 65 of the bill [35-12-521] would grant the secretary of state the authority to adopt rules establishing filing fees. Rules are to be adopted under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. The documents for which filing fees may be charged under those rules shall not be limited to the documents specifically named in section 65 of SB 161 [35-12-521], but may include others required or allowed to be filed under the bill's provisions, as well as any amended documents required or allowed to be filed. 35-12-601. Certificate of limited partnership.Commissioners' Comments

The matters required to be set forth in the certificate of limited partnership are not different in kind from those required by Section 2 of the prior uniform law [35-12-201, now repealed], although certain additions and deletions have been made and the description has been revised to conform with the rest of the act. In general, the certificate is intended to serve two functions: first, to place creditors on notice of the facts concerning the capital of the partnership and the rules regarding additional contributions to and withdrawals from the partnership; second, to clearly delineate the time at which persons become general partners and limited partners. [Subsection (2)], which is based upon the prior uniform law, has been retained to make it clear that the existence of the limited partnership depends only upon compliance with this section. Its continued existence is not dependent upon compliance with other provisions of this act.

35-12-602. Amendments to certificate — restated certificates.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] makes substantial changes in Section 24 of the prior uniform law [35-12-203, now repealed]. [Subsection (2)] lists the basic events—the addition or withdrawal of partners or capital or capital obligations—that are so central to the function of the certificate of limited partnership that they require prompt amendment. [Subsection (3)] makes it clear, as it was not clear under subdivision (2)(g) of former Section 24, that the certificate of limited partnership is intended to be an accurate description of the facts to which it relates at all times and does not speak merely as of the date it is executed. [Subsection (5)] provides a "safe harbor" against claims of creditors or others who assert that they have been misled by the failure to amend the certificate of limited partnership to reflect changes in any of the important facts referred to in [subsection (2)]; if the certificate of limited partnership is amended within 30 days of the occurrence of the event, no creditor or other person can recover for damages sustained during the interim. Additional protection is afforded by the provisions of [35-12-704].

35-12-604. Execution of certificates.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] collects in one place the formal requirements for the execution of certificates which were set forth in Sections 2 and 25 of the prior uniform law [35-12-201 and 35-12-204, now repealed]. Those sections required that each certificate be signed by all partners, and there developed an unnecessarily cumbersome practice of having each limited partner sign powers of attorney to authorize the general partners to execute certificates of amendment on their behalf. [This section] insures that each partner must sign a certificate when he becomes a partner or when the certificates reflect any increase in his obligation to make contributions. Certificates of amendment are required to be signed by only one general partner and all general partners must sign certificates of cancellation. [This section] prohibits blanket powers of attorney for the execution of certificates in many cases, since those conditions under which a partner is required to sign have been narrowed to circumstances of special importance to that partner. The former requirement that all certificates be sworn has been confined to statements by the general partners, recognizing that the limited partner's role is a limited one.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1)(a), at beginning, substituted "An initial" for "Each original" and at end substituted "all general partners" for "each partner named therein"; in (1)(b), after "other" and after "new", inserted "general" and at end deleted "or whose contribution is described as having been increased"; in (2), after "admission", substituted "of a general partner" for "or increased contribution of a partner" and at end deleted "or increase"; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-605. Execution by judicial act.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] changes subdivisions (3) and (4) of Section 25 of the prior uniform law [35-12-204, now repealed] by confining the persons who have standing to seek judicial intervention to partners and to those assignees who are adversely affected by the failure or refusal of the appropriate persons to file a certificate of amendment or cancellation.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in first sentence, after "certificate", deleted "of amendment or cancellation", after "other" substituted "person" for "partner and any assignee of a partnership interest", and at end substituted "execution of the certificate" for "amendment or cancellation" and in second sentence, after "finds that", substituted "it is proper for the certificate to be executed" for "the amendment or cancellation is proper" and at end deleted "of amendment or cancellation".

35-12-606. Filing in the office of the secretary of state.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is new. In addition to providing mechanics for the central filing system, the second sentence of this section does away with the requirement, formerly imposed by some local filing officers, that persons who have executed certificates under a power of attorney exhibit executed copies of the power of attorney itself. [Subsection (2)] changes subdivision (5) of Section 25 of the prior uniform law [35-12-204, now repealed] by providing that certificates of cancellation are effective upon their effective date under [35-12-603].

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 75 at beginning of (1) deleted "One original and one copy of"; and in (1)(a) near middle substituted "document" for "original and the copy". Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1), in first sentence in two places after "amendment", inserted "restatement"; in (2), in first sentence after "certificate of amendment", inserted "restatement" and after "amended" inserted "or restated"; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: In (1), substituted "One original and one copy" for "two signed copies"; in (1)(a), substituted "the original and the copy" for "each duplicate original"; in (1)(b), substituted "the original" for "one duplicate original"; in (1)(c), substituted "copy" for "other duplicate original".

35-12-607. Liability for false statement in certificate.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] changes Section 6 of the prior uniform law [35-12-202, now repealed] by providing explicitly for the liability of persons who sign a certificate as agent under a power of attorney and by confining the obligation to amend a certificate of limited partnership in light of future events to general partners.

Compiler's Comments

35-12-608. Constructive notice.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is new. By stating that the filing of a certificate of limited partnership only results in notice of the limited liability of the limited partners, it obviates the concern that third parties may be held to have notice of special provisions set forth in the certificate. While this section is designed to preserve the limited liability of limited partners, the notice provided is not intended to change any liability of a limited partner which may be created by his action or inaction under the law of estoppel, agency, fraud, or the like.

Limited Partners35-12-701. Admission of limited partners.*Commissioners' Comments

[Section 35-12-701(1)(a)] adds to Section 8 of the prior uniform law [35-12-207, now repealed] an explicit recognition of the fact that unanimous consent of all partners is required for admission of new limited partners unless the partnership agreement provides otherwise. [Section 35-12-701(1)(b)] is derived from Section 19 of the prior uniform law [35-12-304, now repealed] but abandons the former terminology of "substituted limited partner".

35-12-702. Voting.Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is new, and must be read together with [35-12-703(2)(e)]. Although the prior uniform law did not speak specifically of the voting powers of limited partners, it is not uncommon for partnership agreements to grant such power to limited partners. [This section] is designed only to make it clear that the partnership agreement may grant such power to limited partners. If such powers are granted to limited partners beyond the "safe harbor" of [35-12-703(2)(e)], a court may hold that, under the circumstances, the limited partners have participated in "control of the business" within the meaning of [35-12-703(1)]. [Section 35-12-703(3)] simply means that the exercise of powers beyond the ambit of [35-12-703(2)] is not ipso facto to be taken as taking part in the control of the business.

Compiler's Comments

Source: This section is derived from sec. 302 of the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act (1976).

35-12-703. Liability to third parties.Commissioners' Comments

[This section] makes several important changes in Section 7 of the prior uniform law [35-12-301, now repealed]. The first sentence of [35-12-703(1)] carries over the basic test from former Section 7—whether the limited partner "takes part in the control of the business"—in order to insure that judicial decisions under the prior uniform law remain applicable to the extent not expressly changed. The second sentence of [35-12-703(1)] reflects a wholly new concept. Because of the difficulty of determining when the "control" line has been overstepped, it was thought it unfair to impose general partner's liability on a limited partner except to the extent that a third party had knowledge of his participation in control of the business. On the other hand, in order to avoid permitting a limited partner to exercise all of the powers of a general partner while avoiding any direct dealings with third parties, the "is not substantially the same as" test was introduced. [Subsection (2)] is intended to provide a "safe harbor" by enumerating certain activities which a limited partner may carry on for the partnership without being deemed to have taken part in control of the business. [Subsection (4)] is derived from Section 5 of the prior uniform law [35-12-205, now repealed], but adds as a condition to the limited partner's liability the fact that a limited partner must have knowingly permitted his name to be used in the name of the limited partnership.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 7 in (4) near middle substituted "35-12-505(1)(b)(i) and (1)(b)(ii)" for "35-12-505(2)(a) and (2)(b)". Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (1), near middle of second sentence after "the business", deleted "is not substantially the same as the exercise of the powers of a general partner" and at end substituted "reasonably believing, based on the limited partner's conduct, that the limited partner is a general partner" for "with actual knowledge of his participation in control"; in (2)(a), at end, inserted "or being an officer, director, or shareholder of a general partner that is a corporation"; in (2)(c), at end, inserted "or guaranteeing or assuming one or more specific obligations of the limited partnership"; substituted (2)(d) regarding pursuit of a derivative action for former language that read: "approving or disapproving an amendment to the partnership agreement"; inserted (2)(e) regarding meetings of partners; in (2)(f), at beginning, substituted "proposing, approving, or disapproving, by voting or otherwise" for "voting on"; in (2)(f)(ii), at end, deleted "other than in the ordinary course of its business"; in (2)(f)(v), before "removal", inserted "admission or"; inserted (2)(f)(vi) through (2)(f)(ix) adding additional actions related to voting; inserted (2)(g) regarding winding up the limited partnership; inserted (2)(h) regarding unenumerated powers; and made minor changes in style.

35-12-704. Person erroneously believing limited partner status.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is derived from Section 11 of the prior uniform law [35-12-312, now repealed]. The "good faith" requirement has been added in the first sentence of [35-12-704(1)]. The provisions of [35-12-704(1)(b)] are intended to clarify an ambiguity in the prior law by providing that a person who chooses to withdraw from the enterprise in order to protect himself from liability is not required to renounce any of his then current interest in the enterprise so long as he has no further participation as an equity participant. [Subsection (2)] preserves the liability of the equity participant prior to withdrawal (and after the time for appropriate amendment in the case of a limited partnership) to any third party who has transacted business with the person believing in good faith that he was a general partner.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 in (2), near middle after "show", substituted "that the person is not a general partner" for "the withdrawal or before an appropriate certificate is filed to show his status as a limited partner and, in the case of an amendment, after expiration of the 30-day period for filing an amendment relating to the person as a limited partner under 35-12-602"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: At end of (1)(b) after "enterprise", inserted "by executing and filing in the office of the secretary of state a certificate declaring withdrawal under this section".

The amendment of this section of the uniform law was approved by the executive committee of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws to add a more specific notice requirement to facilitate withdrawal from equity participation when a partner believes that he has limited partner status but finds that he has made a good faith mistake.

General Partners*35-12-801. Admission.*Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is derived from Section 9(1)(e) of the prior law [35-12-306, now repealed] and carries over the unwaivable requirement that all limited partners must consent to the admission of an additional general partner and that such consent must specifically identify the general partner involved.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 268 near middle substituted "as provided in writing in the partnership agreement or, if the partnership agreement does not provide in writing for the admission of additional general partners" for "only", before "written" deleted "specific", and after "consent of" substituted "all partners" for "each partner".

[This section] expands considerably the provisions of Section 20 of the prior uniform law which provided for dissolution in the event of the retirement, death or insanity of a general partner. [Subsections (1) through (3)] recognize that the general partner's agency relationship is terminable at will, although it may result in a breach of the partnership agreement giving rise to an action for damages. [Subsections] (4) and (5) reflect a judgment that, unless the limited partners agree otherwise, they ought to have the power to rid themselves of a general partner who is in such dire financial straits that he is the subject of proceedings under the National Bankruptcy Act or a similar provision of law. [Subsections] (6) through (10) [apparently (7) through (10) intended] simply elaborate on the notion of death in the case of a general partner who is not a natural person.

Although Section 17(1) of the prior uniform law [35-12-309, now repealed] required a partner to fulfill his promise to make contributions, the addition of contributions in the form of a promise to render services means that a partner who is unable to perform those services because of death or disability as well as because of an intentional default is required to pay the cash value of the services unless the certificate of limited partnership provides otherwise. [Subsection (2)] is derived from Section 17(3) of the prior uniform law.

35-12-1006. Right to distributions.

Commissioners' Comments

[This section] is new and is intended to make it clear that the right of a partner to receive a distribution, as between the partners, is not subject to the equity risks of the enterprise. On the other hand, since partners entitled to distributions have creditor status, there did not seem to be a need for the extraordinary remedy of Section 16(4)(a) of the prior uniform law, which granted a limited partner the right to seek dissolution of the partnership if he was unsuccessful in demanding the return of his contribution. It is more appropriate for the partner to simply sue as an ordinary creditor and obtain a judgment.

Section 19(1) of the prior uniform law [35-12-304, now repealed] provided simply that "a limited partner's interest is assignable", raising a question whether any limitations on the right of assignment were permitted. While the first sentence of [this section] recognizes that the power to assign may be restricted in the partnership agreement, there was no intention to affect in any way the usual rules regarding restraints on alienation of personal property. The second and third sentences of [this section] are derived from Section 19(3) of the prior uniform law [35-12-304, now repealed]. The last sentence is new.

Case Notes

Failure of Limited Partners to Request General Partner to Initiate Suit: The limited partners sued the bank, alleging that the bank had forced the general partner to breach his fiduciary duty to the limited partners. The lower court dismissed the complaint for failure to state a claim, holding that the plaintiffs had not alleged that they were suing in a derivative capacity and that they had failed to set forth with particularity their efforts to obtain action by the general partner. The Supreme Court ruled that under Rule 9(a), M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), the plaintiffs did not need to allege that they were suing in a derivative capacity. The court also held that although Rule 23.1, M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), and this section require the plaintiffs to set out with particularity their efforts to get the general partner to take action, the lower court should have given the plaintiffs a chance to amend their complaint. *Larson v. CHAPTER 13
MINING PARTNERSHIPSPart 1
Formation35-13-101. When a mining partnership exists.*Case Notes

Liabilities Incurred Before Incorporation: When contract between holder of lease and bond on mining claim and others who contributed money for the operations contained all the requirements necessary to constitute a mining partnership and also provided that a corporation should be formed when contributors would exchange interests for stock therein, the contributors were responsible for liabilities incurred for operating expenses as mining partners under the agreement to join in immediate operation of mine, effective even if no corporation was ever formed. Meister v. Farrow, 109 M 1, 92 P2d 753 (1939).

Qualifications Not Required of Members: Members need not have skill or knowledge of the practical working of a mine; they need not have actual control of mining operations; a "grubstake" contract does not create the relationship; it is not necessary that all the partners actually participate in removal of minerals. Meister v. Farrow, 109 M 1, 92 P2d 753 (1939).

What Sufficient to Meet Requirements: Ownership of a lease and bond meets requirement of owning or acquiring a mining claim. Persons furnishing money for mining operations have sufficient interest in ownership to become members; those who contribute money for mining operations and share equally in the result are mining partners as much as those who work and supervise the mine. Meister v. Farrow, 109 M 1, 92 P2d 753 (1939).

Right of Surviving Partner to Partnership Property: The rule declared by Title 72, ch. 12, part 7 (now repealed), that in case of death of one member of partnership the surviving partner has right to all the partnership property and to settle its business and that the partnership assets form no part of individual estate of deceased partner until the partnership affairs have been wound up by the survivor applies to general trading partnerships only, not to mining partnerships. Bielenberg v. Higgins, 85 M 56, 277 P 631 (1929).

Creation by Law: Two things are requisite to a mining partnership: (1) that two or more persons own or acquire a mining claim for purpose of working it and extracting ore; (2) that they actually work the mine. When these factors are present, the law forms a mining partnership; no express agreement of partnership is necessary. State ex rel. Cole v. District Court, 79 M 1, 254 P 863 (1927).

Interest Under Agreement With Lessee: An interest in a mine under agreement with lessee will not support a mining partnership. Crystal Copper Co. v. Gaido, 5 F2d 881 (9th Cir. 1925).

General Partnership Distinguished: Mining partnerships differing from general partnerships were recognized by the decisions of this court before the enactment of this section July 1, 1895. Congdon v. Olds, 18 M 487, 46 P 261 (1896).

Rights of Cotenants: When plaintiff owned undivided three-fourths of mining claim and defendant, who owned the other one-fourth, also owned an adjoining claim through which it was extracting and appropriating to itself ore from vein alleged to have its apex in claim in which it was cotenant, no mining partnership existed since there was no actual working of mine by both owners, because the defendant alone was working the disputed portion. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. v. Butte & Boston Min. Co., 17 M 519, 43 P 924 (1896).

Part Case Notes

"Dividends" Not Deductible as "Interest" in Determining Income Tax: Money paid by farmers' cooperative corporation created under Montana law to preferred stockholders constitutes "dividends" and is not deductible as "interest" in determining income tax on ground that the stock creating proceeding was a nullity so that the preferred stock certificates were required to be regarded as notes, when it appeared that holders of preferred stock held it as stock and not as a note or other promise to pay par value of the shares (citing Title 14, ch. 2, R.C.M. 1947, now Title 35, ch. 15, MCA, as amended). 35-15-411. Disposal of earnings — dividends — reserve fund — educational fund.

Case Notes

"Patronage Dividends" Not Deductible as Business Expenses in Computing Income Tax — "May" Defined: Money paid by farmers' cooperative corporation created under Montana law as so-called patronage dividends out of its earnings to purchasers from it of farmers' commodities is not deductible in computing corporation's income tax as "ordinary and necessary business expenses", where it appeared that so-called patronage dividends were paid in violation of this section. "May" means that directors may or may not apportion earnings, but if directors choose so to do, they must follow statutory method of apportionment. Gallatin Farmers Co. v. Comm'r of Internal Revenue, 132 F2d 706 (9th Cir. 1942).

Dividends Not Proper Deduction for Taxation: In an action to recover a corporation license tax exacted from a cooperative association under section 84-1502, R.C.M. 1947, since amended (now 15-31-114, MCA), and paid under protest, the amount of dividends paid on capital stock outstanding was not a proper deduction in determining its net income for taxation purposes, such dividends being neither an expense of the association nor a payment of interest on indebtedness. Gallatin Farmers Co. v. Shannon, 109 M 155, 93 P2d 953 (1939).

"Net Profits" and Other Terms Synonymous: The words "net profits", as used in this section, mean that part of the receipts of a cooperative association remaining after payment of operating expenses, and the terms "profits", "net earnings", "funds", and "earnings", used indiscriminately in this section and 35-15-412, mean the same thing. Gallatin Farmers Co. v. Shannon, 109 M 155, 93 P2d 953 (1939).

Patronage Dividends an Expense in Computing Tax: Patronage dividends, which a cooperative association organized must pay under this section in apportioning its earnings if there be money remaining after paying certain other items, are in effect refunds or rebates to customers, whether they be stockholders or not, and are to be treated as a necessary expense of the association in computing the net income upon which it must pay a license tax. Gallatin Farmers Co. v. Shannon, 109 M 155, 93 P2d 953 (1939).

1981 Amendment: Inserted the third sentence in (1) that read: "The articles and bylaws of the surviving association are amended to the extent provided in the documents setting forth the plan of merger."

CHAPTER 18RURAL COOPERATIVE UTILITIES*Chapter Case Notes

Electric Cooperative Requirement That New Customer Pay Prior Customer's Delinquent Bill Unreasonable: Granbois applied to have an electric cooperative provide service to her lot. However, the bylaws of the cooperative required that before she could receive service, Granbois pay the delinquent bill of the person who previously received service at the location. She paid the delinquent bill, began receiving service, and then brought an action against the cooperative on grounds that the policy violated unfair trade practices. Citing Howe v. Big Horn Elec. Co-op, 206 M 297, 670 P2d 936, 40 St. Rep. 1670 (1983), the Supreme Court held that the disparity in the relative positions of the cooperative and the consumer necessarily required the cooperative to deal reasonably with its members and that the policy requiring a new customer to either pay the predecessor's bill or go without electricity was an unreasonable restriction on Granbois's access to electric services. After determining that the case could proceed as an unfair trade practices action, the court remanded with instructions to refund Granbois the amount of the delinquent bill. Granbois v. Big Horn County Elec. Co-op, Inc., 1999 MT 222, 296 M 45, 986 P2d 1097, 56 St. Rep. 874 (1999).

Duty of Cooperative to Deal Reasonably With Members: Because of the disparity in relative positions of a rural electric cooperative and its members, a cooperative has a duty to deal with its members in a reasonable manner. Howe v. Big Horn Elec. Co-op, 206 M 297, 670 P2d 936, 40 St. Rep. 1670 (1983).

Co-op Unreasonable to Require Payment of Prior Resident's Bill as Condition of Provision of New Electric Service: It is a violation of a rural electric cooperative's duty to deal reasonably with its members for a co-op to use its superior bargaining position to force a prospective member to pay his predecessor's delinquent bill and to terminate service for nonpayment of that bill. In this case, the District Court found that the co-op's policy allowing disconnection of services for nonpayment of fees was reasonable. However, the District Court made no factual findings on the issue of whether renter's payment of landlord's prior bill was voluntarily made or was coerced as a condition of obtaining the services of the co-op. Therefore the case was remanded to District Court for a hearing on that issue. Howe v. Big Horn Elec. Co-op, 206 M 297, 670 P2d 936, 40 St. Rep. 1670 (1983).

Construction of Act: Nothing in the Rural Electric and Telephone Cooperative Act (prior to 1957 amendment) indicated that the Legislature intended that cooperatives should have the exclusive right to furnish electric energy in such rural areas and thus prevent competition by other authorized electric public utilities. Sheridan County Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Montana-Dakota Util. Co., 128 M 84, 270 P2d 742 (1954).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 406 deleted former (1) that read: "(1) Corporations organized under this chapter and corporations which become subject to this chapter in the manner hereinafter provided are hereinafter referred to as "cooperatives"; inserted definition of cooperative; in definition of member near middle after "and retaining membership" substituted "in a cooperative as provided by the articles of incorporation or by laws of the cooperative, including persons" for "therein and shall include a husband and wife"; in definition of person at end substituted "or other organization or group or persons" for "or any body politic"; in definition of rural area inserted (c) regarding former rural area and inserted (d) regarding incorporated municipality; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 28, 2001.

1987 Amendment: At end of (2)(e), after "February 1, 1971", deleted language that read: "'rural area", as applied to all corporations organized under the provisions of 35-18-105(2), means any area not included within the boundaries of any incorporated or unincorporated city or town having a population in excess of 1,500 persons except that an incorporated or unincorporated city or town with population more than 1,500 persons is considered a "rural area" for purposes of this chapter if the system or facilities serving the persons in the city or town is acquired by a cooperative by agreement with the company or entity serving the city or town, or if the city or town was served by the cooperative when it had a population of less than 1,500 persons and subsequently grew to a population more than 1,500 persons; but for the purposes of this chapter a "rural area" means an area not included within the boundary of any incorporated or unincorporated city or town having a population in excess of 3,500 persons which is not already being served by a system or facilities".

1981 Amendment: Added the exceptions at the end of (2)(e) (see 1987 amendment note for text).

Severability Clause: Section 12, Ch. 7, L. 1971, read: "If a part of this act is invalid, all valid parts that are severable from the invalid part remain in effect. If a part of this act is invalid in one or more of its applications, the part remains in effect in all valid applications that are severable from the invalid applications."

Case Notes

Dial-Up Internet Service Allowed Under Rural Electric and Telephone Cooperative Act: Plaintiffs, who were members of a rural telephone cooperative, provided dial-up Internet services. When the cooperative entered the market to provide similar competitive services, plaintiffs sued on grounds that the Rural Electric and Telephone Cooperative Act prohibited the cooperative from engaging in Internet services. The District Court held for the cooperative, plaintiffs appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the Legislature did not foresee the Internet when the Act was adopted, the plain language of the Act was to be construed liberally in allowing rural telephone cooperatives to provide adequate telephone service as technology advanced. Internet dial-up service, although not specifically enumerated in 35-18-105, is sufficiently similar to telephone service to be allowed under the Act. Weber v. Interbel Tel. 1985 Amendment: At end of (13)(a) after "thereof", deleted "provided that no duplication of lines, facilities, or systems providing reasonably adequate service will result therefrom".

Case Notes

(These cases were decided prior to 1985 amendment that eliminated nonduplication provisions from rural cooperative utilities law.)

Moving or Raising Utility Wires — Police Power, Not Eminent Domain: Under 69-4-603, a utility was required to move or raise utility wires so that oversized objects could be moved through public streets. The statute was determined to be an exercise of police power rather than sounding in eminent domain. Therefore, due process requirements of the 14th amendment may be met without compensation. Four factors were cited in the determination that the statute exercises police power: (1) public safety is concerned; (2) a public benefit is conferred; (3) a reasonable and necessary public use is allowed; and (4) the public's right to use the highways is recognized under the statute. Yellowstone Valley Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Ostermiller, 187 M 8, 608 P2d 491 (1980).

Electric Service:

When electrical service was available from utility and utility was ready, willing, and able to serve new customer, electrical cooperative had no right under this section to serve customer, notwithstanding that cooperative had available power line 3,400 feet from site while utility's closest line was 6 miles from site, since availability of service from existing facilities and plants cannot be determined solely on basis of distance between existing transmission lines and site where electrical energy is to be delivered. Mont. Power Co. v. Sun River Elec. Co-op, Inc., 157 M 468, 487 P2d 307 (1971).

In determining that electrical service was available from existing facilities of private company thereby denying cooperative right to supply electric service to potential customer, court relied upon evidence that private company was serving other customers in area and evidence that distance private company would have to extend its service to supply new customer was less than distance cooperative would have to extend its service to supply same customer. Mont. Power Co. v. Fergus Elec. Co-op, 149 M 258, 425 P2d 329 (1967).

The right of a cooperative electric company to service nonmembers not in excess of 10% of the total number of members is subject to the rural areas limitation, and when a rural area served by a co-op is annexed by a city of more than 3,500 population, the co-op may continue to serve existing customers in the annexed area but is not authorized to extend its services to other customers there. Mont. Power Co. v. Vigilante Elec. Co-op, Inc., 143 M 119, 387 P2d 718 (1963).

A rural electric cooperative did not have a lawful right to service an addition contemplated, planned, promoted, and organized as a subdivision to a city. Mont. Power Co. v. Park Elec. Co-op, 140 M 293, 371 P2d 1 (1962), distinguished in Mont. Power Co. v. Vigilante Elec. Co-op, Inc., 143 M 119, 387 P2d 718 (1963).

Action to Determine Rights: When a controversy existed between a rural electric cooperative and an electric power company as to the right of the cooperative to supply service to an addition to the city, the cooperative could have brought an action under the Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act to determine its legal position before proceeding to install facilities to service the addition. Mont. Power Co. v. Park Elec. Co-op, 140 M 293, 371 P2d 1 (1962).

Underground Installations: A power company that operated an electric line along the edge of an addition to a city was not required to pay for facilities and underground installations constructed by a rural electric cooperative in such addition despite protests of power company. Mont. Power Co. v. Park Elec. Co-op, 140 M 293, 371 P2d 1 (1962).

Construction of Section: This section (prior to 1957 amendment) indicated the intention to limit the rights of the cooperatives in such rural areas to certain users. Such cooperatives do not have an implied exclusive franchise right whereby other public utilities would be prevented from competing therein. Sheridan County Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Montana-Dakota Util. Co., 128 M 84, 270 P2d 742 (1954).

1993 Amendment: Chapter 41 in (2)(a) inserted exception clause regarding provision of insurance coverage; inserted (5) allowing extension of benefit coverage to trustees; and made minor changes in style.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "the board of trustees may establish a fixed sum . . . for: (a) attendance . . . (b) representing . . . approved by the board" for "a fixed fee and expenses of attendance, if any, may be allowed for attendance at each meeting of the board of trustees" at the end of (2).

Case Notes

Bylaws Providing for "Fixed Fee" by Board Resolution: The bylaws of a telephone cooperative provided that a fixed per diem fee and expenses could by board resolution be allowed to the trustees for attending meetings. The language of this section does not necessarily mean that the "fixed fee" must be set forth in the bylaw itself. The bylaws provision that the fee and expenses should be fixed by board resolution is simply a method for providing these items. Since the bylaw provision of the statute is an exception to the statutory requirement of approval of board compensation, the trustees have no clear legal duty to procure the prior approval of the membership for the resolution. (Case decided prior to amendment by Ch. 237, L. 1981.) Dreyer v. Bd. of Trustees of Mid-Rivers Tel., Inc., 183 M 43, 598 P2d 205 (1979).

Chapter 406 in (1)(a) in introductory clause at beginning inserted "For corporations organized under the provisions of 35-18-105(2)" and after "in which a cooperative supplies" deleted "electric energy or"; inserted (2) regarding voting districts; and made minor changes in style. CHAPTER 19 ELECTRICITY BUYING COOPERATIVE ACT

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 575, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, residential and small commercial customers of investor-owned distribution utilities in Montana need access to reliable electricity supply at equitable prices; and

WHEREAS, the aggregation of residential and small commercial customers that do not have access to competitive electricity suppliers at equitable prices provides them with market power to secure electricity at the least cost; and

WHEREAS, allowing one or more default suppliers to aggregate residential and small commercial customers to purchase electricity maximizes economies of scale, increases administrative efficiency, and provides maximum benefits to all small electricity customers; and

WHEREAS, wholesale competition in electricity markets may be facilitated by allowing entities to compete for the opportunity to provide electricity supply to those residential and small commercial customers on an aggregated basis; and

WHEREAS, the formation of nonprofit electricity buying cooperatives enhances the chances of securing for small customers the greatest amount of electricity at the least cost from the federal power system; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana desires that its residents have access to the benefits of competitive retail electricity markets and federal Power Marketing Administration electricity; and

WHEREAS, federal Power Marketing Administration power or benefits should be distributed as widely and equitably as possible among small customers of open-access public utilities in the state of Montana in a manner that promotes efficient development and operation of the competitive retail electricity markets; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana benefits by enacting legislation this session that maximizes the chances of an electricity buying cooperative being able to purchase power for small customers from the Bonneville Power Administration at preferential rates for the subscription period that begins in 2001."

Part 1 General Provisions

35-19-104. Permissible purpose of incorporation.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 565 in middle after "only" deleted "for the purpose of supplying electricity to small customers as a default supplier, pursuant to 69-8-403, and". Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Saving Clause: Section 22, Ch. 565, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 483 in introductory clause after "department of" substituted "labor and industry" for "commerce". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 at end of introductory clause substituted "may" for "shall"; in (1), after "administrative", inserted "legal", after "issuing" inserted "and denying", and before "registering" inserted "disciplining licensees"; at beginning of (5), before "investigate", deleted "at the request of a board"; in (7), after "rules", substituted "setting expiration, renewal, and termination dates for licenses" for "establishing expiration dates of licenses for barbers, barbershops, professional engineers, professional land surveyors, nursing home administrators, optometrists, plumbers, social workers, speech-language pathologists, audiologists, and radiologic technologists"; and inserted (8) authorizing Department to issue notice and pursue action against licensed individual before licensing board pursuant to 37-1-307(1)(e). Amendment of 37-1-101(7) effective April 13, 1995, for the purpose of drafting rules that will be adopted on or after October 1, 1995.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 83, in (7) inserted "professional" before "land surveyors".

Chapter 413, changed reference to speech pathologist to reference to speech-language pathologist.

1985 Amendment: In (7) after “plumbers”, inserted “social workers, speech pathologists, audiologists”.

1983 Amendment: Inserted (7) requiring Department to adopt rules establishing license expiration dates.

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 390, L. 1983, provided: “A statement of intent is required with House Bill 633 because it provides that the department of commerce may establish renewal dates for certain licenses by rule.

It is the intention of the legislature that in the promulgation of such rules, the department will consult with the affected boards, and, where possible, the professions to be regulated. It is the intention of this legislature that in attempting to meet the needs of the department in maintaining efficient licensing procedures, the needs of the board and the professions regulated are given the closest scrutiny and consideration.”

1981 Amendments: Chapter 274 substituted “department of commerce” for “department of professional and occupational licensing” in the introductory clause.

Chapter 293 deleted “a pro rata basis according to the number of man-days and the actual operating costs of the department for each board” in (6); added “an equitable basis as determined by the department” to (6).

Case Notes

Revocation of Real Estate Broker's License — No Denial of Rights at Administrative Hearing — Hearing Examiner and Board Attorney as Deputy Attorneys General: A hearing examiner recommended that Sorini's real estate broker's license be revoked for violations of 37-51-321. On appeal, Sorini argued that she was denied her rights at the administrative hearing because both the hearing examiner and the attorney for the Board of Realty Regulation were deputies in the Attorney General's office; however, she failed to submit any proof to support this allegation. The Supreme Court noted that 2-4-611 establishes the manner in which a party may file an affidavit for disqualification of a hearing examiner, holding that in the absence of an affidavit it was not proper to raise the issue on appeal. The court agreed that having a greater separation of prosecutorial and decisionmaking functions would eliminate an appearance of impropriety, but found nothing to warrant a reversal of the District Court. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Attorney General's Opinions

Construction of Inconsistent Statutes: Statutes relating to the Board of Public Accountants, contained in Title 37, ch. 50, appear to have been amended by implication by the Executive Reorganization Act of 1971, now codified as part of Titles 2, 37, and 39, thereby transferring the duties specified in 37-1-101 and 37-1-121 from the Board of Public Accountants to the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing (now Department of Labor and Industry) and the director thereof. Where two acts of the Legislature are inconsistent on the same subject, the prior statute is to be treated as repealed by the subsequent statute. 35 A.G. Op. 58 (1974).

37-1-105. Reporting disciplinary actions against licensees.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 near middle of second sentence after “information” inserted “except pursuant to 37-1-138”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: “[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002.”

37-1-106. Biennial report.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 349 in last sentence, after “shall”, substituted “submit the report to the office of budget and program planning as a part of the information required by 17-7-111” for “provide a copy of the report to the governor and, as provided in 5-11-210, to the legislature”.

1991 Amendment: Inserted last sentence requiring Department to provide a copy of the report to the Governor and Legislature. Amendment effective March 20, 1991.

1983 Amendment: Near middle of section, before "The biennial report" deleted "In addition to the information prescribed by the governor under 2-7-102".

37-1-121. Duties of commissioner.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 483 in introductory clause substituted "commissioner of labor and industry" for "director of commerce"; at end of (3) substituted "commissioner" for "director"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in (1), in first sentence after "impartial", substituted "hearing examiner" for "legal counsel" and in second sentence substituted "The hearing examiner shall conduct hearings" for "The legal counsel appointed shall see that hearings are conducted"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) whenever the department conducts an investigation of a complaint of illegal or unethical conduct of a member of a particular profession or occupation as prescribed in 37-1-101(5) and if requested by the appropriate board, appoint an impartial member of that profession or occupation to assist the department in its investigation. The member so appointed may not be a member of the board having jurisdiction over the particular profession or occupation"; in (2), after "administrative", inserted "legal"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: At beginning of (1) inserted "at the request of a party" and near end of first sentence of (1), before "hearing", inserted "contested case".

1981 Amendment: Substituted "director of commerce" for "director of professional and occupational licensing" in the introductory clause.

Attorney General's Opinions

Construction of Inconsistent Statutes: Statutes relating to the Board of Public Accountants, contained in Title 37, ch. 50, appear to have been amended by implication by the Executive Reorganization Act of 1971, now codified as part of Titles 2, 37, and 39, thereby transferring the duties specified in 37-1-101 and 37-1-121 from the Board of Public Accountants to the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing (now Department of Labor and Industry) and the director thereof. Attorney General's Opinions

Interpretation of Plumber Licensing Statutes by Board of Plumbers — Licensing Authority Restricted by Statute — Intention of Legislature — Penalty Statute Inapplicable: The Board of Plumbers has the legal authority to interpret Title 37, ch. 69, and the interpretation by the Board must be given deference unless it is incorrect. In interpreting the plumbing licensing statutes, the intent of the Legislature must be determined, and if that intent can be understood from a plain reading of the statutes, there is no need to look further. The statutes as well as the statutory history clearly indicated that a plumber's license is required only for a person who is: (1) working in the field of plumbing in an incorporated city or town; (2) working in the field of plumbing in an area served by a public water supply or sewer system; or (3) working in the field of plumbing and connects or disconnects plumbing to or from a public water supply or sewer system, unless an exemption is granted. There is no penalty applicable to an unlicensed person for whom a license is not required by statute. 47 A.G. Op. 21 (1998).

Board of Dentistry Not to Reconsider Licensing Decisions of Board of Dentistry: Administrative agencies enjoy only those powers specifically conferred upon them by statute. They possess no common-law powers, and implied powers are limited only to those necessary for the effective exercise and discharge of powers and duties expressly conferred. Therefore, when the Board of Dentistry had no power to reconsider its licensing decisions, the Board of Dentistry, having succeeded to the functions of the Board of Dentistry, may not reconsider a prior decision of the Board of Dentistry to issue a dentist's license. 43 A.G. Op. 33 (1989).

Construction of Inconsistent Statutes: Statutes relating to the Board of Public Accountants, contained in Title 37, ch. 50, appear to have been amended by implication by the Executive Reorganization Act of 1971, now codified as part of Titles 2, 37, and 39, thereby transferring the duties specified in 37-1-101 and 37-1-121 from the Board of Public Accountants to the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing (now Department of Labor and Industry) and the director thereof. 37-1-132. Nominees for appointment to licensing and regulatory boards.

Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble to SB 312 (Ch. 244, L. 1981) read: "WHEREAS, during the course of the Legislative Audit Committee's review of regulatory and licensing boards under the first two sunset cycles it was noted that appointments by the Governor to some boards must be made from lists submitted by private associations; and

WHEREAS, requirements tying board membership to private associations have been struck down by the courts in a number of states; and

WHEREAS, the opportunity for members of the public and private associations to submit nominees to the Governor for board appointments is in the public interest.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this bill to delete requirements that appointments by the Governor to regulatory and licensing boards must be made from lists submitted by private associations and to provide that members of the public and private associations may submit nominees to the Governor for appointment to regulatory and licensing boards."

37-1-133. Board members' compensation and expenses.

Compiler's Comments

1983 Amendments: Chapter 123 substituted, at end of second sentence, "2-18-502" for "2-18-501, for each day in which 6 or more hours are spent on official board business".

Chapter 672 increased per diem from $25 to $50.

Preamble: The preamble to SB 463 (Ch. 474, L. 1981) read: "WHEREAS, during its sunset reviews of licensing and regulatory boards the Legislative Audit Committee noted that compensation and travel expenses for the boards vary considerably from board to board; and

WHEREAS, the various boards have very similar duties and responsibilities.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this act to provide for the payment of uniform compensation and travel expenses for members of state licensing and regulatory boards."

37-1-134. Licensing boards to establish fees commensurate with costs.

Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 345, L. 1981, provided: "WHEREAS, most fees set by professional and occupational licensing boards are specified or limited in amount by law; and

WHEREAS, such limitations are not necessarily serving the purpose intended in that the fees are not related to costs incurred and board revenues are insufficient in some cases and excessive in others.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this act to authorize and require such licensing boards to set fees reasonably related to the costs of administering the various programs under their jurisdiction."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 412 (Ch. 345, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for Senate Bill 412 because it grants licensing boards within the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing the authority to set fees.

Presently fees charged by most licensing boards are set by law. Wherever changed circumstances require a change in fees legislation is required. Each session several bills are introduced to modify board fees. By allowing boards to set their own fees, flexibility is provided the boards to meet changing circumstances. At the present time, fees set by law are not based upon actual costs incurred by licensing boards in carrying out their various functions.

It is the intent of the Legislature that fees set by licensing boards be reasonably related to the costs of the respective programs. "Programs" of the licensing boards are intended to be such areas of responsibility as applications, examinations, renewals, and reciprocity. "Reasonably related" is intended to mean that the department generally breaks down the costs associated with the various programs and sets each fee at a level to cover these costs and the costs of maintaining the ongoing operations of the board. "Reasonably related" does not mean the department is required to maintain an exact system of actual costs, but rather means the department should generally allocate costs of the program equitably among the various fee categories."

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 in (1) at beginning inserted "Subject to 37-1-138"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

1981 Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 246, L. 1981, provided: "WHEREAS, during its sunset review of licensing boards, the Legislative Audit Committee noted that disciplinary authority of some boards over licensees is not specified in the law and that consequently some boards are hesitant to take disciplinary action against licensees.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this act to specify the disciplinary authority of the boards allocated to the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 407 (Ch. 246, L. 1981) provided: "SB 407 requires a statement of intent because it grants each licensing board allocated to the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing the authority to adopt specifying grounds for disciplinary action and the type of action that may be taken.

Each board adopting new substantive or procedural rules under SB 407 is to specify both the grounds upon which each type of disciplinary action may be taken, and the procedure to be used for each action. Each board using a disciplinary action not specified in subsections (1)(a) through (e) but considered proper under (1)(f) must also state in the rule the grounds upon which disciplinary action may be taken and the applicable procedure.

No rule shall specify disciplinary action for failure to renew any license or certificate, pay any fee or participate in any program of continuing education unless the renewal, fee or participation is required by statute.

Rules authorized by both SB 407 and by other provisions of law and previously adopted under such other provisions need not be readopted under SB 407."

Board Action in Seeking Injunction — No Intentional Interference With Business: The Board of Dentistry received a complaint from a dentist who claimed Kandarian was practicing dentistry without a license by performing temporomandibular joint disfunction evaluations. The Board discussed the complaint in an open meeting, releasing the contents of the complaint to the press at the same time, and subsequently filed for an injunction seeking to enjoin Kandarian from the practice. The Board's action was not tortious but rather was authorized by statute. Thus, Kandarian's claim that the Board negligently released the contents of its complaint, negligently filed suit, and intentionally interfered with his business was properly dismissed by summary judgment. St. v. Kandarian, 268 M 408, 886 P2d 954, 51 St. Rep. 1381 (1994).

Revocation of Real Estate Broker's License — No Denial of Rights at Administrative Hearing — Hearing Examiner and Board Attorney as Deputy Attorneys General: A hearing examiner recommended that Sorini's real estate broker's license be revoked for violations of 37-51-321. On appeal, Sorini argued that she was denied her rights at the administrative hearing because both the hearing examiner and the attorney for the Board of Realty Regulation were deputies in the Attorney General's office; however, she failed to submit any proof to support this allegation. The Supreme Court noted that 2-4-611 establishes the manner in which a party may file an affidavit for disqualification of a hearing examiner, holding that in the absence of an affidavit it was not proper to raise the issue on appeal. The court agreed that having a greater separation of prosecutorial and decisionmaking functions would eliminate an appearance of impropriety, but found nothing to warrant a reversal of the District Court. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Jurisdiction Over Lapsed License: In 1987, Gilpin was convicted on two counts of sexual assault. In 1990, Gilpin's nursing license lapsed for failure to renew. In 1990, the Board of Nursing sought to revoke Gilpin's nursing license. The parties submitted an agreed statement of facts to a hearing examiner who submitted findings, conclusions, and a recommendation to the Board. The Board heard Gilpin's objections orally and in writing, adopted the hearing examiner's recommendations, and revoked the license. Gilpin then appealed to the District Court, which heard the parties' arguments and issued an order affirming the revocation of the license. The Supreme Court held that because the Board has power to reinstate a nursing license 3 years after it lapses, the Board retains jurisdiction over a license 3 years after it lapses. Thus, the Board did not lose jurisdiction over Gilpin's license and had jurisdiction to revoke the license. The Supreme Court also held that the stipulation of facts was a sufficient factual basis to revoke the license and that Gilpin was not entitled to any hearings in addition to those that he was given. Gilpin v. Bd. of Nursing, 254 M 308, 837 P2d 1342, 49 St. Rep. 831 (1992).

37-1-203. Conviction not a sole basis for denial.

Case Notes

Criminal Conviction Not Conclusive Evidence of Unprofessional Conduct Sufficient to Warrant Revocation of Mortician's License: A criminal conviction is not conclusive evidence of unprofessional conduct and does not constitute sufficient grounds for revocation of a mortician's license. Because this section was cross-referenced in the license revocation statute, 37-19-311 (now repealed), before revoking a mortician's license, the Board of Funeral Service was required to determine whether a mortician's criminal conviction related to and affected the public health, safety, and welfare as it applied to the practice of mortuary science and whether the mortician had been sufficiently rehabilitated. Ulrich v. State ex rel. Bd. of Funeral Service, 1998 MT 196, 289 M 407, 961 P2d 126, 55 St. Rep. 822 (1998), distinguishing Erickson v. State ex rel. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625 (1997).

Petition for Reinstatement of License Conditioned Upon Completion of Court-Imposed Sentence Unlawful: Ulrich petitioned for reinstatement of his mortician's license, which was revoked by the Board of Funeral Service on grounds of unprofessional conduct following Ulrich's conviction of criminal charges based on his conduct as a real estate agent. The Board ordered that Ulrich could not petition for reinstatement until all terms of his court-imposed criminal sentence, including full restitution, had been completed. The Board argued that under 37-1-205, the order was lawful because completion of the sentence was evidence of restitution. However, completion of a sentence is not the only method by which an applicant is entitled to demonstrate sufficient rehabilitation. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that an applicant whose license is denied or revoked because of a criminal conviction pursuant to 37-19-311 (now repealed) is entitled to apply for reinstatement and a full hearing pursuant to this section. The order denying a petition for reinstatement until all conditions of a criminal sentence are met was unlawful. Ulrich v. State ex rel. Bd. of Funeral Service, 1998 MT 196, 289 M 407, 961 P2d 126, 55 St. Rep. 822 (1998).

Rejection of Hearings Examiner's Findings and Revocation of License — Abuse of Discretion: Ulrich sought reinstatement of his mortician's license, which was revoked by the Board of Funeral Service on grounds of unprofessional conduct following Ulrich's conviction of criminal charges based on his conduct as a real estate agent. The Board rejected the findings of a hearings examiner, who recommended reinstatement, on grounds that licensing Ulrich would affect the public's health, safety, and welfare. However, the hearings examiner's conclusions were supported by competent, substantial evidence of Ulrich's remorse, attempts to provide ongoing restitution payments, and rehabilitation. It was an abuse of discretion in violation of 2-4-621(3) for the Board to reject the hearings examiner's findings and revoke Ulrich's license to practice mortuary science. Ulrich v. State ex rel. Bd. of Funeral Service, 1998 MT 196, 289 M 407, 961 P2d 126, 55 St. Rep. 822 (1998).

What Section Applicable to License Revocation: Erickson asserted that the Montana State Board of Medical Examiners, pursuant to this section, needed to ascertain whether Erickson's conviction of Medicaid fraud related to the public health, welfare, or safety before considering whether to revoke Erickson's medical license. The Supreme Court held that 37-3-323 sets out the procedure to be applied when the Board revokes or suspends a medical license. A person who has had a license revoked under 37-3-323 as a result of a criminal conviction is entitled to consideration under this section when seeking a new license following rehabilitation. This section does not apply to the revocation of a license. Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997), overruling Mills v. Comm'r of Ins., 226 M 387, 736 P2d 102 (1987), and Gilpin v. Bd. of Nursing, 254 M 308, 837 P2d 1342 (1992).

Crime of Sexual Assault as Unprofessional Conduct and Crime Relating to Public Health, Welfare, and Safety — Lack of Rehabilitation: Gilpin was convicted of two counts of sexual assault. After his nursing license was revoked, Gilpin appealed, claiming that there was insufficient connection between the reason for his criminal conviction and the practice of nursing to warrant revocation of the license. The Supreme Court affirmed the hearing examiner's finding that the sexual assaults related to the public health, welfare, and safety and that Gilpin was guilty of unprofessional conduct. Gilpin v. Bd. of Nursing, 254 M 308, 837 P2d 1342, 49 St. Rep. 831 (1992), overruled in Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997).

License Revocation for Felony Theft: Plaintiff's occupational license as a life insurance agent was revoked solely because she was convicted of felony theft. No effort was made to determine whether the conviction related to the public health, welfare, and safety as it applied to the practice of her occupation. The Supreme Court held that the mere finding that a licensee was convicted of a felony involving moral turpitude is not a sufficient basis upon which to hold that the conviction is related to the public health, welfare, or safety as it relates to the licensed occupation. Mills v. Comm'r of Ins., 226 M 387, 736 P2d 102, 44 St. Rep. 743 (1987), overruled in Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997).

Uniform Professional Licensing and Regulation Procedures

Part Compiler's Comments

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is necessary for this bill because, although the bill deletes numerous grants of rulemaking authority in numerous sections of Title 37, the bill contains a single section allowing professional and occupational licensing boards to adopt rules. The purpose of replacing the numerous rulemaking authority grants with a single grant, as is the purpose with the rest of the bill, is to standardize the law in an attempt to reduce the number of rules and reduce variations in the rules from occupation to occupation."

The legislature takes note of the large number of bills proposed by and affecting professional and occupational licensing boards in Montana. A uniform licensing and disciplinary process needs to be established to permit the department of commerce [now department of labor and industry] and administratively attached licensing boards to administer the professional and occupational regulatory programs in a manner that is responsive to the public's needs. The public interest will be served by establishing uniform administrative provisions for these regulated professions and occupations that are designed to reduce the number of statutes and rules and variations in statutes and rules between professions and occupations and to promote public awareness of and access to the regulation of professions and occupations. It is the intent of the legislature to strengthen and consolidate disciplinary and licensure procedures for the licensed professions and occupations by providing a uniform disciplinary, licensing, and regulatory act, with standardized procedures for regulation, the purpose of which is to assure the public of the adequacy of competence and conduct in the regulated professions and occupations.

The rules must provide for adequate due process for licensed persons involved in disciplinary proceedings."

(b) Because section 395(c) of the federal Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996 (PRWORA) allows a grace period for states to amend their constitutions in order to comply with PRWORA and because the Montana legislature believes that the section of PRWORA prohibiting a jury trial in a paternity proceeding violates Article II, section 26, of the Montana constitution and is therefore rejected, the department of public health and human services shall seek a federal government exemption from the jury trial prohibition in PRWORA as the first exemption it seeks under subsection (5)(a). CHAPTER 2 GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO HEALTH CARE PRACTITIONERS

Part 1 Dispensing of Drugs

37-2-101. Definitions.Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 388 in definition of drug substituted "has the same meaning as provided in 37-7-101" for "means any article";

(a) recognized in the official United States Pharmacopoeia/National Formulary or in any supplement to the pharmacopoeia/formulary;

(b) intended for use in the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease in man;

(c) intended to affect the structure or any function of the body of man;

(d) intended for use as a component of any article described in subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this subsection (3), but the term does not include any device or any components of a device"; in definition of pharmacy substituted "has the same meaning as provided in 37-7-101" for "means an establishment which engages in the sale of drugs requiring a prescription"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 83, in (1) deleted "chiropraxy" and deleted parentheses around "podiatry".

Chapter 444, in definition of medical practitioner inserted "or a nursing specialty as described in 37-8-202(5)"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1987 Amendment: In (1) inserted "or optometry".

1981 Amendment: Deleted "the official" after "Pharmacopoeia" in subsection (2)(a); deleted "office, pharmacy, drugstore, or other" from the definition of pharmacy in subsection (4); substituted "requiring a prescription" for "at retail" in subsection (4).

Code Commissioner Correction: In (2)(a) the Code Commissioner substituted "commercial driver's license" for "commercial motor vehicle operator's endorsement". Chapter 195 changed references in statutes from commercial motor vehicle operator's endorsement to commercial driver's license. The Code Commissioner has made the change in this section pursuant to the authority provided in sec. 84, Ch. 10, L. 1993.

1991 Amendment: In (1), near end of second sentence after "examined", substituted "or investigated as" for "in the manner" and deleted reference to 61-5-110; and in (2)(a), after "license", inserted "driving privilege, or commercial motor vehicle operator's endorsement".

Code Commissioner Correction: The Code Commissioner has substituted the department of justice for the division of motor vehicles in this section, because sec. 14, Ch. 503, L. 1985, repealed 2-15-2002, which had statutorily created the division, and sec. 1, Ch. 503 amended Title 61, Motor Vehicles, to substitute "department" for "division" throughout that title. The apparent intent was to eliminate the statutory status of the division, and therefore the Code Commissioner has changed statutory references accordingly (see 1-11-101(2)(g)).

CHAPTER 3 MEDICINE

Chapter Administrative Rules

Title 24, chapter 156, ARM Board of Medical Examiners.

Chapter Case Notes

Osteopaths: When an applicant failed to supply the information required by the Board of Medical Examiners and failed to take a required examination, the Board was within the scope of its constitutional and statutory authority in denying the applicant a license by reciprocity to practice unlimited medicine and surgery in the state of Montana and did not act in a discriminatory or capricious manner. Shelton v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 166 M 472, 534 P2d 870, 32 St. Rep. 394 (1975).

Definition of "Osteopathy": "Osteopathy", as defined by its founder, dictionaries, and decisions of courts, "administers no drugs and uses no knife". St. v. Thierfelder, 114 M 104, 132 P2d 1035 (1943), overruled on another point in St. v. Labbitt, 117 M 26, 156 P2d 163 (1945).

Major and Minor Surgery Prohibited: Under the law regulating osteopathy, the practitioner is not authorized to perform surgery of any kind, either major or minor. St. v. Thierfelder, 114 M 104, 132 P2d 1035 (1943), overruled on another point in St. v. Labbitt, 117 M 26, 156 P2d 163 (1945).

Removal of Tonsils as Practice of Medicine: An osteopath was practicing medicine without a license in removing tonsils. St. v. Thierfelder, 114 M 104, 132 P2d 1035 (1943), overruled on another point in St. v. Labbitt, 117 M 26, 156 P2d 163 (1945).

Surgery Not Permitted by Amendment: In amending the original act under which the osteopath was forbidden to practice "major, minor or operative surgery" by striking out the word "minor", the Legislature did not intend to permit minor surgery. St. v. Thierfelder, 114 M 104, 132 P2d 1035 (1943), overruled on another point in St. v. Labbitt, 117 M 26, 156 P2d 163 (1945).

Penalty: Section 37-5-312 (now repealed) prescribes the penalty for violation of 37-5-305 (now repealed), both having the same history, Ch. 51, L. 1905. State ex rel. Freebourn v. District Court, 105 M 77, 69 P2d 748 (1937).

License Required of Physician: A physician or surgeon is not entitled, under the statute, to practice osteopathy without a license from the Board of Osteopathic Physicians (now Board of Medical Examiners). St. v. Hopkins, 54 M 52, 166 P 304 (1917).

Negative of Exception to Licensure Not Required: Unless statutory exception found in a statute is part of definition of offense sought to be described, the State is not required to negative such exception in an indictment or information. The proviso contained in 37-5-101(2)(b) (now repealed) is not such an exception, since neither physician nor surgeon can practice osteopathy without first obtaining a license therefor. St. v. Hopkins, 54 M 52, 166 P 304 (1917); St. v. Wood, 53 M 566, 165 P 592 (1917).

Regulation of Osteopathy Not Unconstitutional: The statute regulating practice of osteopathy is not invalid as arbitrary and unreasonable class legislation; nor does it make an arbitrary classification denying right of citizens to engage in lawful occupation and is therefore not an abuse of the police power of the state. St. v. Hopkins, 54 M 52, 166 P 304 (1917).

Temporary License as Matter of Defense: In prosecution for practicing osteopathy without a license, State is not required to negative defendant's possession of temporary certificate referred to in 37-5-304 (now repealed), this being a matter of defense. St. v. Hopkins, 54 M 52, 166 P 304 (1917); St. v. Wood, 53 M 566, 165 P 592 (1917).

Limitations on Practice: Section 37-5-101 (now repealed) does not authorize an osteopath to practice medicine or surgery but requires him to confine his practice to treatment by the use of the hands or mechanical appliances. St. v. Dodd, 51 M 100, 149 P 481 (1915).

Osteopathy Within State Police Power: The practice of osteopathy is a proper subject for police regulation. Johnson v. Great Falls, 38 M 369, 99 P 1059 (1909).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Acupuncturist License Required of Licensed Physician Who Wishes to Advertise the Practice of Acupuncture — Use of Solid Needles by Licensed Physician Allowed in Performance of Therapeutic Modalities: No exception to either the education or examination requirement for the practice of acupuncture exists in law or rule for a licensed physician who wishes to practice acupuncture, although a licensed physician is relieved from taking additional examinations in anatomy, physiology, chemistry, dermatology, diagnosis, bacteriology, materia medica, and other subjects required by the existing physician's license. Therefore, if a licensed physician wishes to represent to the public that that physician is also licensed to practice acupuncture, the physician must acquire a license to practice acupuncture under Title 37, ch. 13. However, a physician who is licensed under this chapter may, as part of the practice of medicine, use solid needles to perform therapeutic modalities without first acquiring a license to practice acupuncture under Title 37, ch. 13. A physician who performs solid needle treatment without proper training or who exceeds the scope of the physician's license is subject to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Board of Medical Examiners. 48 A.G. 1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (2)(a) substituted "renewable registration" for "annual registration" and inserted "in accordance with department rules"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 145 in (2), in first sentence, increased number of forms of certificates from two to three and after "certificates" inserted "of licensure" and in first and second sentences inserted reference to restricted certificate; inserted (2)(b) relating to restricted certificate; and made minor changes in style. Attorney General's Opinions

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 224 in (1) substituted "renewal fee" for "registration fee"; in (2) in three places and near beginning of (3) substituted "renewal" for "registration"; in first sentence of (2) substituted "license" for "registration" and after "rule" deleted "and a receipt acknowledging payment of the registration fee must be issued by the department" and in middle of second sentence after "notices" deleted "at least 60 days"; near end of first sentence of (3) substituted "license" for "certificate", after "may be" substituted "considered lapsed" for "revoked", and after "board" deleted "on 30 days' notice given to the delinquent of the time and place of considering the revocation" and deleted former second, third, and fourth sentences that read: "A registered or certified letter addressed to the last-known address of the person failing to comply with the requirements of registration, as the address appears on the records of the department, constitutes sufficient notice of intention to revoke the underlying certificate. A certificate may not be revoked for nonpayment if the person authorized to practice medicine, and notified, pays the registration fee before or at the time fixed for consideration of revocation, together with a delinquency penalty prescribed by the board. The department may collect the dues by an action at law"; in (4) after "A" deleted "registration or" and after "license" inserted "or renewal"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Chapter 271 in (3) at beginning of first sentence inserted "Except as provided in 37-1-138" and at beginning of second sentence after "A" deleted "registered or" (amendment in second sentence rendered void by Ch. 224 amendment); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1), in (2), in first sentence, and in (3), in three places, before "registration", deleted "annual"; in (1), after "in this state shall pay", deleted "each year"; in (2), near beginning after "The", deleted "annual" and substituted "the expiration date of the registration, as set forth in a department rule" for "April 1"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted second sentence in (1) that read: "If a person licensed to practice medicine absents himself from the state for a period of 1 or more years or does not engage in active practice in this state, he may continue his license in good standing by payment each year of a fee prescribed by the board or, at the discretion of the board, he may be reinstated on the payment of a fee prescribed by the board for each year of absence or inactive practice"; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 at beginning of (1) substituted "department" for "board"; in (2), in first sentence after "may", inserted "upon order of the board" and deleted third and fourth sentences that read: "If the board has reasonable cause to believe that this probability exists, the department shall mail to the person's last address of record with the department a specification of the charges, together with a written notice of the time and place of the hearing on the charges, advising that the person may be present and may be represented by counsel if the person wants to offer evidence and be heard in the person's own defense. The time fixed for the hearing may not be less than 30 days from the date of mailing the notice"; deleted (3) through (6) that read: "(3) A person, including a member of the board, may file a written complaint with the department against a person having a license to practice medicine in this state charging that person with the commission of any of the offenses set forth in 37-3-322 or with any of the offenses or conditions set forth in subsection (1) of this section. The complaint must set forth a specification of the charges. When the complaint is filed, the department shall mail a copy to the person accused at the person's last address of record with the department, together with a written citation of the time and place of the hearing on it.

(4) At the hearing, the board shall adopt a resolution finding the accused guilty or not guilty of the matters charged. If the board finds that the offenses or conditions referred to in 37-3-322 or subsection (1) of this section do not exist with respect to the person or if the person is found not guilty, the board shall dismiss the charges or complaint. If the board finds that the offenses or conditions referred to in 37-3-322 or in subsection (1) of this section do exist and the person is found guilty, the board shall:

- (a) revoke the person's license;
- (b) suspend the person's right to practice for a period not exceeding 1 year;
- (c) suspend its judgment of revocation on the terms and conditions to be determined by the board;
- (d) place the person on probation;
- (e) impose a fine, not to exceed $500 an incident; or
- (f) take any other action in relation to disciplining the person as the board in its discretion considers proper.

(5) In a case of revocation, suspension, or probation, the department shall enter in its records the facts of the action and of subsequent action of the board with respect to it.

(6) On the expiration of the term of suspension, the licensee must be reinstated by the board if the suspended person furnishes the board with evidence that the person is then of good moral character and conduct, is restored to good health, and has not practiced medicine in this state during the term of suspension. If the evidence fails to establish to the satisfaction of the board that the holder is then of good moral character and conduct or restored to good health or if the evidence shows the person has practiced medicine in this state during the term of suspension, the board shall revoke the license, using the notice and hearing procedure provided in subsection (2). The revocation is final and absolute"; deleted (8) and (9) that read: "(8) A fine imposed under this section must be deposited in the general fund.

(9) The remedies and method of enforcement of this part, as provided for in this section, are concurrent and in addition to the other remedies provided in this part"; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

What Section Applicable to License Revocation: Erickson asserted that the Montana State Board of Medical Examiners, pursuant to 37-1-203, needed to ascertain whether Erickson's conviction of Medicaid fraud related to the public health, welfare, or safety before considering whether to revoke Erickson's medical license. The Supreme Court held that this section sets out the procedure to be applied when the Board revokes or suspends a medical license. A person who has had a license revoked under this section as a result of a criminal conviction is entitled to consideration under 37-1-203 when seeking a new license following rehabilitation. Section 37-1-203 does not apply to the revocation of a license. Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997), overruling Mills v. Comm'r of Ins., 226 M 387, 736 P2d 102 (1987), and Gilpin v. Bd. of Nursing, 254 M 308, 837 P2d 1342 (1992).

License Revocation Warranted — Negligence, Malpractice, Unprofessional Conduct: Revocation of a general practitioner's medical license was warranted where evidence showed negligence and medical malpractice in the practice of obstetrics and neonatal care that resulted in the deaths of two infants. The physician continued to accept obstetrical patients after the restriction of the physician's practice in those areas. This was compounded by the physician's unprofessional conduct in misleading some of his obstetrical patients by informing them that he would have hospital privileges before the birth of their children and by providing obstetrical care in violation of the order to discontinue that service. Kauffman v. Dept. of Commerce, 229 M 204, 746 P2d 103, 44 St. Rep. 1905 (1987).

Charges Instituted by Board: Necessity prevents disqualification of Board from hearing charges instituted by it, since no other body is given jurisdiction to hear such charges. State ex rel. Yuhas v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 135 M 381, 339 P2d 981 (1959).

Unprofessional Conduct: Former provision of statute authorizing revocation of physician's certificate "for unprofessional, dishonorable, or immoral conduct" gave Board jurisdiction to hear charges involving an attempted abortion, unauthorized removal of x-rays, overcharges for services not performed, and the encouragement of fraudulent claims before the Industrial Accident Board (now Division of Workers' Compensation) for injuries not received. State ex rel. Yuhas v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 135 M 381, 339 P2d 981 (1959).

Notice of Revocation: Though Board of Medical Examiners is empowered to revoke certificate of a physician for unprofessional, dishonorable, or immoral conduct, it cannot arbitrarily revoke the certificate without giving physician reasonable notice of charge against him and time and place of trial. St. v. Schultz, 11 M 429, 28 P 643 (1892).

Case Notes

Proper Denial of Petition for Judicial Review of Board of Medical Examiners' Decision to Disallow Reconsideration of Stipulation of Unprofessional Conduct: The Board of Medical Examiners found that a doctor had conducted himself in an unprofessional manner by drawing a smiley face on the breast of a cancer patient. The doctor attended two out-of-state facilities at the request of the professional assistance program and subsequently sued the program and several program physicians for false imprisonment, conspiracy, and other charges. The program then withdrew from the treatment arrangement, and the Board produced a stipulation, which the doctor signed, wherein he admitted that the conduct was unprofessional. The doctor's conduct was reported to the national practitioner database, and he was placed on probation for 1 year. After probation was terminated, the doctor petitioned for reconsideration of the stipulation on grounds that it was signed under duress, that the conduct was not unprofessional, and that the record of the charge made it difficult to find employment. The Board denied reconsideration, the District Court affirmed, and the doctor appealed, but the Supreme Court also affirmed. Substantial evidence supported the District Court's findings that the stipulation was not signed under duress, and the court's failure to address the Board's omission of the doctor's requested findings of fact was not in error. The Board has wide discretion under this section whether to reconsider a prior action, and the District Court did not err in concluding that the Board acted within its discretion in denying the petition for reconsideration. Hughes v. Mont. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 2003 MT 305, 318 M 181, 80 P3d 415 (2003).

37-3-325. Violations — penalties.Case NotesPhysiotherapy Practice of Medicine:*

An alleged physiotherapist who attempted to remove moles from patient's body by use of surgical diathermy machine was guilty of unlawful practice of medicine. St. v. Moore, 141 M 86, 375 P2d 218 (1962).

Unlicensed person who affixed title "Dr." to his name and represented himself as a physiotherapist was guilty of practicing medicine without a certificate. St. v. Bain, 130 M 90, 295 P2d 241 (1956).

The practice of physiotherapy constitutes the practice of medicine under Montana law. St. v. Bain, 130 M 90, 295 P2d 241 (1956).

Medicine and Surgery the Same: Where an osteopath was charged with practicing medicine (removing tonsils) without a license, his contention that the information was fatally defective in that, if he was guilty of any offense it was practicing surgery, held of no merit, the practice of medicine and surgery being considered as one under the statutes and by long acceptance by the people generally. "Osteopathy", as defined by its founder, dictionaries, and decisions of courts, briefly stated, "administers no drugs and uses no knife". St. v. Thierfelder, 114 M 104, 132 P2d 1035 (1943), reversed on other grounds in St. v. Labbitt, 117 M 26, 156 P2d 163 (1945).

Designation of Offense — Bill of Particulars Required: Where statute under which one is charged sets forth a number of ways in which the offense may be committed (such as former section prohibiting practice of medicine or surgery without a certificate and defining "practicing medicine or surgery"), the accused is entitled to know what particular portion of the section he is accused of violating, and by entering a plea of not guilty he may not be held to have waived his right to a bill of particulars. There is no statute in Montana requiring it, but the right exists by virtue of the provisions of both federal and state constitutions to know the nature and cause of the accusation. State ex rel. Wong Sun v. District Court, 112 M 153, 113 P2d 996 (1941).

Penalty — Jurisdiction in District Court: Prosecution of osteopath for practicing medicine and surgery without a license fell within exclusive jurisdiction of District Court and not within that of Justice of the Peace, the penalty for the offense exceeding Justice's Court jurisdiction. State ex rel. Freebourn v. District Court, 105 M 77, 69 P2d 748 (1937).

Osteopaths — Practice of Medicine: In former statute prohibiting practice of medicine or surgery without a certificate and defining "practicing medicine or surgery", proviso that nothing in section should restrict legally licensed osteopaths did not permit osteopaths to practice medicine or surgery without a certificate. St. v. Hopkins, 54 M 52, 166 P 304 (1917); St. v. Wood, 53 M 566, 165 P 592 (1917); St. v. Dodd, 51 M 100, 149 P 481 (1915).

Case Notes

Voluntary Act Precluding False Imprisonment Claim — Lack of Underlying Tort Precluding Civil Conspiracy Claim: A woman with breast cancer was advised by Hughes, a radiation oncologist, to undergo therapeutic radiology for the disease. Prior to radiation, an oncologist makes specific marks on the affected area to identify where to direct radiation beams. However, in addition to the marks directing radiation beams, Hughes drew a "smiley face" on the woman's breast by drawing two dime-sized "eyes" above the nipple of the breast and outlining the scar from the breast biopsy for the "mouth". The woman complained to hospital administration, and an ad hoc investigative committee recommended that Hughes receive a letter of reprimand, have a term of probation, have a chaperone while working, and be evaluated by the Montana Professional Assistance Program (MPAP). Hughes agreed to a medical, psychiatric, or chemical dependency evaluation and voluntarily enrolled in two such programs in Texas and Kansas. After release, Hughes signed an aftercare agreement. Hughes then brought suit against the individual members of the ad hoc committee and MPAP, alleging false imprisonment, civil conspiracy, breach of contract, and civil right violations related to the disciplinary actions. Summary judgment was granted to defendants in federal District Court on the civil rights claims, and the remaining charges were remanded to state District Court, where they were also summarily dismissed. Hughes appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed dismissal of the false imprisonment claim because Hughes voluntarily signed the treatment agreements and submitted to evaluation. Two elements of false imprisonment are the restraint of an individual against the individual's will and the unlawfulness of that restraint, but because no material fact existed as to the voluntariness of Hughes's action, the false imprisonment claim failed as a matter of law. Further, to sustain a civil conspiracy claim, plaintiff must allege a tort committed by one of the conspirators, but because the false imprisonment claim failed, there was no underlying tort action to form a basis for civil conspiracy, so that claim failed as well. Use of Declaratory Judgment to Settle Question of Business Association Between Dentist and Denturist Improper — Dismissal for Failure to State Claim and Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Brisendine, a licensed denturist, presented to the Board of Dentistry a proposal stating his desire to enter into a business association with a dentist regarding fees and compensation. The Board issued a letter stating that it was considering the proposal but that such association would probably constitute the illegal practice of dentistry. The Board further threatened sanctions against Brisendine if he went forward with his proposal, but no final decision was ever issued by the Board. Brisendine sought a declaratory judgment and injunctive relief in District Court, requesting a decision on whether the business association was legal. The District Court dismissed the complaint for failure to present a justiciable controversy. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that use of a declaratory judgment at this stage of the proceedings constituted an attempt to seek an advisory opinion and an unwarranted intrusion into the Board's regulatory authority. The Supreme Court noted that Brisendine could seek a declaratory judgment from the Board without subjecting his license to suspension or revocation and that dismissal of the motion for declaratory judgment was proper because Brisendine had not exhausted his administrative remedies. *Brisendine v. Compiler's Comments

1985 Amendment: After first sentence inserted remainder of section providing that rules may include the subjects of administration of anesthetics and advertising.

1985 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 518, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it contains a delegation of authority to allow the board of dentistry to adopt rules to regulate dental advertising and dental procedures involving the administration of anesthetics.

The legislature finds that no person who engages in the practice of dentistry or oral surgery should perform a dental or surgical procedure upon another person if a general anesthetic or general anesthesia is administered unless there is another qualified health professional available to monitor the patient. The legislature intends that any rule regulating dental anesthetics adopted by the board should be consistent with this finding.

The legislature intends that the board impose additional, necessary requirements for the training and skill of individuals who administer and monitor general anesthesia, deep conscious sedation, or any anesthetic agent used in pain control. In preparing its rules, the board should be guided by the principles stated in the "American academy of oral and maxillofacial surgeons' Model State Rules for General Anesthesia" and any other guide pertinent to the subject.

The examination and qualification of monitoring assistants under section 2(3) [37-4-511(3)] should require a level of proficiency higher than that required for basic life support but need not encompass all the requirements for advanced cardiac life support certification.

The legislature also intends that the board adopt rules for approving dental practice facilities in which general anesthesia is induced. The board may also adopt rules for approving dental practice facilities in which conscious sedation or nitrous oxide analgesia is used. In formulating any such rules, the board may look to similar rules developed by dental boards in California, Arizona, Texas, and other states. The board may appoint teams to inspect dental practice facilities. Initially these teams may include a majority of anesthesiologists. When a sufficient number of approved facilities exists, oral surgeons may constitute a majority of each inspection team. Rules for approving facilities should also establish the duration of permits, provide for periodic reinspection, and establish application and inspection fees. Compensation should be provided for service on inspection teams.

The board may delegate authority to examine monitoring assistants to inspection teams and may authorize such teams to adapt the practical aspect of examinations to the equipment in a particular facility.

Lastly, it is contemplated that the board will develop and implement appropriate rules regulating advertising practices by licensed dentists. The scope of such rules should extend to the content and purpose of such advertising as indicated in section 3 [37-4-205]. Such rules should have as a purpose the protection of the public from unprofessional advertising and the maintenance of professional standards in advertising by persons engaged in the practice of dentistry."

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 349, L. 1983, provided in part: "A Statement of Intent is required because Section 2 [37-4-205] delegates to the Board of Dentistry power to make rules for the implementation, continuation, and enforcement of all sections within Title 37, chapter 4. This provision is intended as a backup to the various provisions giving the Board rulemaking authority over portions of the chapter as are found in 37-4-301 (examination criteria for dental license), 37-4-307 (dentist license fees), 37-4-321 [now repealed] (defining unprofessional conduct), 37-4-402 (examination criteria for dental hygienist license), 37-4-406 (hygienist license fees), and 37-4-408 (scope of duties of dental assistants). This is consistent with authority delegated to most other professional licensing boards. Section 2 grants the Board the authority to interpret or implement other parts of the chapter that are not covered by existing delegation. The Board shall be bound by statements of intent adopted in 1979 for these other sections and may not use Section 2 for rulemaking authority when a more specific delegation suffices."

1987 Amendment: In (1) inserted language in third sentence that changes oral interview from mandatory to discretionary; and at end of fourth sentence inserted "to be administered at times and places approved by the board".

1983 Amendment: In (2) added "periodontics" to exam subjects; inserted (4)(h) referring to copies of other state licenses; in (6) inserted "and passed"; and deleted (9), which read: "The board may in its discretion permit a dental student who has successfully completed his junior year in a recognized dental school and who files proof satisfactory to the board that he has the preliminary education described in this section to take a written examination in the subjects he has completed. Satisfactory grades secured shall be credited on the final examination of the student. The board shall require a fee commensurate with costs and set by the board for this examination, which shall apply on the final examination taken by the applicant."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent adopted with Ch. 337, L. 1979, provided: "A statement of intent is required for HB 233 because the bill amends sections 37-4-301, 37-4-402, and 37-4-406, MCA, to give the Board of Dentists rulemaking authority regarding examination and application procedures for dentists and dental hygienists. The following explains the intent of the Legislature regarding the rulemaking authority granted by this bill.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402 give the Board of Dentists the right to administer their own exams for dentists and hygienists, respectively. The rulemaking authority delegates power to the Board for making rules for running its own examinations. This is intended to be a continuation of existing authority, and rules now in effect may not have to be substantially revised.

In addition, section 37-4-301 gives the Board power to set the examination and licensure fees for dentists. These are to be "commensurate with cost" and it is intended that the Board publish data on the actual costs of examination in the notice of proposed rulemaking.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402, MCA, give the Board of Dentists the authority to make rules for application procedures for dentists and hygienists, respectively. It is intended that these rules would cover routine matters not provided for in the statute.

Sections 37-4-307 and 37-4-406, MCA, require licensed dentists and hygienists, respectively, to pay an annual renewal fee that is set by the Board. It is intended that these fees, as established through administrative rules, should not exceed during the next biennium, $20 to $25 for dentists and $10 for hygienists. These fees, as required by statute, are for the purpose of maintaining an emergency fund that is used for administering and enforcing the statutes relating to dentistry and dental hygiene. If, during the next biennium, some unforeseen, complex legal proceeding arises involving the Board, the fees intended for this biennium would be increased to defray such additional costs."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1), in first sentence after “shall pay”, deleted “each year”; in (2), in first sentence near beginning and in second sentence, before “renewal fee”, deleted “annual” and in first sentence, after “fee must be made”, deleted “each year” and inserted “license expiration”; in (3)(a), before “renewal fee”, deleted “annual”; in (3)(c)(i), in two places, substituted “renewal period” for “year”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: “WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire.”

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in (2), in first sentence, substituted “made each year on or before the date set by department rule” for “made prior to March 1 of each year” and in second sentence, after “required”, inserted “by the department” and at end substituted “not timely paid” for “not paid before March 1”; deleted former (3) and (4) that read: “(3) The board may adopt rules governing requirements for demonstrating continued competency for license renewal.

(4) (a) The board may reclassify an active status license to inactive status for a licensee who furnishes satisfactory evidence that the licensee has discontinued the actual practice of dentistry because of physical disability or retirement.

(b) An individual who wishes to maintain a Montana license but does not maintain a resident practice must be licensed in the inactive status.

(c) Application to convert an inactive status license to an active status license must be made in accordance with rules of the board. The application to convert to active status must accompany the submission of the renewal fee prescribed for such license. If more than 1 year has passed since the license was inactivated, satisfactory evidence of competence must be submitted to the board before an active status license may be issued”; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 131, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

1983 Amendment: Substituted entire text (see 1983 Session Law) for former text that read: “(1) A licensed dentist practicing within this state shall annually pay to the department before March 1, as a renewal fee for the year, a sum set by the board. Notice of the change in the amount of renewal fees shall be given to each dentist registered in this state by the department.

(2) If a registered dentist absents himself from the state for a period of 1 or more years or does not engage in active practice within this state, he may continue his license in good standing by a payment set by the board each year or at the discretion of the board, he may be reinstated on the payment of a fee prescribed by the board for each year’s absence. The annual payments shall be made prior to March 1 of each year, and a receipt or certificate shall be issued by the department.

(3) In case of default in payment of the annual renewal fee by a dentist, his license shall be revoked by the board on 30 days’ notice given to the delinquent of the time and place of considering the revocation. A registered or certified letter addressed to the last-known address of the party failing to comply with this requirement, as the address appears on the records of the department, constitutes sufficient notice of revocation of license, but no license may be revoked for nonpayment if the dentist notified pays the renewal fee plus a late payment penalty prescribed by the board before or at the time fixed for consideration of revocation. The department may maintain in the name of this state a suit to collect renewal fees and penalties applicable and to recover from the delinquent dentist the cost of the action, including reasonable attorneys' fees.

(4) No license fee or tax may be imposed on dentists by a municipality or any other subdivision of the state."

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 349, L. 1983, provided in part: "Sections 4 and 8 [amending 37-4-307 and 37-4-406] give the Board the authority to adopt rules imposing a demonstration of continued competency for license renewal. The Board is not required to adopt such rules. It is contemplated that a study will be conducted to review other existing program designs in determining a viable means of demonstrating continued competency."

1981 Amendments: Chapter 345 deleted "and not to exceed $50" at end of first sentence in (1). Chapters 345 and 363 deleted "The board may increase or decrease the annual renewal fee to maintain in the earmarked revenue fund at all times an amount, to be known as the emergency fund, to be used for the purpose of administering, policing, and enforcing this chapter. The emergency fund shall be maintained at an approximate level of $2,500" after "a sum set by the board" in (1); Ch. 345 deleted ", not to exceed $25," after "a payment set by the board each year" in (2); substituted "a fee prescribed by the board" for "a fee of $25" in (2); and substituted "penalty prescribed by the board" for "penalty of $10" in the middle of (3).

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not (prior to the 1983 amendment of 37-4-307) made specifically applicable to self-government units. 37-4-405. Dental hygienist to practice under supervision of licensed dentist — exceptions — definitions.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 172 in middle of (1)(a) after "dentist" deleted "in a public or private institution, under a board of health, or in a public clinic authorized by the board"; inserted (1)(b) allowing dental hygienist to provide preventative services in public health facility under supervision of licensed dentist or under public health supervision; in (2) near middle before "supervision" inserted "direct supervision or general"; in (3) substituted "the following definitions apply" for "'supervision' is defined as follows" and inserted definitions of public health facility and public health supervision; inserted (4) providing criteria for when licensed dental hygienist may provide preventative services under public health supervision; inserted (5) requiring dental hygienist practicing under public health supervision to obtain limited access permit from board, requiring board to adopt rules, and limiting services provided under limited access permit to patients or residents of facilities or programs who are unable to receive regular dental care due to age, infirmity, disability, or financial constraints; inserted (6) allowing board to identify by rule additional public health facilities and programs where limited access permit services may be provided; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1991 Amendment: Near beginning of (1), after "hygienist", inserted "with the permission of the supervising dentist", near middle substituted "under the general supervision" for "but may not practice except under the direct personal supervision", and at end deleted "authorized by the board"; deleted former first sentence of (2) that read: "The board may, in lieu of the direct supervision requirement set forth in subsection (1), permit a licensed dental hygienist to provide clinical dental hygiene services to a public or private institution, a hospital or extended care facility, or a school or public health program after a review of a request for such service and a description of the type of supervision necessary is made by the board"; in (2)(a) substituted definition of direct supervision for former definition that read: "the supervision of those tasks and procedures that do not require the dentist in the room where performed but require his presence on the premises and availability for prompt consultation and treatment"; in (2)(b) substituted definition of general supervision for former definition that read: "those tasks and procedures that do not require the presence of a dentist on the premises but shall remain under the dentist's directive order, control, responsibility, and evaluation"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this section, a dental hygienist may continue performing tasks and procedures requiring direct supervision if:

(a) the supervising dentist required to be on the premises has been called out of the office briefly for an emergency; and

(b) both the hygienist and the patient consent"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 66, L. 1991, provided: "The intent of the amendments to 37-4-404(2) [now repealed] is to permit the board of dentistry to establish, within the parameters set by statute, the number of practice hours required for licensure of dental hygienists by credentials."

The intent of the amendments to 37-4-405(1) is to ensure that, except for the administration of local anesthesia, it is up to the discretion of the supervising dentist and not the board to determine if a dental hygienist is to perform the duties referred to in Title 37, chapter 4, under general or direct supervision."

1981 Amendment: Added subsection (3) stating circumstances under which dental hygienist may practice without direct supervision those tasks and procedures that normally require supervision.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 in (3) at beginning inserted "Except as provided in 37-1-138"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 230 in (3) substituted "licensee shall forfeit" for "board must revoke"; and in first and second sentences in (3)(a), in (3)(b), and in (3)(c) substituted "forfeiture" for "revocation"; in (3)(c) substituted "forfeited" for "revoked"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1), in first sentence after "shall pay", deleted "each year"; in (2), in first and second sentences before "renewal fee", deleted "annual" and in first sentence, near middle, inserted "license expiration"; in (3)(c)(i), in two places, substituted "period" for "year"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted third sentence in (1) that read: "The renewal must be for either active or inactive status, as defined by rules of the board"; in (2), in first sentence, substituted "made on or before the date set by department rule" for "made prior to March 1 of each year" and at end of second sentence substituted "not timely paid" for "not paid before March 1"; deleted former (3) and (4) that read: "(3) The board may adopt rules governing requirements for demonstrating continued competency for license renewal.

(4) (a) The board may reclassify an active status license to inactive status for a licensee who furnishes satisfactory evidence that the licensee has discontinued the actual practice of dental hygiene because of physical disability or retirement.

(b) An individual who wishes to maintain a Montana license but does not maintain a resident practice must be licensed in the inactive status.

(c) Application to convert an inactive status license to an active status license must be made in accordance with rules of the board. The application to convert to active status must accompany the submission of the renewal fee prescribed for such license. If more than 1 year has passed since the license was inactivated, satisfactory evidence of competence must be submitted to the board before an active status license may be issued"; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 131, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

1985 Statement of Intent: See compiler's comment under 37-4-401 concerning Ch. 449, L. 1985.

1983 Amendment: Substantially revised and enlarged section (see 1983 Session Law). Text formerly read: "(1) Before March 1 of each year, a licensed dental hygienist shall pay to the department a renewal fee set by the board. In default of payment, the board may, after hearing and on 30 days' notice, revoke the license of the hygienist in default; but the payment of the renewal fee on or before the time of hearing, with an additional sum set by the board excuses the default. The department may collect the fee by suit.

(2) The board may likewise revoke or suspend the license of a dental hygienist for violating this chapter."

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 349, L. 1983, provided in part: "Sections 4 and 8 [amending 37-4-307 and 37-4-406] give the Board the authority to adopt rules imposing a demonstration of continued competency for license renewal. The Board is not required to adopt such rules. It is contemplated that a study will be conducted to review other existing program designs in determining a viable means of demonstrating continued competency."

1981 Amendment: Deleted "not to exceed $25" after "a renewal fee set by the board" in the first sentence of (1); and deleted "not to exceed $10," after "an additional sum set by the board" in the second sentence of (1).

Fees Prescribed by Board — 1981 Statement of Intent and Preamble: Chapter 345, L. 1981 (SB 412), which amended this section relating to the Board prescribing fees, contained a statement of intent and a preamble. For the texts see compiler's comments at 37-1-134.

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent adopted with Ch. 337, L. 1979, provided: "A statement of intent is required for HB 233 because the bill amends sections 37-4-301, 37-4-402, and 37-4-406, MCA, to give the Board of Dentists rulemaking authority regarding examination and application procedures for dentists and dental hygienists. The following explains the intent of the Legislature regarding the rulemaking authority granted by this bill.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402 give the Board of Dentists the right to administer their own exams for dentists and hygienists, respectively. The rulemaking authority delegates power to the Board for making rules for running its own examinations. This is intended to be a continuation of existing authority, and rules now in effect may not have to be substantially revised.

In addition, section 37-4-301 gives the Board power to set the examination and licensure fees for dentists. These are to be "commensurate with cost" and it is intended that the Board publish data on the actual costs of examination in the notice of proposed rulemaking.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402, MCA, give the Board of Dentists the authority to make rules for application procedures for dentists and hygienists, respectively. It is intended that these rules would cover routine matters not provided for in the statute.

Sections 37-4-307 and 37-4-406, MCA, require licensed dentists and hygienists, respectively, to pay an annual renewal fee that is set by the Board. It is intended that these fees, as established through administrative rules, should not exceed during the next biennium, $20 to $25 for dentists and $10 for hygienists. These fees, as required by statute, are for the purpose of maintaining an emergency fund that is used for administering and enforcing the statutes relating to dentistry and dental hygiene. If, during the next biennium, some unforeseen, complex legal proceeding arises involving the Board, the fees intended for this biennium would be increased to defray such additional costs."

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 313, L. 1987, provided: "This bill may require the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of public health and human services] to amend Rule 16.32.320, Administrative Rules of Montana, or to modify its interpretation of that rule, which incorporates by reference federal regulations governing hospital staffing (42 CFR 405 subpart J). If the federal regulations do not prohibit a hospital from authorizing an oral surgeon to take patient histories and perform physical examinations, no action by the department is contemplated. Because the federal regulations are ambiguous, the department may make appropriate changes in its rules if necessary to administer this act.

Should other dental specialties emerge, with in-hospital training equivalent to that of oral surgeons, the board of dentistry may recognize these specialists as qualified to take patient histories and perform physical examinations."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 483 in definition of department substituted reference to department of labor and industry for reference to department of commerce and substituted "part 17" for "part 18". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 402 in definition of podiatrist, in two places, and in one place in definition of podiatry inserted "and ankle".

1989 Amendment: Substituted definition of podiatry for former definition that read: "the diagnosis, medical, surgical, mechanical, manipulative, and electrical treatment of ailments of the human foot"; and in definition of podiatrist inserted "diagnose and" and "human functional".

1987 Amendment: In (1) deleted reference to chiropody; and in (2) substituted "a physician or surgeon of the foot, licensed to treat ailments of the foot" for "one practicing podiatry".

1981 Amendments: Chapter 274 substituted "department of commerce" for "department of professional and occupational licensing" in (4); changed internal references to the department and the board.

Chapter 470, in (3), substituted reference to the board of medical examiners for reference to the board of podiatry examiners.

Preamble: The preamble to SB 392 (Ch. 470, L. 1981) read: "WHEREAS, the sunset law, sections 2-8-103 [repealed in 1983] and 2-8-112, terminates the Board of Podiatry Examiners and requires a performance evaluation by the Legislative Audit Committee; and

WHEREAS, as a result of the performance evaluation, the Legislative Audit Committee recommends that the Board of Podiatry Examiners be terminated, and that regulation of podiatrists be transferred to the Board of Medical Examiners."

Attorney General's Opinions

Chiropodists (Now Podiatrists) — Prescription of Drugs: Chiropodists (now podiatrists) licensed under the laws of this state legally may prescribe drugs as a part of their professional treatment. However, their right to administer or prescribe drugs is limited to the direct treatment of an ailment of the human foot. (See 1995 amendment.) 29 A.G. Op. 33 (1961). (See 37-6-105.)

1991 Amendment: Inserted (3) concerning annual license renewal on date set by Board; at end of (4), after “annually”, substituted “a date set by the board” for “July 1 of each year”; in (5), after “than”, substituted “60 days prior to the annual renewal date set by the board under subsection (3)” for “May 1 of each year and shall issue a receipt acknowledging payment of an annual renewal fee”; in (6), near beginning of first sentence after “before”, substituted “the renewal date set by the board under subsection (3)” for “October 1 of each year”; and made minor changes in style.

1987 Amendment: In (1), after ““registered podiatrist license””, deleted language relating to wording of the license and inserted reference to temporary license; in (3) deleted 3-month grace period for payment prior to revocation; inserted (4) providing a date for mailing of renewal notices and requiring acknowledgement of payment by issuance of a receipt; inserted (5) providing procedure for revocation of a license upon nonpayment of the renewal fee; and in (6), at beginning, inserted “A license revoked for nonpayment of the annual renewal fee”.

1981 Amendments: Chapter 66 deleted two sentences in (2) relating to recording the license with the county clerk.

Chapter 345 deleted “in an amount not to exceed $25” after “renewal fee set by the board” near the beginning of (3); and substituted “payment of an additional fee prescribed by the board” for “payment of a fee of $35” at the end of (3).

Rules to Remain in Effect: Section 8, Ch. 470, L. 1981 (which chapter transferred the functions of the Board of Podiatry Examiners to the Board of Medical Examiners), provided that “Existing rules of the board of podiatry examiners shall remain in effect unless amended or repealed by the board of medical examiners.”

Fees Prescribed by Board — Statement of Intent and Preamble: Chapter 345, L. 1981 (SB 412), which amended this section relating to the Board prescribing fees, contained a statement of intent and a preamble. For the texts see compiler’s comments at 37-1-134.

County Registration — Preamble: The preamble to SB 307 (Ch. 66, L. 1981) provided: “WHEREAS, during the course of its sunset audits the legislative audit committee noted that licensees of several professions are required to register their licenses with the county clerk and recorder; and

WHEREAS, all such licensees are licensed by the state and county registration serves no public purpose.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this bill to delete county registration requirements for members of various professions.”

1987 Amendment: Substituted “board” for “state board of podiatry examiners”.

1983 Amendment: Substituted reference to state special revenue fund for reference to earmarked revenue fund.

37-6-311. Refusal or revocation of license — investigation.

Compiler’s Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 490 in (4), in first sentence after “incompetent”, deleted “seriously mentally ill, or” and after “narcotics” inserted “or to have been committed pursuant to 53-21-127”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 40, Ch. 490, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted second and third sentences in (1) that read: “The department shall notify the applicant of the board’s intent to deny, revoke, or refuse to renew a license by mailing a letter to the applicant’s last-known address stating the board’s intent and setting a time and place for a hearing. If the applicant fails without cause to appear at the hearing or if the board determines that the applicant is not entitled to a license, the board shall deny, revoke, or refuse to renew the applicant’s license”; in (2) substituted “department” for “board”; at beginning of second sentence in (3) inserted “Upon order of the board” and deleted fourth and fifth sentences that read: “If the board has reasonable cause to believe that the alleged conditions exist or that the alleged offenses were committed, the department shall mail to the person at his last-known address a specification of the charges against him, together with a written notice of the time and place of the hearing on such charges, advising him that he may be present in person and by counsel if he so desires to offer evidence and be heard in his defense. The time fixed for the hearing may not be less than 30 days from the date of mailing the notice”; deleted (4) through (7) that read: “(4) A person, including a member of the board, may file a written complaint with the department against a person having a license to practice podiatry in this state charging him with the commission of any of the offenses set forth in 37-6-310 or with any of the offenses or conditions set forth in subsection (1) or (2) of this section. The complaint shall set forth a specification of the charges. When the complaint is filed, the department shall mail a copy to the person complained against, at his last-known address, together with a written citation of the time and place of the hearing on the complaint.

(5) At the hearing the board shall adopt a resolution finding the person complained against guilty or not guilty of the matters charged. If the board finds that the offenses or conditions referred to in 37-6-310 or subsection (1) or (2) of this section do not exist with respect to the person complained against or if he is found not guilty, the board shall dismiss the charges or complaint. If the board finds that the offenses or conditions referred to in 37-6-310 or in subsection (1) or (2) of this section do exist or the person is found guilty, the board shall:

- (a) revoke his license;
- (b) suspend his right to practice for a period not exceeding 1 year;
- (c) suspend its judgment of revocation on the terms and conditions to be determined by the board;
- (d) place him on probation; or
- (e) take any other action in relation to disciplining him as the board in its discretion considers proper.

(6) In a case of revocation, suspension, or probation, the department shall enter in its records the facts of the action and of subsequent measures taken by the board with respect to that action.

(7) On the expiration of the term of suspension, the licensee shall be reinstated by the board if he furnishes the board with evidence that he is then of good moral character and conduct or restored to good health and that he has not practiced podiatry in this state during the term of suspension. If the evidence fails to establish to the satisfaction of the board that the holder is then of good moral character and conduct or restored to good health or if the evidence shows he has practiced podiatry in this state during the term of suspension, the board shall revoke the license at a hearing held in accordance with the notice and procedure provided in subsection (1). The revocation is final"; and made minor changes in style.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

1991 Amendment: In (4), near beginning of first sentence before "complaint", substituted "written" for "sworn".

1989 Amendment: In (4) and (5) deleted brackets around "37-6-310".

1987 Amendment: Substituted language (see 1987 Session Law) for former text that read: "(1) After notice and opportunity for a hearing, the board may deny, revoke, or refuse to renew a license for any of the following causes:

- (a) fraudulent representation in obtaining the license;
- (b) incompetency in practice;
- (c) use of untruthful or improbable statements to patients or in advertisements;
- (d) habitual intoxication;
- (e) unprofessional and immoral conduct; or
- (f) selling or giving away alcohol or drugs for an illegal purpose.

(2) However, the board may authorize the department to grant or reissue such license after 6 months if in its judgment the act, acts, or conditions of disqualification have been remedied."

Code Commissioner Correction — Bracketed References: As enacted in Ch. 288, L. 1987, erroneous references were made to "[section 8]" once in (4) and two times in (5). Section 8, Ch. 288, amended 37-6-305 to correct a reference to the "board". Section 9, Ch. 288, seems to have been intended as the reference; section 9 is codified as 37-6-310. Each reference has been bracketed to indicate an error.

(d) regulate the quality of drugs and medicines dispensed in this state, using the United States Pharmacopoeia/National Formulary or revisions thereof as the standards"; in (2)(b) before "inspect" deleted "enter and"; in (2)(b)(ii) inserted first two sentences regarding inspection of appropriate records and pharmacy licenses; substituted (2)(c) through (2)(g) regarding regulation of interns, pharmacy technicians, and applicants, issuing certificates, and establishing and collecting fees for former (2)(f) that read: "(f) regulate the practice of interns under national standards"; in (2)(j) after "enforcing" substituted "parts 1 through 7 of this chapter, including but not limited to:

(i) requirements and qualifications for the transfer of board-issued licenses;

(ii) minimum standards for pharmacy internship programs and qualifications for licensing pharmacy interns;

(iii) qualifications and procedures for registering pharmacy technicians; and

(iv) requirements and procedures necessary to allow a pharmacy licensed in another jurisdiction to be registered to practice telepharmacy across state lines" for "parts 1 through 3 of this chapter"; substituted (3) allowing the board to join professional organizations and associations and establish standards of care for patients for former (3) that read: "(3) The department shall:

(a) license, register, and examine, subject to 37-1-101, applicants whom the board considers qualified under this chapter;

(b) license pharmacies and certain stores under this chapter;

(c) license wholesale drug distributors;

(d) issue certificates of "certified pharmacy" under this chapter; and

(e) establish and collect license fees"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1991 Amendment: Inserted (3)(c) requiring Department to license wholesale drug distributors; inserted (3)(e) requiring Department to establish and collect license fees; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 134, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it is anticipated that promulgation of administrative rules will be necessary to implement this bill. This bill is proposed solely to bring Montana standards on licensing wholesale drug distributors into compliance with rules of the federal food and drug administration (FDA). Unless state law complies with FDA requirements by September 1992, federal law would prohibit the distribution of drugs by manufacturers and wholesalers in Montana. In adopting administrative rules, the department of commerce [now department of labor and industry] shall implement the federal Prescription Drug Marketing Act of 1987 as well as guidelines developed by the FDA."

Applicability: Section 13, Ch. 134, L. 1991, provided: "(1) The provisions of [sections 1 through 11] [37-7-201 and Title 37, ch. 7, part 6] are applicable to activities that occur on or after April 1, 1992.

(2) Rulemaking by the board may commence on July 1, 1991, to be applicable on April 1, 1992."

1981 Amendment: Deleted "and drugstore" from the end of (2)(b); and made minor changes in phraseology.

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent adopted with Ch. 291, L. 1979, codified as 45-9-108, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in that in section 3 it delegates authority to the Board of Pharmacy to adopt rules.

House Bill 422 defines the offense of criminal possession of precursors to certain dangerous drugs. The bill provides that its provisions do not apply to those persons or businesses which have a legitimate reason for possessing the precursors. It is possible that certain persons, businesses or research facilities may now or at a later date have a legitimate need for these precursors. The purpose for giving rulemaking authority to the Board of Pharmacy is that it can best determine whether a person, business or research facility has a legitimate need for the precursors. It will also alleviate having to amend the statute in future sessions if it appears that someone is entitled to be exempted from the criminal provisions of the statute."

Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 307, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, rapidly rising costs of prescription drugs are one of today's most serious problems facing persons on fixed or lower incomes; and

WHEREAS, even though prescription drug price increases are dictated by pharmaceutical manufacturers, there are sometimes significant differences in price for the same prescription drug among retail pharmacies; and

WHEREAS, in some instances, the ability to comparison shop for prescription drugs can be helpful to the consumer in choosing a pharmacy to patronize."

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 307, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is necessary for this bill because [section 1] [37-7-204] requires the board of pharmacy, under certain circumstances, to adopt a rule requiring the listing of certain prescription drugs. The legislature intends that the board of pharmacy make every effort to devise, in consultation with senior citizens, other consumer organizations, and retail pharmacists, a workable and practical system for the listing of prescription drug prices. The list should be based upon standard assumptions as to the quantity and dosage in order to facilitate comparison of prices."

Part 3 Licensing

37-7-301. Unlawful practice.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 388 substituted (1) and (2) stating unlawful practices for former (1) through (4) that read: "(1) person to compound, dispense, vend, or sell at retail drugs, medicines, chemicals, or poisons in any place other than a pharmacy, except as hereinafter provided;

(2) proprietor, owner, or manager of a pharmacy or any other person to permit the compounding or dispensing of prescriptions or the vending or selling at retail of drugs, medicines, chemicals, or poisons in any pharmacy except by a registered and licensed pharmacist or by an intern registered and licensed by the department and under the supervision of a registered and licensed pharmacist;

(3) person to assume or pretend to the title of pharmacist or intern unless the person has a license as such, issued and in force pursuant to parts 1 through 3 of this chapter;

(4) person other than a licensed and registered pharmacist or a licensed and registered intern under the supervision of a licensed and registered pharmacist to compound, dispense, vend, or sell at retail drugs, medicines, chemicals, or poisons except as provided in parts 1 through 3." Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1991 Amendment: At beginning inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1992.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "registered and licensed by the department, under the supervision of a registered and licensed pharmacist" for "in the temporary absence of such pharmacist" at the end of (2); inserted "under the supervision of a licensed and registered pharmacist" after "registered intern" in (4).

Case Notes

Constitutionality: In prosecution of grocer for selling aspirin without a license, this section was held unconstitutional insofar as it limited to pharmacists the right to sell drugs in manufacturers' original packages. Since the law absolved pharmacists from all responsibility as to purity, strength, and quality of such drugs, restriction of sales to pharmacists did not tend to protect or preserve the public health and hence the act was not a valid exercise of police power. St. v. Stephens, 102 M 414, 59 P2d 54 (1936).

Practice of Pharmacy Proper Subject of Regulation: The practice of pharmacy is a proper subject for police regulation. Johnson v. Great Falls, 38 M 369, 99 P 1059 (1909).

37-7-302. Examination — qualifications — fees — reciprocity.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted former (4) that read: "(4) The board may in its discretion authorize the department to grant registration without examination to a pharmacist licensed by a board of pharmacy or a similar board of another state which accords similar recognition to licensees of this state if the requirements for registration in the other state are, in the opinion of the board, equivalent to the requirements of this chapter. The fee for registration by reciprocity shall be prescribed by the board"; and made minor changes in style.

Name Change — Directions to Code Commissioner: Pursuant to sec. 36, Ch. 308, L. 1995, in this section the Code Commissioner changed "university of Montana" to "university of Montana-Missoula".

1983 Amendment: In (2), deleted last sentence, which read: "On again making payment of the fee, an applicant who fails is entitled to take the next succeeding examination free of charge."; and in first sentence of (3), substituted present language for "To be entitled to examination as a pharmacist, the applicant shall be of good moral character and a graduate of the school of pharmacy of the university of Montana or of a college or school of pharmacy accredited by the American council on pharmaceutical education".

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 247, L. 1983, provided: "A Statement of Intent is required on House Bill 337 because sections 2 and 3 [amending 2-15-1843 (renumbered 2-15-1733) and 37-7-302] delegate to the Board of Pharmacists power to approve accredited pharmacy degree programs for qualifications for appointment for licensed members on the Board and for qualifications to be entitled for examination as a pharmacist. It is intended that the Board will approve those standards which are at least equivalent to the minimum standards required by the American Council on Pharmaceutical Education. The American Council on Pharmaceutical Education operates as an independent organization, but is recognized by the United States Commissioner of Education, the Department of Health and Human Services, and the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation."

1981 Amendments: Chapter 341 deleted "a citizen of the United States" after "applicant shall be" near the beginning of (3).

Chapter 345 substituted "The fee for registration by reciprocity shall be prescribed by the board" for "The fee for registration by reciprocity is $200" at the end of (4).

Chapter 379 moved the language in former (3), which provided a fee for registration by reciprocity to the end of (4); substituted requirement that applicants be graduates of schools accredited by the council on pharmaceutical education for the requirement that the schools be recognized and approved or a member of the association of colleges of pharmacy in (3); deleted "During this period, if the applicant has passed the examination, he shall be licensed as an intern only." from the end of (3); deleted "If the holder is entitled to manage or conduct a pharmacy in this state for himself or another, the fact shall be set forth in the certificate." from the end of (5).

Coordination With Senate Bill 412: Section 16, Ch. 379, L. 1981, provided: "If Senate Bill 412 introduced in the 47th legislature is passed and approved that portion of section 6, or any other section of this bill, that amends 37-7-302, to provide for a fee for registration by reciprocity is void and of no effect." SB 412 was approved April 15, 1981. As required by this instruction, "The fee for registration by reciprocity shall be prescribed by the board." was substituted in codification for the sentence "The fee for registration by reciprocity is $200." as amended into 37-7-302(4). (Note that such replacement sentence was taken from the amendment to former subsection (3) of 37-7-302 by sec. 15, Ch. 345, L. 1981 (SB 412).)

Fees Prescribed by Board — 1981 Statement of Intent and Preamble: Chapter 345, L. 1981 (SB 412), that amended this section relating to the Board prescribing fees, contained a statement of intent and a preamble. For the texts see compiler's comments at 37-1-134.

Citizenship Qualifications — Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 341, L. 1981, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislative Audit Committee in its sunset reviews determined that a few professions and occupations require citizenship as a qualification for licensure; and

WHEREAS, a number of courts, including the United States Supreme Court, have found citizenship qualifications for licensure unconstitutional.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this act to delete citizenship requirements as a qualification for licensure by those boards presently having a citizenship requirement."

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 inserted (2) to provide that this section may not be interpreted to conflict with 37-1-138; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 388 throughout section in four places substituted "board" for "department". Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in first sentence, after "the department shall", deleted "annually" and inserted "license expiration" and in fourth sentence, at end, substituted "by department rule" for "not later than 1 year from its date". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in first sentence substituted "on or before the date set by department rule" for "before June 30" and at end of fifth sentence substituted "compliance with other requirements prescribed by law" for "compliance with the continuing education provisions of this chapter"; deleted (2) that read: "(2) The board may charge an additional fee for such license renewal to be used in administering the continuing education provisions of this chapter"; and made minor changes in style.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

1981 Amendments: Chapter 345 substituted "registration fee prescribed by the board" for "registration fee of $15" at the end of the first sentence of (1); substituted "increases the renewal fee as prescribed by the board" for "increases the renewal fee to $30" at the end of the second sentence of (1); and deleted "of up to $10" after "an additional fee" in (2).

Chapter 379 deleted "for a period of 30 days" after "renewal fee" in the middle of the second sentence of (1).

(1) removing a stock bottle from the shelf and counting and pouring the contents into a suitable container under direct supervision of a pharmacist;

- (2) typing a prescription label and affixing it to a prescription bottle, with a final check and any patient counseling performed by the pharmacist;
 - (3) entering prescription information into a data processing system under supervision of a pharmacist who must be able to check all entries;
 - (4) maintaining prescription records, including prescription numbers, refill data, and other information on the patient profile system;
 - (5) prepackaging unit dose drugs for internal distribution. These prepackage unit dose drugs must be quarantined together with bulk containers until a pharmacist performs a final check and maintains appropriate records.
 - (6) selling nonprescription drugs in their original containers without engaging in patient counseling;
 - (7) receiving and checking in pharmaceuticals, including controlled substances, if the pharmacy technician or auxiliary initials and dates all invoices with the actual date the drugs were received;
 - (8) participating in the biennial inventory of controlled substances, provided a pharmacist supervises the process. The supervising pharmacist must cosign the inventory list with the participating pharmacist and pharmacy technician or auxiliary.
 - (9) compounding intravenous solutions if a mechanism for verification exists that includes checking of the original order, solutions, additives, dosages, and clarity.
- The legislature further intends that the board's rules allow a supervising pharmacist to use the services of only one technician or auxiliary at a time, except that the pharmacist may use two at a time if both are performing any of the following procedures:
- (1) intravenous admixture and other sterile product preparation;
 - (2) filling of unit dose cassettes;

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 at end of sixth sentence in (1) substituted "expires on the date set by department rule" for "expires on June 30 following the date of issue"; in (2) substituted "The board may impose discipline or deny or refuse to renew a pharmacy for reasons specified in and subject to conditions specified in Title 37, chapter 1" for (2) and (3) that read: "The board may suspend, revoke, or refuse to renew a pharmacy license:

(a) obtained by false representation or fraud;

(b) when the pharmacy for which the license is issued is kept open for the transaction of business without a pharmacist in charge;

(c) when the person to whom the license is granted has been convicted of:

(i) a violation of parts 1 through 3 of this chapter; or

(ii) a violation of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (Title 21, chapter 9, U.S.C.); chapter 2 or 7 of Title 37, chapter 9 or 10 of Title 45, or chapter 31 or 32 of Title 50, MCA; or rules adopted under such act or chapters;

(d) when the person to whom the license is granted is a natural person whose pharmacist license has been revoked; or

(e) when the pharmacy is conducted in violation of parts 1 through 3 of this chapter.

(3) Before a license can be revoked, the holder is entitled to a hearing by the board"; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 131, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 132, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1983 Amendment: In (2)(c)(ii), inserted last clause referring to state statutes and to rules adopted under federal or state statutes.

1981 Amendments: Chapter 345 substituted "an annual fee prescribed by the board" for "an annual fee of $10" near the beginning of former subsection (1); substituted "fee prescribed by the board" for "fee of $100" in the second sentence of (1); deleted "in an amount not to exceed $50" after "board" in the fourth sentence of (1); and substituted "increase the renewal fee as prescribed by the board" for "increase the renewal fee to the sum of $100" in the fifth sentence of (1).

Chapter 362 deleted former subsection (1) relating to the licensing of stores other than pharmacies; deleted "store or" before "pharmacy" in (2) and (2)(e); deleted "(ii) a felony; or" from (2)(c); made minor changes in phraseology.

Chapter 379 deleted the last sentence of former subsection (1) relating to sale of patent or proprietary medicine in original package; deleted "or registered interns" after "registered pharmacists" near the middle of (1); deleted "for a period of 30 days" after "payment of such renewal fee" in the fifth sentence of (1); substituted a citation to the U.S. Code for a citation to the U.S. Statutes at Large in (2)(c)(ii); and deleted "or intern" after "pharmacist" in (2)(d).

Case Notes

Denial of License — Interest of Physicians in Pharmacy: Where Board of Pharmacists (now Board of Pharmacy) refused to grant license to operate pharmacy on sole ground that building corporation owned by physicians owned 97% of capital stock of applicant, Board was acting beyond its authority as provided by Title 37, ch. 7, since nowhere in the statutes is there any indication, express or implied, of legislative policy to exclude physicians from ownership of pharmacies. Because there is neither grant of power to Board to deny license on basis of ownership by physicians nor a legislative policy to exclude them from ownership, the Board has no authority to do so; furthermore, 37-7-103 indicates an express legislative policy contrary to Board's action in denying license. Missoula Clinic Pharmacy v. Zimmerman, 153 M 103, 454 P2d 619 (1969).

Sale of Unlabeled Drugs — Suspension for Sale: A pharmacy license may be suspended for a single sale of unlabeled drugs in violation of 37-7-504. W. Drug of Great Falls v. Gosman, 141 M 8, 374 P2d 507 (1962).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 388 near middle after "'apothecary'" inserted "'drug store'" and at end substituted "licensed pharmacist" for "registered pharmacist"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Case Notes

Section Unconstitutional: Since a store can sell ordinary household or medicinal drugs under 37-7-103 and 37-7-321, it cannot be deprived of use of word "drug" in advertisement under this section (prior to 1977 amendment) since the law makes no requirement that the registered pharmacist who may use the name "drug" and sell the drugs make any analysis, inspection, or examination of the drug to be passed on by him to the purchasing public. Pike v. Porter, 126 M 482, 253 P2d 1055 (1952).

Unreasonable Classification as Unconstitutional: The provision excluding those who are not registered pharmacists from use of word "drug" (prior to 1977 amendment) in advertising household drugs bears no reasonable relationship to protection of human life, health, or safety but merely discriminates in favor of a certain class and is unconstitutional. Pike v. Porter, 126 M 482, 253 P2d 1055 (1952).

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 134, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it is anticipated that promulgation of administrative rules will be necessary to implement this bill. This bill is proposed solely to bring Montana standards on licensing wholesale drug distributors into compliance with rules of the federal food and drug administration (FDA). Unless state law complies with FDA requirements by September 1992, federal law would prohibit the distribution of drugs by manufacturers and wholesalers in Montana. In adopting administrative rules, the department of commerce [now department of labor and industry] shall implement the federal Prescription Drug Marketing Act of 1987 as well as guidelines developed by the FDA."

Out-of-State Mail Service Pharmacies

Part Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 664, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, the United States Congress has enacted a requirement in 42 U.S.C. 1396r-8 of the Social Security Act that states participating in Medicaid institute programs of drug utilization review and patient counseling by pharmacists; and

WHEREAS, similar changes in pharmacy practice could benefit the health and welfare of all Montanans and not just Medicaid recipients, and to that end the Board of Pharmacy should have the authority to set standards for pharmacists concerning drug utilization review and patient counseling, including standards for pharmacists who fill prescriptions by mail order from outside this state."

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 664, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is needed for this bill because it grants the board of pharmacy additional regulatory and rulemaking authority. In order to benefit all patient-consumers, the board may adopt rules similar to medicaid regulations governing drug utilization review and patient counseling. The board is also required to adopt rules to regulate the activities of out-of-state mail service pharmacies, including their licensing, reporting requirements, drug utilization review and patient counseling, and site inspections."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 274 near middle of second sentence substituted "registered" for "licensed"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 28, 1995.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 274, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the bill gives the board of pharmacy authority to adopt administrative rules for the registration of out-of-state mail service pharmacies."

It is the intent of the legislature to correct a deficiency in Title 37, chapter 7, part 7 (Chapter 664, Laws of 1991), that arose from a defective attempt to grant rulemaking authority to the board of pharmacy to carry out the provisions regarding out-of-state mail service pharmacies. [Section 4] [37-7-712] is specifically intended to grant rulemaking authority to the board of pharmacy to carry out the purpose and to enforce the provisions of Title 37, chapter 7, part 7. Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in introductory clause, near middle after "in this state and for", substituted "the renewal" for "annual renewal"; and in (5) substituted "a periodic renewal" for "annual renewal" and at end inserted "and at a time established by the department by rule". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 274 in introductory clause, in three places, substituted reference to registration for reference to licensure; at beginning of (1)(a) substituted "shall submit a certificate from the appropriate licensing authority with which it is currently" for "must be"; at beginning of (2), after "shall", substituted "register with" for "submit an application in form and content as determined by", after "location" inserted "including the names and titles of the corporate officers", and after "pharmacist" inserted "licensed in the state in which the pharmacy is located who is"; in (3) substituted second sentence regarding supervision of supportive persons for former language that read: "Any plan that has a ratio of technicians to pharmacists greater than the maximum ratio allowed for an in-state retail pharmacy under the board's rules must be approved by the board as provided in 37-7-307 through 37-7-309"; in (4) at beginning after "shall", substituted "submit to" for "register each pharmacist identified under subsection (2) with" and near middle, after "if any", inserted "for each pharmacist identified under subsection (2) and shall provide to the board the same toll-free telephone service referenced in 37-7-706 in order to comply with all information requests by the board"; in (5) substituted "registration" for "license"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 28, 1995.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 274, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the bill gives the board of pharmacy authority to adopt administrative rules for the registration of out-of-state mail service pharmacies.

CHAPTER 8 NURSING

Chapter Administrative Rules

Title 8, chapter 32, ARM Board of Nursing.

Chapter Case Notes

Crime of Sexual Assault as Unprofessional Conduct and Crime Relating to Public Health, Welfare, and Safety — Lack of Rehabilitation: Gilpin was convicted of two counts of sexual assault. After his nursing license was revoked, Gilpin appealed, claiming that there was insufficient connection between the reason for his criminal conviction and the practice of nursing to warrant revocation of the license. The Supreme Court affirmed the hearing examiner's finding that the sexual assaults related to the public health, welfare, and safety and that Gilpin was guilty of unprofessional conduct. Gilpin v. Bd. of Nursing, 254 M 308, 837 P2d 1342, 49 St. Rep. 831 (1992), overruled in Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997).

2003 Amendment: Chapter 448 inserted (6) authorizing board to establish qualifications for licensure of medication aides, to define levels of licensure, and to limit the types of drugs that may be administered and the method of administration; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 deleted former third sentence that read: "A majority of the board constitutes a quorum at any meeting"; in (5)(b) near beginning after "The board" deleted "of nursing and the board of medical examiners, acting jointly"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 422 in (5)(a), in first sentence after "applicable to", inserted "recognition of" and in fourth sentence, after "certified", inserted "or in the process of being certified". Amendment effective April 13, 1995.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 584 throughout (5)(a) substituted references to advanced practice registered nurses for references to specialty areas of nursing and at end inserted "and clinical nurse specialists"; inserted (7) concerning adoption of rules for delegation of nursing tasks; inserted (8) concerning funding of additional staff; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 584, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates to the board of nursing the authority to adopt rules regarding the delegation of nursing tasks to unlicensed persons."

The legislature intends that the board of nursing adopt rules that would regulate the situations in which a licensed nurse may delegate tasks to an unlicensed person. This rulemaking authority is necessary in order to distinguish between situations in the nursing practice when it is appropriate to delegate tasks, on the one hand, and situations when delegation is inappropriate due to the nature of the task under consideration. It is not intended that the board of nursing regulate the unlicensed individuals themselves."

1991 Amendment: In second sentence of (5)(b) substituted "board" for "boards"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 1, 1991.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 430 inserted (6) relating to a program to assist licensed nurses with alcohol or drug problems. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Chapter 444 inserted (5)(b) authorizing prescriptive authority; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 444, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants authority to the board of nursing [and board of medical examiners, acting jointly] to adopt rules regarding prescriptive authority for certain nurse specialists. At a minimum, it is intended that the rules address:

- (1) criteria for granting prescriptive authority to an applicant for recognition as a nurse specialist who requests prescriptive authority as a condition of practice;
- (2) a procedure for granting prescriptive authority to nurse specialists already recognized by the board on July 1, 1989, upon request of the nurse specialist;
- (3) a process to notify the board of pharmacy when prescriptive authority is granted to a nurse specialist;
- (4) continuing education requirements for nurse specialists who are granted prescriptive authority, with respect to the use of medical therapeutics in the area of practice; and
- (5) appropriateness of the authority to prescribe specific drugs based on the nurse's area of specialty."

The bracketed language was added to the first sentence of the statement of intent by the annotator to reflect the amendment to the title of Ch. 444, L. 1989, and the substance of 37-8-202 that was not amended into the statement of intent. The bracketed language is unofficial but has been inserted to avoid misinterpretation by the code user.

1987 Amendment: In (5) substituted "The applicant must be certified by a specialty area certifying body" for "certified by the American nurses' association".

1981 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 427 (Ch. 248, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Board of Nursing in sections 7, 8, 10, 14, 16, and 19. Section 7 allows the board of nursing to approve certain programs related to registration and licensure and the section also permits the board to define the educational requirements and other qualifications applicable to specialty areas of nursing. It is the intent of the legislature that the rules adopted by the board pursuant to these delegations of rulemaking power be sufficient to ensure the competency of those practicing nursing in Montana. Program approval rules are intended to be as described in the following paragraph. Rules concerning specialty areas should address the overall nature of the required courses, the approval of such courses through American Nurses' Association certification or by other means, and the prohibition of the use of a title indicating a nursing specialty by a person not approved by the board as such a specialist. . . ."

Attorney General's Opinions

Board of Nursing — No Authority to Require College Degree for Licensure: The Legislature did not intend to require nursing license applicants to hold a specific college degree, as is evidenced by the fact that the Legislature did not set forth this requirement in statute as it did for other license qualifications statutes, and by the fact it permits nursing educational programs to be located in educational institutions which could not confer the minimum proposed degrees. Therefore, the Board of Nursing does not have authority to adopt a rule requiring a specific college degree as a qualification for licensure. 41 A.G. Op. 23 (1985).

Board of Nursing — Authority Over Nursing — Related Subjects: The Board of Nursing lacks authority to require approval of schools and courses which teach nursing-related subjects but which do not prepare students for licensure as registered or licensed practical nurses. 38 A.G. Op. 24 (1979).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The executive director must be:

- (a) a citizen of the United States;
- (b) a graduate of an approved school of nursing;
- (c) a holder of at least a master's degree with postgraduate courses in nursing;
- (d) a registered professional nurse with at least 5 years' experience in teaching or administration in an approved school of nursing"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 584 in (1), at beginning, substituted "The department shall hire an executive director" for "Any secretary hired by the department"; at end of (1)(c) deleted "for the board shall be"; inserted introductory clause of (2) concerning executive director; and made minor changes in style.

1981 Amendment: Deleted "shall first be approved by the board and" before "shall be" at the end of the introductory clause.

37-8-301. Nursing education programs — application for approval.

Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendment: Substituted "nursing education program in the state" for "school of professional or practical nursing" in the first sentence; substituted the language in first sentence following "submit evidence that" for former subsections (1) and (2) that required evidence that a nursing school "is prepared to carry out the prescribed basic professional nursing curriculum or the prescribed curriculum for practical nursing, as the case may be; and it is prepared to meet other standards established by this law and by the board".

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 427 (Ch. 248, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Board of Nursing in sections 7, 8, 10, 14, 16, and 19. . . . Section 8 grants the Board authority to adopt rules relating to the conduct of nursing education programs. Case Notes

District Court Reversal of Board of Nursing Decision Upheld: White was refused licensing by endorsement under 37-8-417 (now repealed) by the Board of Nursing (Board) because although he was licensed as a practical nurse by New York State, he had not graduated from a practical nursing school. Instead, as is permitted in New York, he had taken the licensed practical nurse examination after completion of a substantial portion of a registered nursing program. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's ruling that the Board must issue the license. The Board's interpretation of 37-8-415 is hypertechnical. Section 37-8-415 should be interpreted to mean the applicant's education has been approved and authorized by the state in which he has been licensed. Further, the Board's interpretation defeats the intention of the Legislature as expressed in 37-8-101(2). In re White, 220 M 36, 712 P2d 1344, 43 St. Rep. 151 (1986).

Board of Nursing — No Authority to Require College Degree for Licensure: The Legislature did not intend to require nursing license applicants to hold a specific college degree, as is evidenced by the fact that the Legislature did not set forth this requirement in statute as it did for other license qualifications statutes, and by the fact it permits nursing educational programs to be located in educational institutions which could not confer the minimum proposed degrees. Therefore, the Board of Nursing does not have authority to adopt a rule requiring a specific college degree as a qualification for licensure. 41 A.G. Op. 23 (1985).

37-8-406. License — professional nursing — examination.Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendments: Chapter 248 completely rewrote the section (see 1981 Session Law). Former section read: "Professional nursing — examination — fee. An applicant for a license to practice professional nursing is required to pass a written examination in subjects the board, acting under the professional nursing administration, determines. A written examination may be supplemented by an oral or practical examination. On successfully passing the examination, the department shall issue to the applicant a license to practice nursing as a registered professional nurse. The applicant shall pay a fee of $35 at the time the application is submitted, which shall be returned to the applicant if the application is withdrawn not later than 5 days prior to the date of examination or if the examination is not taken, subject to deduction by the department of $1 per subject of the examination which shall be retained by the department."

Chapter 345 substituted "shall pay a fee prescribed by the board" for "shall pay a fee of $35" near the beginning of the fourth sentence of the former section; and substituted "subject to deduction by the department of an amount prescribed by the board" for "subject to deduction by the department of $1" near the end of the last sentence of the former section.

Composite Section: The amendment by Ch. 345, L. 1981, substituting fee-setting authority in the board for statutory application fee amounts was not codified because Ch. 248, L. 1981, amended this section by deleting all reference to application fees.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 427 (Ch. 248, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Board of Nursing in sections 7, 8, 10, 14, 16, and 19. . . . Sections 10 and 14 grant rulemaking authority to the Board to establish passing scores for the professional and practical nurse examinations and establish requirements for rewriting the examination. It is the intent of the Legislature that the examination scores established be such as to insure the competency of applicants for licensure to protect the public health. Rules for rewriting the examination must provide assurance that the competency is as great as for applicants passing a first examination. . . ."

1995 Amendments — Coordination: Section 2, Ch. 422, amended this section, and sec. 3, Ch. 422, was a coordination instruction coordinating the amendment with House Bill No. 518 (Ch. 429, L. 1995). Because the coordination instruction overrides the amendment by sec. 2, the amendments made by sec. 3 are reported: in (1), in first sentence, substituted "this chapter" for "37-8-406 or 37-8-407", after "certificate in" substituted "a field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "nurse midwifery from the American college of nurse midwives", substituted "in the specified field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "midwifery", and at end of first sentence and in middle of second sentence substituted "in a field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "of nurse midwifery" and near middle of second sentence substituted "a board-approved national certifying body appropriate to the specific field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "the American college of nurse midwives"; in (2), after "practice", substituted "in a specific field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "nurse midwifery for up to 4 months" and at end deleted "has taken the American college of nurse midwives"; inserted (2)(a) concerning intent to apply for approval; in (2)(b), at beginning, inserted "has completed the advanced practice registered nursing education required in order for the person to apply to take the first" and at end substituted "available from a board-approved national certifying body appropriate to the specific field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "pending receipt of official notification of the results of the examination"; inserted (3) concerning failure of first examination; inserted (4) concerning adoption of rules for each field of advanced practice; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 13, 1995.

Chapter 429 in (1) substituted "licensed under this chapter" for "licensed under 37-8-406 or 37-8-407"; deleted (2) that read: "(2) The board may give temporary approval to practice nurse-midwifery for up to 4 months to a person who has taken the American college of nurse-midwives national certification examination, pending receipt of official notification of the results of the examination"; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 422, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants rulemaking authority to the board of nursing to give temporary approval and to establish requirements for temporary approval to practice in a field of advanced practice registered nursing. The legislature finds that it is in the public interest to give temporary approval to practice to a person who has completed the advanced practice registered nursing education required in order for the person to apply to take a national certification examination. In order to protect the public, the board of nursing is authorized to make rules regarding the procedures for obtaining temporary approval to practice in each field of advanced practice registered nursing and for the supervision of the nurse. Because the practices of nurse practitioners, nurse-midwives, nurse anesthetists, and clinical nurse specialists are unique, the board may adopt separate requirements for each specialty as necessary and shall consult with practitioners in each field in the development of the rules."

Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendment: Substituted "board" for "department" in the first sentence of the section; substituted language in (2) referring to practical nursing education program for "has successfully completed the prescribed curriculum in an approved school of practical nursing and holds a diploma or certificate therefrom"; deleted "acting under the practical nursing administration" after "board" in (3); added "in its rules" at the end of (3).

Case Notes

District Court Reversal of Board of Nursing Decision Upheld: White was refused licensing by endorsement under 37-8-417 (now repealed) by the Board of Nursing (Board) because although he was licensed as a practical nurse by New York State, he had not graduated from a practical nursing school. Instead, as is permitted in New York, he had taken the licensed practical nurse examination after completion of a substantial portion of a registered nursing program. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's ruling that the Board must issue the license. The Board's interpretation of this section is hypertechnical. This section should be interpreted to mean the applicant's education has been approved and authorized by the state in which he has been licensed. Further, the Board's interpretation defeats the intention of the Legislature as expressed in 37-8-101(2). In re White, 220 M 36, 712 P2d 1344, 43 St. Rep. 151 (1986).

Case Notes

Jurisdiction Over Lapsed License: In 1987, Gilpin was convicted on two counts of sexual assault. In 1990, Gilpin's nursing license lapsed for failure to renew. In 1990, the Board of Nursing sought to revoke Gilpin's nursing license. The parties submitted an agreed statement of facts to a hearing examiner who submitted findings, conclusions, and a recommendation to the Board. The Board heard Gilpin's objections orally and in writing, adopted the hearing examiner's recommendations, and revoked the license. Gilpin then appealed to the District Court, which heard the parties' arguments and issued an order affirming the revocation of the license. The Supreme Court held that because the Board has power to reinstate a nursing license 3 years after it lapses, the Board retains jurisdiction over a license 3 years after it lapses. Thus, the Board did not lose jurisdiction over Gilpin's license and had jurisdiction to revoke the license. The Supreme Court also held that the stipulation of facts was a sufficient factual basis to revoke the license and that Gilpin was not entitled to any hearings in addition to those that he was given. *Gilpin v. 1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 464, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill to clarify the extension of existing authority to make rules on the subject of the provisions of this act."

It is the intent of this legislature that the board of nursing home administrators adopt rules governing the qualifications for licensure as a nursing home administrator, which qualifications are reasonably related to the performance of the functions normally carried out by those serving as nursing home administrators.

Any course of instruction, training, or education prescribed by the board should be related to the performance of the functions normally carried out by those employed as nursing home administrators and the protection of patients cared for in nursing homes.

It is also the intent of the legislature that the board not require a baccalaureate degree unless the federal government mandates such a degree for purposes of the state receiving federal financial participation for medicare.

The intent of the legislature is not to exclude qualified individuals because they do not meet an arbitrary standard that does not bear a strong relationship to expected job performance, but to exclude only those who are truly unqualified in the judgment of the board. The legislature intends that the written examination provided for in subsection (1)(c) of [the act] [37-9-301(1)(c)] provides additional protection to the public in screening out unqualified candidates."

Grandfather Clause — Education Requirements Waived for License Renewals: Section 2, Ch. 464, L. 1989, provided: "A person licensed as a nursing home administrator on [the effective date of this act] does not have to present evidence satisfactory to the board of sufficient education as required by 37-9-301(1)(b)(ii) in order to renew his license as a nursing home administrator." Occupational Therapist Not Authorized to Use Iontophoresis: Iontophoresis is a process that uses electricity to administer topical medication. The statutes governing the practice of physical therapy define topical medication and iontophoresis and authorize its use by physical therapists, but the statutes governing the practice of occupational therapy do not contain those definitions or authorize the use of topical medications, including medications administered through iontophoresis, by occupational therapists. If the Legislature had intended to authorize occupational therapists to use iontophoresis, it would have made an authorization corollary to the statutes governing physical therapists, but it did not. Therefore, occupational therapists are not authorized by Montana law to perform iontophoresis. 49 A.G. Op. 1 (2001).

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 237, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 3] [37-11-107] requires the board of physical therapy examiners to adopt rules to govern the process of application of topical medications by licensed physical therapists. It is intended that the rules:

2004 Annotations to the MCA

- (1) be adopted after consultation with the board of medical examiners and the board of pharmacy;
- (2) be in the form of written protocols that include:
 - (a) a description of the topical medication;
 - (b) a description of its actions, indications, and contraindications; and
 - (c) the proper procedure and technique for the application and administration of the medication; and
- (3) apply only to topical medications for which a prescription is required under state or federal law."

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 in (2)(d) at end inserted "subject to the provisions of 37-1-138"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 481 in (2)(a), after "licenses", deleted "three times a year"; and in (2)(c), after "written", inserted "or computerized".

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 481, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking to the identified licensing boards of the department of commerce [now department of labor and industry] to adopt rules to implement the provisions of 37-11-201 and 37-11-303, which allow on-demand computerized testing for physical therapist and physical therapist assistant applicants; 37-26-201 and 37-26-301, which allow the creation of a formulary by an alternative health care formulary committee to identify the substances that may be prescribed by a licensed naturopathic physician; the provisions that reconcile Title 37, chapter 54, with the federal Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 and the related requirements of financial institution regulatory agencies; and [sections 40 and 41] [50-76-111 and 50-76-112], 50-76-103, and 50-76-104, which govern the licensure of crane and hoist operators.

A statement of intent is also required for this bill because it directs the board of barbers to adopt rules pertaining to instructor and license applicants' qualifications, examination, and registration, to adopt rules pertaining to barber schools' curriculum and qualifications, to adopt rules pertaining to supervision of barber students, and to adopt rules pertaining to the inspection and conduct of persons and barbershops subject to the provisions of Title 37, chapter 30."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 253 inserted (2)(d) concerning rules for continuing education; in (3), in second sentence in three places, inserted references to assistants; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In (2)(a) increased from two to three the number of times a year the examination must be offered; and made minor change in style. Amendment effective March 20, 1991.

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent adopted with HB 571 (Ch. 491, L. 1979) provided: "House Bill 571 creates a Board of Physical Therapists. The board would be allowed rulemaking authority.

It is the intent of the legislature that any rules adopted by the board be limited to:

1. establishing minimum state requirements and educational standards for those persons practicing physical therapy in Montana;

2. assuring physicians practicing in any branch of medicine, hospitals, and employing agencies that the persons practicing physical therapy are qualified; and

3. protecting persons needing physical therapy from fraudulent physical therapists by establishing licensing requirements which ensure that only competent physical therapists practice in Montana."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 253 deleted (3) that read: "(3) The board of medical examiners shall transfer funds in the state special revenue account collected after January 1, 1979, which were derived from the examination and licensure or relicensure of physical therapists in this state to the state special revenue account designated as the "physical therapist account"; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: Substituted references to state special revenue account for references to earmarked revenue account.

1981 Amendment: In (1) after "shall" substituted language providing that Board members receive compensation and travel expenses as provided in 37-1-133 for "be reimbursed for travel expenses as provided for in 2-18-501 through 2-18-503 for each day actually engaged in the duties of his office".

Board Compensation and Travel Expenses — Preamble: The preamble of SB 463 (Ch. 474, L. 1981), which provided for uniform compensation and travel expenses for Board members, is located in the compiler's comments under 37-1-133.

Part 3 Licensing

37-11-301. License required for physical therapist and assistant — unauthorized representation as licensed therapist.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 253 inserted (1) requiring licensure as condition of practice; inserted (3) requiring licensure for assisting physical therapist; and made minor changes in style.

Saving Clause: Section 19, Ch. 491, L. 1979, provided: "A license to practice physical therapy issued prior to the effective date of this act remains in effect for the period of its validity but upon expiration may be renewed only in accordance with this act."

37-11-303. Qualifications of applicants for license.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 481 in (1)(c) and (2)(c), after "written", inserted "or computerized".

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 481, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking to the identified licensing boards of the department of commerce [now department of labor and industry] to adopt rules to implement the provisions of 37-11-201 and 37-11-303, which allow on-demand computerized testing for physical therapist and physical therapist assistant applicants; 37-26-201 and 37-26-301, which allow the creation of a formulary by an alternative health care formulary committee to identify the substances that may be prescribed by a licensed naturopathic physician; the provisions that reconcile Title 37, chapter 54, with the federal Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 and the related requirements of financial institution regulatory agencies; and [sections 40 and 41] [50-76-111 and 50-76-112], 50-76-103, and 50-76-104, which govern the licensure of crane and hoist operators.

A statement of intent is also required for this bill because it directs the board of barbers to adopt rules pertaining to instructor and license applicants' qualifications, examination, and registration, to adopt rules pertaining to barber schools' curriculum and qualifications, to adopt rules pertaining to supervision of barber students, and to adopt rules pertaining to the inspection and conduct of persons and barbershops subject to the provisions of Title 37, chapter 30."

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 253 inserted (2) establishing qualifications for physical therapist assistant; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 429 at beginning of (1)(c) deleted “either”; deleted (3)(b) that read: “(b) be entitled to a license without examination under 37-11-307”; and made minor changes in style.

The Code Commissioner has reflected the reoutlining contained in Ch. 253.

Severability: Section 131, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: “[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section].” Effective October 1, 1995.

1981 Amendment: In (3)(a) substituted language referring to written and oral examination requirements for “pass to the satisfaction of the board an examination to determine his fitness for practice as a physical therapist”.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

Purported Amendment: Section 18, Ch. 492, L. 1997, purported to amend this section. However, only the section caption was changed. Pursuant to 1-11-101, section captions are not part of the law, so no substantive change occurred.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 253 near beginning of first sentence, after "therapist", inserted "and a licensed physical therapist assistant"; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 429 near beginning, after "shall", substituted "on or before the date set by department rule" for "during January"; in second sentence, after "before", substituted "the renewal date" for "April every year"; and made minor changes in style.

Saving Clause: Section 132, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Rules for Temporary License — Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 701 (Ch. 456, L. 1981) provided: “A statement of intent is required for this bill because rulemaking authority for the issuance of a temporary license is given in Section 6 [37-11-309]. The Board may adopt necessary and reasonable rules to govern the procedure for the application for and the issuance of a temporary license. The license shall be issued for a period not to exceed 1 year as provided in Section 2(1) [37-11-309(1)] or until the board makes a final determination on the applicant’s examination scores as provided in Section 2(2) [37-11-309(2)].

First adopted by the Senate Public Health, Welfare, and Safety Committee on the 25th day of March 1981.”

The reference to section 6 was rendered erroneous when the bill was amended during the legislative process and bill section numbers were changed. The reference should be to section 2, which corresponds to 37-11-309.

37-12-301. Unlawful to practice without license.Case Notes

Failure of Licensing Board to Overcome Presumption That License Renewal Timely Mailed and Received: Dr. Baldwin's chiropractor license renewal was due September 1, and the renewal packet was mailed to the Board of Chiropractors on August 17, but the Board never received it. After seeing two patients on September 2, the doctor called the Board to inquire whether the license had been reissued. The doctor was instructed to stop seeing patients because the license had not been renewed. The doctor was subsequently found to have engaged in unprofessional conduct for practicing without a license and placed on probation for 1 year, and a private letter of reprimand was placed in the doctor's license file. The doctor appealed the decision, but the District Court denied the request to reverse the decision. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The Board did not dispute that the packet was mailed on August 17, but simply asserted that the packet was not received without offering any additional evidence of nonreceipt. Absent additional evidence, the Board failed to overcome the rebuttable presumption in 26-1-602(24) that a letter duly directed and mailed was received in the regular course of the mail. The District Court erred in affirming the Board's decision that the doctor failed to renew the license on time and practiced without a license. Baldwin v. Bd. of Chiropractors, 2003 MT 306, 318 M 188, 79 P3d 810 (2003).

State of Mind Required for Conviction: Although no particular mental state is identified in this section, 45-2-103 clearly requires the practice of chiropractic be done knowingly or purposely to constitute an offense. St. v. Blinzler, 183 M 300, 599 P2d 349, 36 St. Rep. 1580 (1979).

Statute Not Unconstitutionally Vague: The definition of practice of chiropractic in 37-12-101 is not unconstitutionally vague in violation of the Due Process Clause. The term "specific adjustment or manipulation" is a scientific term having a readily ascertainable definition within the chiropractic community and provides a standard with meaningful differentiation between culpable and innocent conduct. Sufficiency of Evidence to Prove Practice of Chiropractic: Evidence that defendant had placed his knee on a patient's rib and then pulled her arms back and had placed another patient lying on his stomach and then pushed down on his back, combined with the testimony of two licensed chiropractors who identified those procedures as specific adjustments, provided substantial evidence from which the jury could find the defendant guilty of practicing chiropractic without a license. St. v. Blinzler, 183 M 300, 599 P2d 349, 36 St. Rep. 1580 (1979).

Case Notes

Admission to Examination: The Board of Chiropractors (formerly Board of Chiropractic Examiners) was compelled to allow graduates of certain chiropractic school to take examination for license where graduates of the school had previously been admitted to practice and where Board refused to inspect school. State ex rel. Westercamp v. St. Bd. of Chiropractic Examiners, 137 M 451, 352 P2d 995 (1960).

Attorney General's Opinions

Applicants for Licensure — Training Requirements: Applicants for licensure by examination to the practice of chiropractic in this state must have the academic and professional training as established by this section. 29 A.G. Op. 12 (1961).

Licensure by Reciprocity — Educational Standards: Applicants for licensure by reciprocity need not have the educational requirements established by this section if they have practiced in and have been licensed by a state that has educational admission standards equal to this state's standards. 29 A.G. Op. 12 (1961). (Opinion issued prior to repeal of reciprocity statute.)

37-12-304. Examinations — subjects.Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 224 substituted language in (1) requiring license applicants to have passed board-prescribed examination for former (1) that read: "(1) Examinations for a license to practice chiropractic must be made by the department, subject to 37-1-101, according to the method considered by the board to be the most practicable and expeditious to test the applicant's qualifications. The application must be designated by a number instead of the applicant's name so that the identity will not be discovered or disclosed until after the examination papers are graded"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) Examinations must be administered on subjects taught in chiropractic colleges, on the provisions of this chapter, and on other provisions of the Montana Code Annotated pertaining to the practice of chiropractic. A license must be granted to applicants who correctly answer 75% of all questions asked, including x-ray questions. If an applicant fails to answer correctly 60% of the questions on any branch of the examination, the applicant is not entitled to a license"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 275 in (2), near beginning, substituted "administered" for "made in writing" and after "colleges" substituted "on the provisions of this chapter, and on other provisions of the Montana Code Annotated pertaining to the practice of chiropractic" for "including the use of x-ray equipment and radiographs. Additional subjects may be prescribed by the board to meet new conditions"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 7, 1993.

1983 Amendment: In (2), in first sentence changed the examination subjects from "anatomy, physiology, symptomatology, diagnosis, chiropractic orthopedy, principles of chiropractic and adjusting, sanitation and hygiene, urinalysis, gynecology, and palpation" to "subjects taught in chiropractic colleges, including the use of x-ray equipment and radiographs" and at end of second sentence inserted "including x-ray questions"; and in (3) changed the examination requirement, which formerly provided that applicant "satisfactorily passes a clinical proficiency examination before the department, subject to 37-1-101".

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 inserted introductory clause concerning 37-1-138; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

Purported Amendment: Section 19, Ch. 492, L. 1997, purported to amend this section. However, only the section caption was changed. Pursuant to 1-11-101, section captions are not part of the law, so no substantive change occurred.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in first sentence substituted "expires on the date set by department rule" for "expires on September 1 of each year" and at end, after "licensee", substituted "qualifies for renewal" for "in the year preceding the application for renewal, attended and successfully completed a postgraduate educational program for chiropractors approved by the board"; in second sentence, after "fee", substituted "on or before the renewal date" for "prior to October 1 of each year"; deleted (2) and (3) that read: "(2) The board shall by rule set standards for inactive status. It shall charge an annual fee for a license placed on inactive status."

(3) An inactive license may be reinstated to active status upon payment of a fee and completion of the continuing education requirements set by the board"; and made minor changes in style.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (2) directing Board to regulate inactive status; and inserted (3) providing conditions for reinstatement from inactive to active status.

1983 Amendment: Inserted "approved by the board" after "educational program for chiropractors"; inserted last sentence requiring applicants who do not pay the renewal fee prior to October 1 to pay a late fee.

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 344, L. 1983, provided: "House Bill 513 requires a statement of intent because section 1 of the bill provides that the Board of Chiropractors adopt rules with respect to approval of postgraduate educational programs, and to establishing the amount of late fee renewal charges."

It is the intent of the Legislature that the Board should require proof and approval of continuing education classes for chiropractors who have allowed their licenses to lapse and thereafter seek renewal, and that a fee should be charged for such late renewal."

1981 Amendments: Chapter 155 deleted the course description following "postgraduate educational program for chiropractors" and deleted the last sentence pertaining to renewal of licenses without attending the continuing education programs.

Chapter 345 deleted "of not more than $50," after "on payment of a renewal fee" in the

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 at beginning of (1) substituted "department" for "board"; in (2), in first sentence after "may", inserted "upon order of the board" and deleted third and fourth sentences that read: "If the board has reasonable cause to believe that this probability exists, the department shall mail to the person at his last address of record with the department, a specification of the charges against him, together with a written notice of the time and place of the hearing on such charges, advising him that he may be present in person and with counsel if he so desires to offer evidence and be heard in his defense. The time fixed for hearing may not be less than 30 days from the date of mailing the notice"; deleted (3) through (7) that read: "(3) Any person, including a member of the board, may file a sworn complaint with the department against a licensed chiropractor charging him with any of the offenses or conditions set forth in 37-12-321 or subsection (1) of this section, which complaint shall set forth a specification of the charges. When the complaint has been filed, the board may make an investigation as provided by this section or may proceed to hearing. The department shall mail a copy of the complaint to the person charged, together with notice of hearing as provided in subsection (2) of this section.

(4) After the hearing, the board shall adopt a resolution finding that the offenses charged have or have not been committed or that the conditions charged do or do not exist. If the finding is in the negative, the board shall dismiss the charges. If the finding is in the affirmative, the board shall:

- (a) revoke the license;
 - (b) suspend the licensee's right to practice for a period not to exceed 1 year;
 - (c) suspend its judgment of revocation on terms and conditions determined by the board;
 - (d) place the licensee on probation;
 - (e) fine the licensee in an amount not to exceed $500 for each incident; or
 - (f) take any other disciplinary action which the board in its discretion considers proper.
- (5) In cases of revocation, suspension, or probation, the department shall record the facts of the case and all actions of the board in relation thereto.

(6) On the expiration of a term of suspension, the licensee shall be reinstated by the board if he furnishes evidence, satisfactory to the board, that he is then of good moral character and conduct or restored to good health and that he has not practiced chiropractic during the term of suspension. If the evidence fails to establish such facts to the satisfaction of the board, the board shall proceed to hearing on revocation with notice as provided in subsection (2) of this section.

(7) Following a final determination resulting in any disciplinary action taken by the board under subsection (4), the board may recover from the disciplined party all reasonable costs of any proceeding, not to exceed $1,000, incurred for the purpose of the disciplinary action. Fines and costs recovered must be deposited in the state special revenue fund for the use of the board, subject to 37-1-101(6); and made minor changes in style.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 224 at beginning inserted exception clause and in middle of third sentence substituted "received at the board's office" for "in the hands of the secretary of the board"; deleted former (2) through (5) that read: "(2) Immediately following the renewal date, the secretary shall notify all licensees from whom requests for renewal, accompanied by the renewal fee, have not been received that their licenses have expired and that they will be canceled and revoked upon the records of the board unless a request for renewal and reinstatement, accompanied by the renewal fee and an additional fee prescribed by the board, is in the hands of the secretary within 30 days of the renewal date.

(3) If the licensee fails to renew within 30 days following the renewal date, the secretary of the board shall cancel and revoke upon the board's records all licenses that have not been renewed or reinstated as provided by this chapter and shall notify the licensees whose licenses are revoked of the action.

(4) A licensee who allows the license to lapse by failing to renew or reinstate the license as provided in this section may subsequently reinstate the license upon good cause shown to the satisfaction of the board and upon payment of all renewal fees then accrued plus an additional fee prescribed by the board for each renewal period following the cancelling of the license.

(5) A person actively engaged in the military service of the United States and licensed to practice acupuncture as provided in this part is not required to pay the renewal fee or make application for renewal until the renewal date of the calendar period in which the person returns from military service to civilian or inactive status"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Chapter 271 in (3) at beginning inserted "Subject to subsection (5)"; in (5) at end inserted "except as may be otherwise provided by the board pursuant to 37-1-138" (amendments to (3) and (5) rendered void by Ch. 224 amendments); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1), in first sentence after "must be renewed", deleted "annually"; in (4), after "payment of all", deleted "annual" and near end, after "board for each", substituted "renewal period" for "year"; in (5), before "renewal fee", deleted "annual" and after "date of the calendar" substituted "period" for "year"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

2003 Amendment: Chapter 307 in (3) in fourth sentence at beginning inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1989 Amendment: In (1)(a)(i) deleted "chiropody".

1985 Amendments: Chapter 166 in (1) and (2) before "x-ray" substituted "perform" for "apply" and after "x-ray" substituted "procedures on" for "radiation to"; in (1) following "licensed", inserted "or granted a limited permit"; inserted (1)(a)(iii) exempting from licensure requirements a person who performs only darkroom procedures under supervision of a licensed radiologic technologist or radiologist or who can show evidence of formal training in darkroom procedures; at end of (2) substituted "procedures" for "examinations or treatments"; in last sentence of (3), after "technologist", substituted "limited permit technician" for "permitholder" and after "37-14-306", inserted "or an individual who is not licensed or authorized under another licensing act".

Chapter 548 in (1)(a)(ii), after "denturistry", inserted proviso constituting remainder of subsection.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 166, L. 1985, provided: "This bill is a response to Volume 40 Opinions of the Attorney General No. 50. A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the board of radiologic technologists.

It is the intent of the legislature that the board be required by section 3 of this bill [amending 37-14-301] to adopt rules establishing the standards of formal classroom training in darkroom procedures for those individuals who, by reason of their training and the fact that they perform only darkroom procedures, are exempt from licensure.

It is the intent of the legislature that the board be required by section 4 of this bill [amending 37-14-306] to adopt rules:

- (1) setting standards of formal classroom training for permit holders;
- (2) defining specific x-ray procedures the permit holders will be allowed to perform;
- (3) regarding the renewal of permits;
- (4) establishing a written and oral portion of the examination and defining the circumstances under which those portions will be required;
- (5) outlining additional eligibility requirements when an applicant fails an examination; and
- (6) defining adequate evidence of regional hardship, emergency conditions, and capability to perform high-quality x-ray procedures.

It is the intent of the legislature that section 6 of this bill [amending 37-14-310] require that the department of commerce [now department of labor and industry] establish renewal dates for licenses.

Further, it is the intent of the legislature that section 7 of this bill [amending 37-14-321, now repealed] delegate authority to the board to adopt rules defining unethical conduct for the purpose of establishing disciplinary standards for limited permit technicians."

1984 Initiative Amendment: In (1)(a)(ii) after "practice of dentistry", inserted "or denturistry".

1981 Amendment: Substituted "specific direction" for "direct supervision" before "of a person licensed" in (1)(a)(i); added subsection (3) regulating injection of contrast media and radioactive isotopes.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1), after "Licenses expire", deleted "annually"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1985 Amendment: In (1) after "expire", inserted "annually" and at end after "department", deleted "in the first even-numbered year following the year of their issuance and on every even-numbered year thereafter".

Applicability: Section 8, Ch. 166, L. 1985, provided: "Two-year licenses issued by the department under 37-14-310 [prior to 1985 amendment] are valid until the expiration date established by the department. 1989 Amendment: Throughout section changed "speech" to "speech-language"; inserted (8) regarding nonexemption from provisions relating to hearing aid dispensers; and made minor changes in phraseology.

Attorney General's Opinions

Audiologist as Agent for Hearing Aid Dispenser: There is nothing in the law to prohibit a licensed audiologist from acting as an "agent" for a hearing aid dispenser if he chooses to do so. Since an audiologist who is an employee of a charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions is entitled to fit and dispense hearing aids, either the audiologist or the hearing aid dispenser may complete the final fitting and delivery. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment to 37-16-103.)

Selection of Best Hearing Aid for Client: No person may select a particular hearing aid for any other person and force the hearing aid dispenser from whom the hearing aid is purchased to abide by that decision. When a licensed hearing aid dispenser sells a hearing aid he is entitled, if not obligated, to use his training and judgment to select the best hearing aid for that client. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment to 37-16-103.)

When Hearing Aid Dispenser's License Not Required: A licensed audiologist who is an employee of a charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions may fit a hearing aid, whether permanently or for a trial period, without a dispenser's license. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment to 37-16-103.)

Attorney General's Opinions

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 483 in definition of department substituted reference to department of labor and industry for reference to department of commerce and substituted "part 17" for "part 18". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1985 Amendment: In (5) at beginning, after "Practice of", inserted "selling", and near middle after "sale", inserted "dispensing, or fitting".

1981 Amendments: Chapter 274 substituted "department of commerce" for "department of professional and occupational licensing" in (2); changed internal references to the department and the board.

Chapter 444 substituted "'License' means a regular or trainee license" for "'License' means a regular or temporary license" in (3); and inserted "and the subsequent selection of a proper ear mold" after "the making of an impression of the ear" near the end of (5).

37-16-103. Exemptions.Compiler's Comments

1985 Amendment: In (2) after "public agency", deleted "or by a charitable or nonprofit organization which is primarily supported by voluntary contributions, unless they sell hearing aids".

Attorney General's Opinions

Audiologist as Agent for Hearing Aid Dispenser: There is nothing in the law to prohibit a licensed audiologist from acting as an "agent" for a hearing aid dispenser if he chooses to do so. Since an audiologist who is an employee of a charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions is entitled to fit and dispense hearing aids, either the audiologist or the hearing aid dispenser may complete the final fitting and delivery. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment.)

When Hearing Aid Dispenser's License Not Required: A licensed audiologist who is an employee of a charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions may fit a hearing aid, whether permanently or for a trial period, without a dispenser's license. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment.)

When Audiologist May Fit Hearing Aids: A licensed audiologist who is an employee of a charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions may make an impression of the ear (which is expressly part of the practice of fitting and dispensing hearing aids) without being licensed as a hearing aid dispenser. This exemption may be enjoyed only if the hearing aids are not sold. A "sale" includes a sale at a profit, at cost, or even at a loss. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment.)

Selling Hearing Aids — License Required: A charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions or any audiologist or other employee of the organization may dispense free hearing aids without a license, but neither the organization nor its employees may sell hearing aids without a license, regardless of the dispensing program. 37 A.G. Op. 60 (1977). (See 1985 amendment.)

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 481 in (6), after "practice", inserted "or engage in the business of"; in (8), after "person", deleted "or corporation"; inserted (10) requiring Board to adopt minimum requirements for form of bills of sale and receipts; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 49, Ch. 481, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

1995 Amendment — Coordination: Chapter 72 in (2), before "receive", inserted "initiate or".

Section 130, Ch. 429, L. 1995, a coordination section, rendered the amendments made to this section by Ch. 429, L. 1995, void.

Code Commissioner Correction: In (9), in two places, the Code Commissioner deleted references to 37-16-414 pursuant to the authority contained in sec. 73, Ch. 18, L. 1995.

Severability: Section 131, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Codification: Enacted (9) requiring adoption of consistent rules regarding related devices.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 155, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 11] [37-16-202(9)] grants the board of hearing aid dispensers authority to adopt rules consistent with the provisions of [sections 1 through 10] [37-16-301, 37-16-303, 37-16-304, 37-16-402, 37-16-403, 37-16-405, 37-16-407, 37-16-408, 37-16-411, and 37-16-414, now repealed]."

It is the intent of the legislature that rules adopted by the board include rules defining "related devices" and other rules necessary to implement [sections 1 through 10] [37-16-301, 37-16-303, 37-16-304, 37-16-402, 37-16-403, 37-16-405, 37-16-407, 37-16-408, 37-16-411, and 37-16-414, now repealed].

It is specifically intended that, in adopting rules, the board define "related devices" to mean those parts, attachments, or accessories, as provided in 37-16-102, that are sold for use with a hearing aid by a licensed hearing aid dispenser. "Related devices" should include assistive listening devices and cordless infrared systems if sold by a hearing aid dispenser. However, the term "related device" should not include general merchandise items, such as hearing aid cleaners, cords, or batteries, that are commonly available at most drugstores, discount stores, or by mail order."

1985 Amendment: In (8) substituted "sale, dispensing, or fitting" for "sale and fitting".

1981 Amendment: Added "and supervise and administer the examination" at the end of subsection (4).

Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 481 in (1), after "shall", inserted "upon the sale of a hearing aid or related device" and after "deliver to" substituted "the customer" for "each person supplied with a hearing aid or related device, by him or at his order or direction"; inserted (1)(f) requiring seller to include in bill of sale statement informing customer of right to contact state Board with questions regarding hearing aids and providing Board telephone number and address; substituted language in (2)(a) and (2)(b) prohibiting sale of hearing aid without physician's statement regarding medical evaluation of hearing loss and waiver of physician's statement for person 18 years of age or older for former (2)(a) and (2)(b) that read: "Any person practicing the selling, dispensing, or fitting of hearing aids and related devices shall, if dealing with a person under 19 years of age, ascertain if the person has been examined by an otolaryngologist within 90 days prior to the fitting and shall obtain the otolaryngologist's recommendations. If the person has not been examined, the licensed hearing aid dispenser shall recommend to the parent or guardian or to the person if emancipated that he have a medical examination. The licensed hearing aid dispenser shall issue a separate receipt, signed by the purchaser, indicating that the hearing aid dispenser made this recommendation."

(b) Any person practicing the selling, dispensing, or fitting of hearing aids and related devices shall, if the aid or device is to be purchased with state funds, ascertain if the person has been examined by a licensed physician within 90 days prior to the fitting and shall obtain the licensed physician's recommendations. If the person has not been examined, the licensed hearing aid dispenser shall recommend to the person being fitted that he have a medical examination. The licensed hearing aid dispenser shall issue a separate receipt, signed by the purchaser, indicating that the hearing aid dispenser made this recommendation"; deleted (3) through (5) that read: "(3) A separate receipt issued under subsection (2) must bear, in no smaller type than the largest used in the body portion, the following: 'Any examination(s) or representation(s) made by a licensed hearing aid dispenser in connection with the dispensing, fitting, and selling of this hearing aid(s) or device is not an examination, diagnosis, or prescription by a person licensed to practice medicine in this state and, therefore, must not be regarded as medical opinion or advice.'"

(4) The board may establish and adopt minimum requirements for the form of bills of sale and receipts.

(5) All purchase agreements or bills of sale must prominently display the following statement: "If you have any questions regarding your consumer rights with respect to hearing aids and related devices, please contact the Department of Commerce — Board of Hearing Aid Dispensers"; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 49, Ch. 481, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

1991 Amendment: Throughout section inserted reference to related devices; substituted (1)(c) requiring inclusion of warranty or guaranty and the right to cancel and those terms in the bill of sale for former language relating to terms of guaranty; inserted (1)(e) requiring a provision regarding availability of maintenance in the bill of sale; substituted second and third sentences of (2)(a) regarding recommendation for a medical examination for a person under 19 years of age for former second sentence that read: "If such not be the case, a recommendation to do so must be made to the purchaser and this fact be noted on the receipt"; substituted second and third sentences of (2)(b) regarding recommendation for a medical examination for a person being fitted with a device being purchased with state funds for former second sentence that read: "If such not be the case, a recommendation to do so must be made to the purchaser and this fact be noted on the receipt"; inserted (4) allowing the Board to adopt minimum form requirements; inserted (5) requiring display of a consumer rights statement; and made minor changes in style.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 481 in (2), after "examination", substituted "with a passing score as determined by board rule" for "with a score of at least 70%"; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 49, Ch. 481, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 72 in (2) and (3) substituted "180-day" for "12-month"; near beginning of (2)(b), after "work", deleted "for the first 90 days"; deleted (2)(c) that read: "(c) work for the balance of the training period during which he may engage in all activities allowed a licensed hearing aid dispenser, under the general supervision of a licensed hearing aid dispenser"; in second sentence of (4) substituted "report every 90 days" for "quarterly report"; in (5)(a), in first sentence, substituted "a period of 180 days, during which the provisions of subsection (2)(b) apply" for "a period ending 30 days after the next examination" and in second sentence substituted "one renewal" for "two renewals"; in (6), after "chapter 15", inserted "or a person practicing pursuant to 37-15-305" (now repealed) and substituted "180-day" for "12-month"; in (8) substituted "at the same location" for "in the same place of business"; deleted (8)(b) defining general supervision; and made minor changes in style.

Code Commissioner Correction: In (6), the Code Commissioner substituted 37-1-305 for 37-15-305 pursuant to the authority contained in sec. 73, Ch. 18, L. 1995.

1991 Amendment: In (2)(a), after "board", inserted "before he may be issued a hearing aid dispenser's license"; near beginning of (2)(b) substituted "the first 90 days under the direct supervision of the sponsoring licensed hearing aid dispenser during which time" for "a period of 60 days during which"; in first and second sentences inserted reference to related devices, and in second sentence, after "made by", inserted "the trainee and"; in (2)(c), before "supervision", inserted "the general"; in (4), in first sentence before "licensed", inserted "qualified", after "aid" substituted "dispenser" for "dealer", and at beginning of second sentence substituted "licensed hearing aid dispenser" for "licensee"; inserted (7) specifying responsibility for conduct of a trainee; inserted (8) defining direct supervision and general supervision; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (1) near middle, before "examination", inserted "practical"; in introductory clause of (2) near middle, after "functions of the board", inserted "and verification that the applicant has passed the written portion of the examination with a score of at least 70%" and increased training period from 6 months to 12 months; in (2)(a) substituted language requiring passage of practical exam for "work for a period of 30 days under the direct control of a hearing aid dispenser during which the trainee may not in any way fit a hearing aid or test a customer"; in (2)(b) at beginning deleted "after the completion of the period provided for in subsection (2)(a)"; in (3) increased training period from 6 months to 12 months; inserted (4) requiring supervision of trainee by licensee; deleted former (4) and (5) that read: "(4) No trainee license may be issued by the board unless the applicant shows to the satisfaction of the board that he is or will be supervised and trained by a person who holds a valid license issued under this chapter.

(5) If a person who holds a trainee license does not take the next examination given after the completion of his training period, the trainee license may not be renewed except for a good cause shown to the satisfaction of the board"; in (5), near beginning after "pass the" substituted "practical examination given within his training period" for "next examination given after the completion of his training period", and near middle after "after the" substituted "next examination" for "results of the next examination given after the dates of renewal are announced"; in (6) near end, after "exempt from the", substituted "12-month training period but is required to pass the examinations prescribed in this chapter" for "trainee license and examination requirements of this chapter".

1981 Amendments: Chapter 345 substituted "accompanied by a fee prescribed by the board" for "accompanied by a fee of $25" in the middle of (2); and substituted "The fee for renewal shall be prescribed by the board" for "The fee for renewal is $30" at the end of (6) (now (5)).

Chapter 444 substituted "trainee license" for "temporary license" wherever it appeared; substituted "board" for "department" wherever it appeared; substituted "a fee fixed by the board and commensurate with the cost of administering the license and related functions of the board" for "a fee of $25" in the middle of (2); substituted the restrictions on the holder of a trainee license in (2) for "a temporary license which entitles the applicant to practice the fitting and dispensing of hearing aids for a period ending 30 days after the conclusion of the next examination after the date of issue"; inserted (3) establishing training period term; substituted "after the completion of his training period" for "after the date of issue" in the middle of (5) and near the beginning of (6); substituted the last sentence of (6) providing that the renewal fee must be set by the Board commensurate with costs for "The fee of renewal is $30"; and added subsection (7) exempting a person licensed as an audiologist under Title 37, chapter 15, from trainee license and examination requirements.

Composite Section: The amendments to the fee provisions in subsections (2) and (6) incorporated by Ch. 444 were codified rather than the language in the Ch. 345 amendments because Ch. 444 contained broader language that included the Ch. 345 amendments.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 inserted (4) to provide that this section may not be interpreted to conflict with 37-1-138. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

1997 Amendments: Chapter 481 substituted third sentence in (1) regarding imposition of late fee for renewal applications for former text that read: "The fee must be increased 10% for each month or major portion of a month that the payment of the renewal fee is delayed after the expiration date. The maximum fee for a delayed renewal may not exceed twice the normal renewal fee as set by the board. A person applying for renewal whose license was suspended for failure to renew is required to submit to the examinations described in 37-16-403 as a condition of renewal for a 3-year period after suspension."

Chapter 492 in (1), in first sentence after "related devices shall", deleted "annually". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Severability: Section 49, Ch. 481, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment — Coordination: Chapter 72 in (2) increased hours to 10 from 4; and made minor changes in style.

Saving Clause: Section 132, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1991 Amendment: In (1), near beginning after "hearing aids", inserted "and related devices"; inserted (3) allowing Board to set standards and fees regarding inactive status licenses; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 12, Ch. 155, L. 1991, was a severability clause.

1985 Amendment: In (1) near middle of last sentence, after "submit to", substituted "the examinations described in 37-16-403" for "an examination"; and inserted (2) establishing continuing education requirement.

1981 Amendments: Chapter 345 deleted ", not to exceed $80," after "a fee" in the middle of first sentence of (1).

Chapter 444 deleted limitation that the fee may not exceed $80 in the middle of first sentence of (1); and inserted second sentence of (1) requiring fee to be set commensurate with costs.

Composite Section: The amendment to the fee provision contained in Ch. 444 was codified rather than the language in Ch. 345 amendment because Ch. 444 contained broader language that included the Ch. 345 amendment.

Board of Psychologists — Immunity From Suit: Rahrer sought to hold the Board of Psychologists liable for damages arising out of a contested case hearing involving the Board's investigation of a complaint against Rahrer, a licensed psychologist. Applying Butz v. Economou, 438 US 478, 57 L Ed 2d 895, 98 S Ct 2894 (1978), and Koppen v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 233 M 214, 759 P2d 173, 45 St. Rep. 1433 (1988), the Supreme Court held that the Board of Psychologists was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity. Initiating, investigating, and presenting a case pursuant to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act involve precisely the types of decisions for which the state and its agencies are granted quasi-judicial immunity. *Rahrer v. Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

1991 Amendment: In (1)(d), at end after "renewal fee", inserted language concerning including amount sufficient to cover cost of administering continuing education program. Amendment effective January 1, 1992.

1983 Amendment: Substituted reference to state special revenue fund for reference to earmarked revenue fund.

1981 Amendment: Deleted ", $25 to $50" after "application fee" in (1)(a); deleted ", $10" after "certificate fee" in (1)(c); deleted ", $20 to $50" after "renewal fee" in (1)(d); deleted former subsection (2) which provided "The board may set the application fee and the annual renewal fee annually within the above limits"; and deleted former subsection (3) which provided "The initial certificate fee shall be prorated as follows:

- (a) if the certificate is issued between January 2 and March 31, $10;
- (b) if the certificate is issued between April 1 and June 30, $7.50;
- (c) if the certificate is issued between July 1 and September 30, $5;
- (d) if the certificate is issued between October 1 and January 1, $2.50."

ARM 8.64.401 Definitions — remuneration or hire.

37-18-104. Exemptions — rules.Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 60 inserted (8) providing that nothing in Title 37, chapter 18, prohibits a certified agency from possessing, or a certified euthanasia technician from administering, any controlled substance authorized by the board for the purpose of euthanasia. Amendment effective January 1, 2004, and terminates January 1, 2008.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 75 in (1)(e), at beginning after "employment", deleted "as assistants to veterinarians licensed and registered under this chapter" and at end substituted "if the students are employed by and work under the immediate supervision of a veterinarian licensed and registered under this chapter" for "and authorized by law to confer degrees"; in (3), at end of first sentence, deleted "by individuals who attest to the board that they possess a combination of 3 years' education, experience, and training in that procedure", deleted first sentence of former (3)(b) that read: "Exemption under subsection (3)(a) remains in effect until testing and certification procedures, as determined by board rule, are implemented on or before July 1, 1991", and at end, after "rules", inserted "regarding nonsurgical embryo transfers in bovines"; deleted former (3)(b)(ix) that read: "(ix) establishment of an advisory committee. The committee:

(A) must consist of:

(I) one member of the board who is a veterinarian;

(II) one member of the Montana state university-Bozeman reproductive physiology department;

(III) one member representing the Montana stockgrowers association animal health committee;

(IV) one member representing the Montana woolgrowers association;

(V) one reproductive specialist with practical experience in embryo transfers; and

(VI) a veterinarian who is a member of the American college of theriogenologists;

(B) shall make recommendations regarding the testing and certification procedures. The committee may not adopt rules.

(C) in cooperation with the board, shall conduct a study of the practice of bovine pregnancy testing and ovine pregnancy testing with the use of ultrasound equipment. The study must include but is not limited to:

(I) federal laws governing the practice of pregnancy testing;

(II) education and experience requirements for the practice of pregnancy testing; and

(III) pregnancy testing by nonveterinarians.

(D) terminates July 1, 1991"; inserted (6) concerning employee performing functions under supervision of veterinarian; inserted (7) concerning emergency care by employee; and made minor changes in style.

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 75, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 37-18-104(6) and (7) and 37-18-202(1)(c) grant authority to the board of veterinary medicine to adopt rules regarding the limited exemption of certain veterinary support personnel from the practice of veterinary medicine. It is intended that the board be allowed to define by rule the scope of treatments that support personnel may render when working under the supervision of a veterinarian. It is also intended that, in its discretion, the board be allowed to further define situations that constitute emergencies during which support personnel may provide limited care to a veterinarian's animal patients."

Name Change — Directions to Code Commissioner: Pursuant to sec. 36, Ch. 308, L. 1995, in this section the Code Commissioner changed "Montana state university" to "Montana state university-Bozeman".

1991 Amendment: In beginning of (3)(a) inserted "Nonsurgical", after "transfers" inserted "in bovines", and substituted "veterinarian licensed and residing in Montana" for "licensed veterinarian". Amendment effective February 12, 1991.

1989 Amendment: Inserted (1)(f) relating to livestock management practices; inserted (3) regarding performance of embryo transfers and Board rules; and in (4), before "treating", inserted "caring for and", before "employees" inserted "full-time", and after "employees" inserted "as defined in 2-18-601". Amendment effective May 11, 1989.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 650, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 37-18-104, 37-18-202, and 37-18-311 [now repealed] grant to the board of veterinary medicine the authority to adopt rules to implement the provisions of the bill. At a minimum, it is intended that the rules address:

(1) a definition of accepted livestock management practices in order to determine whether a person who advises on the subject is exempt from Title 37, chapter 18;

(2) development of standards for continuing education requirements, which may be supplemental to present board rules on the subject;

(3) a definition of unprofessional conduct to be used in determining whether a license may be refused, suspended, or revoked;

(4) certification of individuals seeking to practice embryo transfers, to be implemented on or before July 1, 1991; and

(5) formation of an advisory committee to make recommendations regarding the certification of individuals seeking to practice embryo transfers."

Applicability: Section 9, Ch. 650, L. 1989, provided: "The provisions of [this act] clarify existing authority of the board of veterinary medicine to regulate veterinary practices. The provisions of Title 2, chapter 8, part 2 [now repealed], and 5-4-207 [now repealed] do not apply to [this act]."

1985 Amendment: In (1)(e) deleted former last two sentences that read: "However, this employment may not be contracted for or entered into except after written application for approval directed to the board and the written grant of approval by the board. This employment may not be for a period in excess of 6 months from the date of completion of the third year of study”.

Case Notes

Employment Contract for Performance of Embryo Transfers by Nonveterinarian Void for Illegal Purpose: Employment contracts entered into in 1980 by an embryonics corporation and two persons who were not veterinarians, for the performance of bovine embryo transfers in Montana, were contracts for the illegal purpose of unauthorized practice of veterinary medicine and were therefore void. Actions arising from alleged breach of the contracts were unenforceable. Portable Embryonics, Inc. v. J.P. Genetics, Inc., 248 M 242, 810 P2d 1197, 48 St. Rep. 415 (1991).

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 230 in first sentence in (1) after "examination" deleted "either oral, written, or practical or a combination of oral, written, or practical"; substituted language in second sentence in (2) authorizing board's discretion regarding examination for former language that read: "The examination must cover theory and practice, pharmacology and therapeutics, animal sanitation, surgery, communicable diseases, and other subjects chosen by the board which are ordinarily included in the curriculum of a school of veterinary medicine recognized and approved by the American veterinary medical association"; in (4) substituted "a passing grade, as determined by the board by rule" for "a grade of 70%"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted former second sentence in (1) that read: "An investigation under reciprocity arrangements may replace examination for licensees from other states under 37-18-304" and at end of third sentence inserted "and qualified"; deleted (5) that read: "(5) An applicant for examination may, in the discretion of the board, be given a temporary permit to practice veterinary medicine prior to taking the examination if the applicant is employed by and working under the supervision of and in the same office with a veterinarian licensed under this part. The temporary permit is valid only until the date of the next examination. Under no circumstances may a second temporary permit be issued to the same person. 1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1), in first sentence after "from the department", deleted "annually"; in (3), in third sentence near end, substituted "the date set by department rule" for "November 1 of any year"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in first sentence in (1), after "procure", inserted "a certificate of registration" and after "department" substituted "annually on or before the date set by department rule" for "before November 1 annually his certificate of registration", in second sentence, after "licensee", substituted "qualifies for renewal" for "has complied with continuing education requirements established by the board", and deleted third through fifth sentences that read: "The board may waive, relax, or suspend continuing education requirements or particular program requirements for applicants who cannot fulfill those requirements because of individual hardship. New licensees who secure licenses by examination shall be granted a renewal the first year without attending the educational programs. The certificate is prima facie evidence of the right of the holder to practice veterinary medicine in this state during the time for which it is issued"; in first sentence in (2), after "registration", substituted "on or before the date set by department rule" for "before November 1, annually" and at end of second sentence, after "requires", deleted "and by presentation of evidence satisfactory to the board that he has fulfilled all continuing education requirements to the date of application for restoration"; and made minor changes in style.

1989 Amendment: In second sentence of (1), after "fixed", deleted "annually" and after "licensee" substituted "has complied with continuing education requirements established" for "in the year preceding the application for renewal, attended an educational program approved" and at beginning of third sentence, after "may", substituted "waive, relax, or suspend continuing education requirements or particular program requirements for applicants who cannot fulfill those requirements because of individual hardship" for "authorize the department to issue renewals, but not consecutive renewals, on a showing satisfactory to the board that attendance at the educational programs was unavoidably prevented"; near end of second sentence of (2), after "fulfilled", substituted "all" for "the" and after "requirements" substituted "to the date of application for restoration" for "of all licensees recited above"; and made minor changes in phraseology and punctuation. Amendment effective May 11, 1989.

1985 Amendment: In (1) in first sentence changed July 1 to November 1 and in next-to-last sentence substituted "new licensees who secure licenses by examination shall be granted a renewal the first year" for "new licensees who secure licenses by examination during the 6 months preceding July 1 shall be granted renewals"; in first sentence of (2) and in last sentence of (3) changed "July 1" to "November 1".

1981 Amendment: Deleted "not exceeding the sum of $25," after "fee to be fixed annually by the board" in the middle of the second sentence of (1); and deleted "not in excess of $25," after "restoration fee" in the middle of the second sentence of (2).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in second sentence, after "funeral directing", deleted "on June 1, 1963" and after "is entitled to" substituted "the renewal" for "an annual renewal"; in third sentence, before "renewal", deleted "annual"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 491, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 at end of second sentence, after "department", substituted "on or before the date set by department rule" for "on July 1 of each year"; deleted fourth sentence that read: "A funeral director's license may not be issued to a person who is not licensed by the board of embalmers and funeral directors to practice funeral directing on June 1, 1963"; and made minor changes in style.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 398 (Ch. 378, L. 1981) provided: "A Statement of Intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Board of Morticians in sections 7 and 8.

It is the intent of this bill that the board adopt rules requiring mortuaries to disclose in writing to all customers a complete itemized list of all funeral costs and complete information regarding the need for embalming. Members of the public seeking the services of mortuaries are usually under a great deal of personal stress, and the rules adopted are intended to provide complete disclosure of costs and attendant legal requirements to protect the economic interest of members of the public.

This bill grants the board the authority to establish continuing education programs and requirements to insure maintenance of professional knowledge and competency of licensees. It is the intent of the Legislature that the continuing education programs have as their primary objective the protection of the health, safety, and welfare of the public, and that the programs not serve primarily to limit entry into the profession or occupation or to promote the personal interests of the licensees."

Case Notes

Prohibition Against Abortion by Physician Assistant-Certified Unconstitutional Violation of Right of Privacy: After the decision in Mazurek v. Armstrong, 520 US 968, 138 L Ed 2d 162, 117 S Ct 1865 (1997), ibid., Dr. Armstrong and Cahill, a physician assistant-certified, filed this case in state District Court challenging the constitutionality of 50-20-109 and this section, which prohibited a physician assistant-certified from performing abortions. The District Court found that the prohibition affected a woman's right to obtain a legal first trimester abortion and that the state had advanced no compelling interest to justify prohibiting Cahill from performing abortions, as she had for 20 years, and granted plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction. Noting that Montana adheres to one of the most stringent protections of its citizens' right of privacy in the United States, exceeding even the federal constitution, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that legislation that infringes on the exercise of the right of privacy must be reviewed under a strict scrutiny analysis. Under Art. II, sec. 10, Mont. Const., every individual is guaranteed the right to make medical judgments affecting that person's bodily integrity and health, in partnership with a chosen health care provider and free from government interference, except in very limited circumstances not at issue here. The court agreed that the statutory restrictions in question impacted a woman's right to procreative autonomy and her right to seek and obtain a specific lawful medical procedure from the health care provider of her choice, in this case a previability abortion from a physician assistant-certified, and were thus an unconstitutional violation of the right of privacy. Armstrong v. St., 1999 MT 261, 296 M 361, 989 P2d 364, 56 St. Rep. 1045 (1999), following Gryczan v. St., 283 M 433, 942 P2d 112, 54 St. Rep. 699 (1997). See also Intermtn. Planned Parenthood v. St. (Cause No. BDV 97-477) (June 29, 1998) (First Judicial District Court ruling (not appealed to Montana Supreme Court) that the law banning partial-birth abortion procedure infringed on a woman's right to privacy under Art. II, sec. 10, Mont. Const.), and Planned Parenthood of Missoula v. St. (judgment of the First Judicial District, Lewis & Clark County, Dec. 29, 1999, declaring provisions of the Montana Abortion Control Act and the Woman's Right-to-Know Act unconstitutional under Art. II, sec. 10, Mont. Const.).

Standing of Health Care Providers to Litigate Privacy Right of Patient to Obtain Previability Abortion: In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court relied on federal law to decide that the statutes directed at health care providers in 50-20-109 and this section, which prohibit a physician assistant-certified from performing abortions, interfered with the normal functioning of the physician-patient relationship by criminalizing certain procedures. To establish standing to challenge government action: (1) the complaining party must clearly allege past, present, or threatened injury to a property right or civil right; and (2) the alleged injury must be distinguishable from the injury to the public generally but need not be exclusive to the complaining party. In this case, based on the closeness of the physician-patient relationship, the health care providers had standing, on behalf of their women patients, to assert the women's constitutional privacy right under Art. II, sec. 10, Mont. Const., to obtain a previability abortion from the health care provider of their choosing. Armstrong v. St., 1999 MT 261, 296 M 361, 989 P2d 364, 56 St. Rep. 1045 (1999), following Singleton v. Wulff, 428 US 106, 49 L Ed 2d 826, 96 S Ct 2868 (1976). See also Intermtn. Planned Parenthood v. St. (Cause No. BDV 97-477) (June 29, 1998) (First Judicial District Court ruling (not appealed to Montana Supreme Court) that the law banning partial-birth abortion procedure infringed on a woman's right to privacy under Art. II, sec. 10, Mont. Const.), and Planned Parenthood of Missoula v. St. (judgment of the First Judicial District, Lewis & Clark County, Dec. 29, 1999, declaring provisions of the Montana Abortion Control Act and the Woman's Right-to-Know Act unconstitutional under Art. 1993 Amendment: Chapter 419 inserted (6) requiring Board to adopt rules containing grounds for disciplinary action; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 1993.

1991 Amendment: Inserted (5) concerning physician assistant training. Amendment effective April 16, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 446, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is necessary for this bill because 37-20-202(5) requires the board of medical examiners to develop rules pertinent to the training of physician assistant students in Montana. It is intended that the rules address the kind and amount of supervision required for physician assistant students and other aspects of student training the board considers pertinent."

1989 Amendment: In (3) substituted "physician assistant-certified" for "physician's assistant"; and in (4) substituted "physician assistant-certified" for "physicians' assistants" and inserted "and locum tenens utilization plans". Amendment effective March 15, 1989.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 97, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 4 and 13] [37-20-404 and 37-20-202] grant or extend rulemaking authority to the board of medical examiners in order to implement the provisions of this bill.

At a minimum, it is intended that the rules address the following topics:

(1) authorization for prescribing, dispensing, and administering drugs by a physician assistant-certified, including the extent and limitations of the prescribing and dispensing authority, required recordkeeping, and refilling of prescriptions; and

(2) considerations pertinent to approval of locum tenens utilization plans."

1981 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 7 (Ch. 380, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates authority to the board of medical examiners to consider physicians' assistants utilization plans and to promulgate administrative rules in that regard.

HB 7 intends that the board of medical examiners carry out the provisions of this bill and act to provide better health care for the public. In this spirit, the bill intends for the board of medical examiners to adopt rules which will clarify the nature and limitations of the supervision of physicians' assistants by physicians. The rules adopted should address issues of direction and supervision such as proximity of the supervising physician to his assistant; the nature of the communication between the physician and the assistant, whether it must be face-to-face or whether telephone communications suffice, and under what circumstances; the questions of protocols for interaction between different health care actors, including issues of liability and the possible direction of others by physicians' assistants; and the rules adopted should give additional guidance to prospective applicants with respect to the requirements for education and experience required of physicians' assistants, the nature of a training program approved by the American medical association, and general information indicating the scope of utilization plans likely to be approved.

In addition, a rule shall be promulgated to specify that a physician may not utilize more than one physician's assistant unless he can demonstrate to the board the ability to supervise more than one assistant adequately."

37-23-103. Powers and duties of board.Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted former (1)(d) that required Board to establish requirements for continuing education that are conditions of license renewal; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 131, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 572, L. 1985, provided: "Section 4 [section 3, 37-23-103, apparently intended] requires the board of professional counselors [board of social work examiners and professional counselors] to adopt rules setting professional and ethical standards and continuing education requirements for professional licensed counselors and to adopt such other rules as are necessary for the regulation of this profession. In addition, section 4 [section 3, 37-23-103] permits the board to adopt rules governing the issuance of certificates in particular areas of practice as a licensed professional counselor. The legislature perceives a need to regulate persons holding themselves out as professional counselors. Consumers of professional counseling services are entitled to adequate regulation of those services in the public interest. It is contemplated that the board may promulgate rules that:

- (1) protect the public from abuse of the trust placed in professional counselors;
- (2) regulate the day-to-day practices of licensed professional counselors;
- (3) ensure a professional attitude and professional work in a professional atmosphere;
- (4) regulate fees charged for services;
- (5) regulate testing devices and methods used by licensed professional counselors;
- (6) regulate counseling techniques;
- (7) determine the type, amount, and quality of continuing education of licensed professional counselors;
- (8) determine the areas of specialization in which a professional counselor could be certified and define the requirements that must be met for certification in these areas; and
- (9) are otherwise necessary to the regulation of the profession."

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted (2)(b) that read: "(b) of a person who possesses a license or certification as a professional counselor from an agency located in another state whose requirements are less than the requirements of this chapter, by:

- (i) crediting past clinical experience in psychotherapy and counseling; and
- (ii) recommending additional education or experience necessary to fulfill the requirements of this chapter"; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 131, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

1993 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 197 deleted former (1) specifying licensing prerequisites for professional counselors licensed before December 31, 1987 (see 1993 Session Law for text); in (1), at beginning, deleted "To be licensed after December 31, 1987"; in (1)(a) substituted "60 semester hours" for "90 quarter hours" in reference to a planned graduate program and substituted "6 semester hours" for "nine quarter hours" in reference to advanced counseling; inserted (2) requiring Board to provide by rule for licensing certain persons; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 26, 1993.

Chapter 552 deleted former (1) specifying licensing prerequisites for professional counselors licensed before December 31, 1987 (see 1993 Session Law for text); at beginning of (1)(b) substituted "3,000 hours" for "2,000 hours"; and made minor changes in style.

Style changes were slightly different in the two chapters. In each case, the codifier chose the more appropriate of the two.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 197, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it requires the board of social work examiners and professional counselors to adopt rules to provide an opportunity for persons who partially fulfill the requirements for licensure as a professional counselor to fulfill the requirements. It is the intent of the legislature that the board facilitate the licensure of those who have begun a course of education and experience as a professional counselor to meet the requirements of the board. It is not the intent of the legislature to allow a person without a graduate degree or a license from another state to circumvent the requirements for licensure."

Saving Clause: Section 2, Ch. 197, L. 1993, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 12(2), Ch. 552, L. 1993, provided that subsection (1)(b) of this section applies to persons licensed on or after July 1, 1996.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (1)(c)(ii), (1)(c)(iii), (2)(c)(ii), and (2)(c)(iii) allowing option of examination by a national professional organization.

licensed to assist in the practice of occupational therapy under this chapter, who works under the general supervision of an occupational therapist in accordance with the provisions of the Essentials for an Approved Educational Program for the Occupational Therapy Assistant, published by the American occupational therapy association, as it read on October 1, 1985"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 1993.

1991 Amendment: In definition of occupational therapy inserted third and fourth sentences relating to scope and limitation of treatment. Amendment effective February 19, 1991.

Construction of Law: Section 2, Ch. 35, L. 1991, provided: "Nothing in [this act] may be construed to prohibit the use of therapeutic devices or equipment authorized as a specific occupational therapy service under 37-24-103(4)(d)." Effective February 19, 1991, and terminates July 1, 1993.

Effective Date — Termination: Section 3, Ch. 35, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval [approved February 19, 1991] and terminates July 1, 1993."

Attorney General's Opinions

Occupational Therapist Not Authorized to Use Iontophoresis: Iontophoresis is a process that uses electricity to administer topical medication. The statutes governing the practice of physical therapy define topical medication and iontophoresis and authorize its use by physical therapists, but the statutes governing the practice of occupational therapy do not contain those definitions or authorize the use of topical medications, including medications administered through iontophoresis, by occupational therapists. If the Legislature had intended to authorize occupational therapists to use iontophoresis, it would have made an authorization corollary to the statutes governing physical therapists, but it did not. Therefore, occupational therapists are not authorized by Montana law to perform iontophoresis. 49 A.G. Op. 1 (2001).

Restriction on Use of Modalities by Occupational Therapists: While the list of permissible occupational services set out in this section is not exhaustive, allowable types of services involve functional activities, such as the development of skills, use of crafts, and administration of muscle and motion tests rather than application of therapeutic modalities, such as heat, cold, air, light, water, electricity, and sound. The use of therapeutic agents may be a viable part of the practice of occupational therapy, and occupational therapists may be fully trained in the employment of those agents; however, the Legislature has not authorized their use as within the scope of the practice (see 1993 amendment). 44 A.G. 37-25-307. Renewal of license.Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 inserted (4) to provide that this section may not be interpreted to conflict with 37-1-138. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1) substituted "for a period and" for "annually"; and in (3), near end, substituted "license renewal" for "annual renewal". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

2004 Annotations to the MCA

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in (1) substituted "department" for "board"; and in (2) substituted "continued licensure" for "continuing education".

Severability: Section 131, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 132, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

1991 Amendment: At end of (1) substituted "on a date set by the board" for "within 30 days after the expiration of the existing license"; and at end of (3) substituted "annual renewal date" for "expiration of the existing license".

Transition: Section 2, Ch. 255, L. 1991, provided: "A person applying for license renewal under the annual renewal date set by the board must be credited for any portion of the upcoming year for which the person has previously paid the fee."

CHAPTER 26 NATUROPATHIC PHYSICIANS

Chapter Compiler's Comments

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 306, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 7 and 10] [37-26-304 and 37-26-201] grant to the board of naturopathic physicians [now alternative health care board] rulemaking authority to implement the provisions of this bill. It is the intent of the legislature that the board, at a minimum, adopt rules:

- (1) specifying the scope of practice of naturopathic medicine;
- (2) establishing license application and examination procedures, fees, and criteria for minimal educational and clinical requirements;
- (3) developing procedures for the issuance, renewal, suspension, revocation, and reciprocity of licenses and procedures for certificates of specialty practice; and
- (4) establishing investigatory procedures for processing complaints."

Severability: Section 20, Ch. 306, L. 1991, was a severability clause.

Coordination Instruction: Section 3(2), Ch. 524, L. 1991, provided: "If Senate Bill No. 66 is passed and approved and if it contains a section of law creating the board of naturopathic physicians and a section of law defining the term "board" as the board of naturopathic physicians, then the section of law in Senate Bill No. 66 creating the board of naturopathic physicians is void and the section of law in Senate Bill No. 66 defining the board must provide that the term "board" means the alternative health care board as established in [section 1 of this act] [2-15-1840 (renumbered 2-15-1730)]. Any reference to the term "board" in Senate Bill No. 66 must then be construed to mean the alternative health care board established in [section 1 of this act] [2-15-1840 (renumbered 2-15-1730)], and any reference in Senate Bill No. 66 to the bill section creating the board of naturopathic physicians must be construed as a reference to [section 1 of this act] [2-15-1840 (renumbered 2-15-1730)]." Senate Bill No. 66 was approved April 1, 1991, as Ch. 306, L. 1991. Chapter 524, L. 1991, rendered sec. 9, Ch. 306, void, and the definition of Board in 37-26-103 was revised to mean the Alternative Health Care Board.

DIRECT-ENTRY MIDWIFERY

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Alternative Health Care Board: Section 3, Chapter 524, L. 1991, provided that if Ch. 524 was passed and approved, the Alternative Health Care Board was substituted for the Board of Direct-Entry Midwifery. The Code Commissioner has not codified sec. 5, Ch. 550, L. 1991, creating the Board of Direct-Entry Midwifery, to reflect Ch. 524.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 550, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 6] [37-27-105] grants rulemaking authority to the board of direct-entry midwifery [alternative health care board] to implement the provisions of this bill. In adopting rules, the board is encouraged to review regulations promulgated by the state of New Hampshire and, where appropriate, to adopt comparable rules specifically applicable to direct-entry midwifery in Montana. At a minimum, it is the intent of the legislature that the board adopt rules:

- (1) governing the conduct of board business;
- (2) establishing license application and examination procedures, criteria for and grading of examinations, examination and license fees, criteria for minimum educational, apprenticeship, and clinical requirements for license eligibility, and continuing education requirements for license renewal;
- (3) establishing eligibility criteria for client screening by direct-entry midwives in order to achieve the goal of providing midwifery services to women during low-risk pregnancies;
- (4) developing procedures for the issuance, renewal, suspension, revocation, and reciprocity of licenses;
- (5) creating disciplinary standards for licensees, establishing investigatory procedures for processing complaints, and adopting ethical standards for licensed direct-entry midwives;
- (6) establishing supporting documentation for primary birth attendants;
- (7) establishing standardized informed consent and reporting forms; and
- (8) establishing criteria that limits an apprenticeship, as provided in [section 6] [37-27-105]." (Section 3, Ch. 524, L. 1991, provided that if it was passed and approved, the Alternative Health Care Board was substituted for the Board of Direct-Entry Midwifery.)

Coordination Instruction: Section 3, Ch. 524, L. 1991, provided in part: "If Senate Bill No. 172 is passed and approved and if it contains a section of law creating the board of direct-entry midwifery and a section of law defining the term "board" as the board of direct-entry midwifery, then the section in Senate Bill No. 172 creating the board of direct-entry midwifery is void and the section in Senate Bill No. 172 defining the board must provide that "board" means the alternative health care board established in [section 1 of this act] [2-15-1840 (renumbered 2-15-1730)]. Any reference to the term "board" in Senate Bill No. 172 must then be construed to mean the alternative health care board established in [section 1 of this act] [2-15-1840 (renumbered 2-15-1730)], and any reference in Senate Bill No. 172 to the bill section creating the board of direct-entry midwifery must be construed as a reference to [section 1 of this act] [2-15-1840 (renumbered 2-15-1730)]." Senate Bill No. 172 was approved April 23, 1991, as Ch. 550, L. 1991. Chapter 524, L. 1991, rendered sec. 5, Ch. 550, L. 1991, void and changed the definition of Board to mean the Alternative Health Care Board.

Part Compiler's Comments

Emergency Medical Training — Not Codified: Section 2, Ch. 493, L. 1989, which was codified as 37-75-102, is no longer codified because it is temporary in nature and conflicts with the provisions of Title 37, ch. 27, part 2. Section 2, Ch. 493, L. 1989, reads: "Affidavit required. A direct-entry midwife shall file an affidavit with the department of commerce [now department of labor and industry] certifying that he or she has completed the emergency childbirth training segment of a state-approved emergency medical training program within 12 months of [the effective date of this act]." Chapter 493 was effective April 11, 1989. Section 2, Ch. 493, L. 1989, has not been repealed and is still valid law.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 314 at end of (3)(a) inserted "or a licensed naturopathic physician who is certified for the specialty practice of naturopathic childbirth attendance"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 12, 1993.

WHEREAS, the Legislative Audit Committee has determined that the Board of Denturistry has not licensed 30 denturists."

37-29-103. Association with dentists permitted.Case Notes

Use of Declaratory Judgment to Settle Question of Business Association Between Dentist and Denturist Improper — Dismissal for Failure to State Claim and Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Brisendine, a licensed denturist, presented to the Board of Dentistry a proposal stating his desire to enter into a business association with a dentist regarding fees and compensation. The Board issued a letter stating that it was considering the proposal but that such association would probably constitute the illegal practice of dentistry. The Board further threatened sanctions against Brisendine if he went forward with his proposal, but no final decision was ever issued by the Board. Brisendine sought a declaratory judgment and injunctive relief in District Court, requesting a decision on whether the business association was legal. The District Court dismissed the complaint for failure to present a justiciable controversy. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that use of a declaratory judgment at this stage of the proceedings constituted an attempt to seek an advisory opinion and an unwarranted intrusion into the Board's regulatory authority. The Supreme Court noted that Brisendine could seek a declaratory judgment from the Board without subjecting his license to suspension or revocation and that dismissal of the motion for declaratory judgment was proper because Brisendine had not exhausted his administrative remedies. *Brisendine v. 1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in (5), before "form", deleted "license applications" and after "facilities" deleted "and investigation of complaints"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (2) after "examinations", deleted "and determination of a passing grade"; and inserted (5) referring to adoption of rules.

Sunset Review: Chapter 548, L. 1985 (HB 649), provided for review of the operations of the Board of Denturistry (merged with Board of Dentistry by Ch. 524, L. 1987) by the Legislative Audit Committee. For the text of the sunset provision see compiler's comments at Title 37, ch. 29, part 3.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 548, L. 1985, provided: "This bill is for a major revision of Initiative 97, the Denturistry Practice Act. The bill delegates new authority to the new board of denturistry [merged with Board of Dentistry by Ch. 524, L. 1987] and clarifies some delegations of authority contained in the initiative. A statement of intent is therefore required for this bill.

It is the intent of section 1 of the bill that the governor have authority to implement staggered terms of board members during the appointing process.

It is the intent of section 4 of the bill that the board of denturistry [merged with Board of Dentistry by Ch. 524, L. 1987] have general authority to adopt rules for the implementation and enforcement of the act, including specific authority to adopt rules regarding license applications, license examinations, criteria for grading examinations, disciplinary standards for licensee, inspection of premises and facilities used in the practice of the profession, and investigation of complaints.

It is the intent of section 6 of the bill that the board have authority to modify fees set by the initiative and to set and modify additional fees.

It is the intent of section 7 of the bill that the board have authority to alter license renewal dates by rule.

It is the intent of section 8 of the bill that the board have authority to define "unprofessional conduct" of licensees by rule, for the purpose of establishing license discipline conduct standards."

Attorney General's Opinions

Board of Dentistry Not to Reconsider Licensing Decisions of Board of Dentistry: Administrative agencies enjoy only those powers specifically conferred upon them by statute. They possess no common-law powers, and implied powers are limited only to those necessary for the effective exercise and discharge of powers and duties expressly conferred. Therefore, when the Board of Dentistry had no power to reconsider its licensing decisions, the Board of Dentistry, having succeeded to the functions of the Board of Dentistry, may not reconsider a prior decision of the Board of Dentistry to issue a dentist's license. 43 A.G. Op. 33 (1989).

Licensing*Part Compiler's Comments

Sunset Review: Section 16, Ch. 548, L. 1985, provided: "Sunset review by audit committee — provisions for possible merger. (1) The legislative audit committee shall review the operations of the board of dentistry [merged with Board of Dentistry by Ch. 524, L. 1987] under the criteria of 2-8-112 and 2-8-113 and the additional criterion of whether the board has licensed a sufficient number of denturists to be a viable agency. The legislative audit committee shall, if the board has not licensed 30 denturists who are practicing in Montana by October 1, 1986, or if the board has otherwise failed to demonstrate its fiscal viability, and may in any event, prepare a bill for the 50th legislature to merge the board of dentistry with the board of dentistry [merged by Ch. 524, L. 1987].

(2) If the legislative audit committee proposes a merger under subsection (1), it shall provide that the board of dentistry consist of four dentists, one dental hygienist, one denturist, and two lay persons, one of whom must be a senior citizen representative."

37-29-301. License to practice required.Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 230 at beginning deleted "After April 1, 1985"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The practice of dentistry within the context of this chapter requires that all work except cast frame work be performed at the address shown on the dentist's license"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

37-29-303. Application for license.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (3), after "37-29-303", deleted "(2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in middle of introductory clause, after "meets", deleted "one of"; deleted former (1) that read: "(1)(a) Applications for persons engaged in the practice of dentistry on December 1, 1984, must be filed prior to April 1, 1985, and must include the following:

(i) three signed affidavits by persons other than family members that the applicant has been employed in denture technology for at least 5 years prior to application, is able to demonstrate competency in intraoral procedures, and has been a resident of the state of Montana for at least 6 months prior to April 1, 1985; and

(ii) documentation that the applicant has successfully completed courses approved by the board in head and oral anatomy and physiology, oral pathology, partial denture construction and design, clinical dental technology, radiology, dental laboratory technology, asepsis, clinical jurisprudence, medical emergencies, and cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

(b) Subsection (1)(a) must be applied retroactively to permit qualification of license applicants initially qualified and applying prior to the appointment and qualification of the original board under this chapter and section 27 of I.M. No. 97"; deleted former (2) providing requirements for applications filed on or after April 1, 1985; deleted (3) that read: "(3) A dentist who has been lawfully licensed or certified by initial licensing provisions in any state or territory that maintains a standard of dentistry which is equal to that of Montana must submit a certificate from the examining body of the state or territory in which he is certified or licensed, attesting to 5 years' practice under the certificate of license. However, no applicant may be licensed under the provisions of this subsection unless the state or territory in which he is licensed or certified extends a like privilege to denturists licensed by the state of Montana to practice denturistry. The board may enter into reciprocal relations with those states or territories whose laws are compatible with this chapter"; and made minor changes in style.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

1991 Amendment: In (2)(b)(i), near beginning, reduced from 2 years to 1 year the internship period for denturist.

1985 Amendment: Renumbered former (1)(a) and (1)(b) as (1)(a)(i) and (1)(a)(ii); inserted (1)(b) referring to retroactive application; and in (3) in last sentence, before "states", deleted "boards in".

Initiative Internal Reference: The reference in subsection (1)(b) to sec. 27 of Initiative Measure No. 97 has been left in that form because sec. 27, I.M. No. 97, was not codified. It provided for appointment to the initial board of denturistry and for the terms of office of initial board members. The initial board was confirmed by the Senate on April 9, 1985. WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1985 Amendment: Renumbered former (1) through (5) as (1)(a) through (1)(e); in (1) inserted "initially" before "entitled"; and inserted (2) allowing Board to set and modify fees.

37-29-305. Examinations.Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 230 deleted former second sentence in (1) and (2) that read: "The form of the test must include written and oral examinations and a practical demonstration of skills."

(2) Examinations must be held at least annually on the second Monday in July. An applicant must obtain an average percentage score of 75% or better to qualify for licensure. The written and practical examinations must carry equal weight. The oral examination results may adjust an average score only two percentage points"; in (3) substituted "fail to pass" for "fail to score a 75% average on the"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (4), at end, deleted "provided that all applicants under 37-29-303(1) are examined on or before April 1, 1985"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Case Notes

Administrative Rule Valid — Referral to Dentist Mandatory: Plaintiffs failed to make a clear showing that a Board of Dentistry's rule requiring referral to a dentist prior to a denturist starting services added provisions not envisioned by the Legislature. The District Court erred when it declared the rule invalid. An administrative agency's interpretation of a statute under its domain is presumed to be controlling. Christenot v. St., 272 M 396, 901 P2d 545, 52 St. Rep. 749 (1995). See also Hawley v. Bd. of Oil & Gas Conserv., 2000 MT 2, 297 M 467, 993 P2d 677, 57 St. Rep. 5 (2000).

Attorney General's Opinions

Referral to Dentist Necessary Prior to Making and Fitting Partial Denture: A denturist has no discretion with respect to referral of a patient under this section. Therefore, a denturist must refer a patient to a dentist prior to making, fitting, or reconstructing a partial denture. 44 A.G. Op. 36 (1992).

1989 Amendment: Inserted (6) regarding rules for booth rental licenses; and made minor changes in form.

1985 Amendment: In (2) after "practice", inserted "cosmetology or manicuring"; and in (5) after "schools of cosmetology", inserted "and schools of manicuring". Amendment effective January 1, 1986.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 602, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants the board of cosmetologists the authority to make rules regarding the practice and teaching of manicuring. Currently Title 37, chapter 31, allows for the licensing of practitioners, teachers, and schools of cosmetology. It is the intent of this bill to license those persons wishing to practice manicuring apart from the practice of cosmetology and to require that only a person who holds a valid license to teach cosmetology may teach manicuring to such persons. It is contemplated that rules adopted by the board should address the following:

- (1) types of programs required for practicing or teaching manicuring or operating a school of manicuring, such as classroom instruction and examination;
- (2) standards for determining programs to be approved for the fulfillment of the requirements, such as adequacy of facilities, qualification of instructors, and course content;
- (3) the number of hours of instruction required;
- (4) the basic content and the passing grade for any examination required;
- (5) preparation of a written application to be filed for examination and practice of manicuring; and
- (6) methods of monitoring compliance."

Case Notes

Administrative Rule More Stringent Than Statute Held Invalid: An administrative rule (adopted prior to the 1981 amendment reducing the period of apprenticeship from 1 year to 3 months, prior to the 1983 amendment providing for temporary certificates, and prior to the 1985 amendment eliminating the apprenticeship requirement) of the Board of Barbers requiring a year's apprenticeship served in a "commercial barbershop" prior to examination, as opposed to a year's apprenticeship served "under the immediate personal supervision of a licensed barber" as required by 37-30-301 (now repealed) and 37-30-305 (now repealed), is invalid because it does not satisfy the test as required in 2-4-305 that a rule must be "reasonably necessary to effectuate the purpose of the statute". Bd. of Barbers v. Big Sky College of Barber-Styling, 192 M 159, 626 P2d 1269, 38 St. Rep. 621 (1981).

Administrative Rule Exceeding Statutory Authority — Barbers: Administrative regulations are inconsistent with legislative guidelines if they engraft additional requirements on the statute that were not envisioned by the Legislature. Where the statutes (prior to enactment in 1983 of the requirement for an instructor's examination) set forth experience and character requirements for a barber school operator but did not mention an instructor's examination, an administrative rule requiring such an examination was void. Bell v. St., 182 M 21, 594 P2d 331, 36 St. Rep. 880 (1979).

Chapter 492 in (6), in second sentence after "accompanied by the", deleted "annual". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 473 in (3) substituted "cosmetology salon" for "beauty shop" and substituted "manicuring salon" for "manicuring shop"; in (6) substituted "cosmetology salon" for "cosmetological establishment"; and made minor changes in style.

2004 Annotations to the MCA

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in first sentence in (1), before "rule", inserted "department", in second sentence, after "expire", substituted "on the date set by department rule and may be renewed" for "on December 31 unless otherwise provided by rule or renewed for the next year or renewal period", in third sentence substituted "on or before the renewal date" for "prior to December 31 of each year, unless otherwise provided", and deleted former fifth sentence that read: "The board may provide by rule for a change in the renewal date and renewal period for the manager-operator and salon owner category"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) In addition to the foregoing requirements for renewal, persons applying for the renewal of licenses to teach cosmetology must have fulfilled the following additional requirements:

(a) During each year, an active teacher, either full-time or part-time, must have successfully completed 15 hours' professional teacher training at a school approved by the board.

(b) A person holding a license to teach cosmetology but not actively engaged either full-time or part-time in teaching cosmetology or manicuring during the preceding year may renew the license by paying the required fee. A person holding a license to teach cosmetology but not actively engaged in teaching cosmetology or manicuring either full-time or part-time for the preceding year or longer and wishing to resume active teaching of cosmetology or manicuring must successfully complete 30 hours' professional teacher training at a school approved by the board before resuming active teaching. However, the foregoing provisions do not prevent the board, under rules it adopts, from permitting a person who holds a license to teach cosmetology and who is not actively engaged either full-time or part-time in teaching cosmetology or manicuring from teaching as a substitute for an active teacher"; and made minor changes in style.

Attorney General's Opinions

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

CHAPTER 34 CLINICAL LABORATORY SCIENCE PRACTITIONERS

Chapter Compiler's Comments

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 345, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is needed for this bill because it establishes a board of clinical laboratory science practitioners and gives the board rulemaking authority. The board is required to adopt rules to establish licensing and certification procedures, educational requirements for licensure, and continuing education requirements. The board is also required to establish rules for the renewal, suspension, and revocation of licenses. The board shall establish an investigation and hearing procedure for handling complaints and shall set fees for administration of the board's duties. The fees must be commensurate with the costs of administration. The board shall also adopt rules implementing the requirement that a supervisor of a clinical laboratory technician must be accessible at all times that testing is being performed in order to provide onsite, telephonic, or electronic consultation."

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (2)(d), after "issuance of the initial", deleted "annual". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted former (2)(d) that read: "(d) prescribing requirements for continuing education to be met by registered sanitarians in order to maintain their professional knowledge and competence and as a condition to continuing in the practice of the profession of sanitarian"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: At end of (1) substituted "the purposes of this chapter, as it considers necessary" for "this chapter for its administration"; in (2) inserted last clause mandating rules; and inserted (2)(a) through (2)(e) requiring adoption of rules governing professional conduct, Board procedure, educational equivalency requirements, continuing education, and qualifications for training status. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 545, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 4 and 6] [37-40-203 and 37-40-302] grant rulemaking authority to the board of sanitarians. It is the intent of the legislature that the board of sanitarians adopt rules:

- (1) establishing standards of professional conduct in order to maintain the integrity, dignity, and competency of the profession;
- (2) governing the conduct of matters before the board including meetings, recordkeeping, rulemaking, hearings, and other matters;
- (3) establishing educational equivalency requirements to determine qualifications for licensure;
- (4) establishing procedures and passing scores for examinations for applicants for licensure;
- (5) establishing requirements for continuing education to maintain professional knowledge and competence as a condition of continued licensure;
- (6) defining qualifications for sanitarian-in-training status and issuance of a permit;
- (7) establishing a schedule of nonrefundable fees to cover costs incurred in regulation of the profession; and
- (8) defining unprofessional conduct as a basis for disciplinary action."

2003 Amendment: Chapter 196 in (2) near middle of first sentence substituted "an examination" for "a written examination"; at end of (3) deleted "upon payment of the required fee"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 16 in (2), in first sentence after "examination", deleted "and an oral interview"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In (2), near end of first sentence before "examination", inserted "a written" and after "examination" inserted "and an oral interview" and inserted last sentence concerning procedures and passing scores for the examination; and made minor change in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 545, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 4 and 6] [37-40-203 and 37-40-302] grant rulemaking authority to the board of sanitarians. It is the intent of the legislature that the board of sanitarians adopt rules:

- (1) establishing standards of professional conduct in order to maintain the integrity, dignity, and competency of the profession;

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 in (3) at beginning of second sentence inserted "Subject to subsection (4)"; inserted (4) to provide that this section may not be interpreted to conflict with 37-1-138; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (2), after "license by paying", substituted "a renewal fee" for "an annual fee". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 in (2), after "fee", inserted "and meeting qualifications" and after "board" deleted "and submitting proof of continuing education as prescribed by the board"; in (3), after "due", substituted "on or before the renewal date set by department rule" for "July 1 of the renewal year"; and made minor changes in style.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 79 inserted definition of board; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2001.

Chapter 213 substituted definition of community water system for former language that read: "means the term as defined in 75-6-102"; in definition of wastewater treatment plant deleted former (b) that read: "(b) discharges an effluent directly into state waters"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 6, 2001.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 79 L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, certain environmental statutes administered by the Montana Department of Environmental Quality provide that a person aggrieved by a decision of the Department may appeal that decision to the Director of the Department; and

WHEREAS, the possibility of an appeal prevents the Director from becoming involved in certain Department decisions that are subject to appeal to the Director; and

WHEREAS, section 82-4-427, MCA, states that a contested case hearing requested under The Opencut Mining Act must be held within 30 days after the hearing is requested; and

WHEREAS, it is difficult for the Department to conduct a contested case hearing under that Act within 30 days after the hearing is requested; and

WHEREAS, certain revisions to statutes administered by the Department are necessary for clarity and consistency and to conform the statutes to current drafting style."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 213, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, section 37-42-102(8), MCA, currently contains three elements in the definition of a "wastewater treatment plant" and defines it as a plant that treats wastewater, that discharges an effluent directly into state waters, and that is either an industrial waste discharge system or a public sewage system as defined in section 75-6-102, MCA; and

WHEREAS, section 75-6-102(9), MCA, already defines "industrial waste discharge system" as a system that discharges industrial waste into state waters; and

WHEREAS, the current definition of "wastewater treatment plant" in section 37-42-102(8), MCA, which includes only systems that discharge directly to state waters, may restrict regulation more than is desired so that some public sewage systems might not be required to have a certified operator; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to require public sewage systems, whether or not they discharge to state waters, and systems that process industrial waste water and discharge to state waters to be operated by certified operators; and

WHEREAS, removing the requirement that a discharge to state waters is necessary from the definition of a "wastewater treatment plant" would clarify that intent; and

WHEREAS, section 37-42-103, MCA, exempts public water supplies and sewage systems serving fewer than 15 or more service connections or 25 or more people for at least 60 days of the calendar year from the requirement of having a certified operator in responsible charge; and

WHEREAS, a water supply or sewage system that does not serve 15 service connections or 25 or more people for at least 60 days of the calendar year is already excluded from the definition of a "public sewage system" and the definition of a "public water supply system" under section 75-6-102(15) and (16), MCA, and is therefore not required to have a certified operator; and

WHEREAS, industrial waste discharge systems generally do not serve 15 or more service connections or 25 or more people for at least 60 days of the calendar year, and the exemption in section 37-42-103, MCA, might be interpreted to exempt industrial waste discharge systems from needing to have certified operators; and

WHEREAS, repeal of section 37-42-103, MCA, would clarify that industrial waste discharge systems that discharge an effluent to state waters require certified operators."

Saving Clause: Section 18, Ch. 79, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

Section 3, Ch. 213, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 538 inserted definition of nontransient noncommunity water system; at end of definition of water distribution system and at end of definition of water supply system inserted "or a nontransient noncommunity water system"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 29(1), Ch. 538, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 30(2), Ch. 538, L. 1997, provided: "[Section 1] [37-42-102] applies to the licensing of nontransient noncommunity water system operators on or after July 1, 1998."

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 418 in definition of Department substituted "department of environmental quality provided for in 2-15-3501" for "department of health and environmental sciences provided for in Title 2, chapter 15, part 21"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 488 inserted definition of community water system; deleted definition of Montana's waters that read: "'Montana's waters' means all streams and lakes (including all rivers and lakes bordering on the state), wells, springs, irrigation systems, marshes, watercourses, waterways, drainage systems, and other bodies of water, surface and underground, natural or artificial, publicly or privately owned"; inserted definition of state waters; in definition of wastewater treatment plant, at end of (b), deleted "which serves 10 or more families or serves an industry employing 10 or more persons" and inserted (c) to include part of an industrial waste discharge system or public sewer system; in definition of water distribution system, at end, substituted "that is part of a community water system" for "which serves 10 or more families or supplies an industry employing 10 or more persons"; in definition of water supply system, at end, substituted "that is part of a community water system" for "which serves 10 or more families or serves an industry employing 10 or more persons"; and made minor changes in style.

Style changes in the chapters were slightly different. In each case, the codifier chose the most appropriate.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1983 Amendment: Substituted (2), defining council, for former (1), which read: "'Board" means the board of water and wastewater operators provided for in 2-15-2105."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 243, L. 1983, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences [now Department of Environmental Quality] to adopt rules prescribing:

- (1) examination procedures for certifying water and wastewater operators;
- (2) continuing education requirements for certified water and wastewater operators;
- (3) requirements for issuance of temporary certificates to water and wastewater operators.

As prescribed in section 6 of the bill, the examination procedures for certifying operators shall constitute a reasonable basis for determining whether or not an applicant is qualified to operate a water or wastewater plant. The continuing education requirements shall provide a fair and reasonable basis for ensuring that certified operators remain qualified.

The requirements for issuance of a temporary certificate as prescribed in section 8 [9] shall include a list of elements constituting "good cause".

1993 Amendment: Chapter 284 substituted (10)(c) authorizing disciplinary action and orders for "deny, revoke, or suspend licenses for good cause, after notice and opportunity to be heard"; deleted former (10)(d) that read: "(d) reinstate licenses previously revoked when justification is shown to the satisfaction of the board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 7, 1993.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 9, Ch. 284, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval and applies to all disciplinary actions initiated by the board of water well contractors after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 7, 1993.

1991 Amendment of Administrative Rule — Delayed Termination of Fee Schedule: Section 11, Ch. 769, L. 1991, directed the Board of Water Well Contractors to amend Rule 36.21.415, Administrative Rules of Montana. See 1991 Session Law for text.

Section 22, Ch. 769, L. 1991, provided that the amendment, if implemented, to this rule terminates July 1, 1993.

1989 Amendment: Near beginning of first sentence of (4) substituted "minimum standards" for "rules" and at end, after "wells", deleted "by January 1, 1989" and inserted second and third sentences of (4) regarding standards; in (5), after "water wells", inserted "or monitoring wells"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 12, 1989.

Applicability: Section 10, Ch. 516, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies only to monitoring wells drilled on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 12, 1989.

1987 Amendment: In (3), after "enforcement procedures", deleted "by January 1, 1987"; inserted (4) requiring Board to adopt rules regarding monitoring wells; in (6) substituted language including water well contractors and monitoring well constructors for "The board may establish a program for training water well drillers or prospective water well drillers and apprentices to more effectively carry out this chapter"; at end of (7) and (10) inserted "and monitoring well constructors"; and made minor changes in phraseology.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 538, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it requires the board of water well contractors to adopt rules to implement the provisions of this act.

This bill authorizes the board to license and provide training for persons constructing monitoring wells and to adopt rules regarding the construction, use, and abandonment of monitoring wells. The board's present jurisdiction is over wells intended for the location, diversion, artificial recharge, or acquisition of ground water. This bill is intended to clarify that the board's jurisdiction extends to wells that monitor ground water movement and quality. Monitoring wells can affect the ground water resource no less than production wells, and the increased use of monitoring wells requires that the board certify monitoring well constructors and adopt rules for monitoring well construction."

1985 Amendment: Inserted (3) requiring Board to adopt rules to establish construction standards and enforcement procedures; in (5) after "The board may", deleted "subject to 37-1-101 and 37-1-121"; inserted (6) requiring Board to regulate licensing, registration, and conduct of licensees; inserted (7) requiring Board to set fees; in (8) at end deleted "subject to 37-1-101(6)"; in (9)(a) after "contractors", inserted "and drillers"; in (9)(c) before "revoke", inserted "deny"; and inserted (10) requiring Board to pay its share of costs.

1985 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 728, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the bill amends 37-43-202 to require the board of water well contractors to adopt rules for specific water well construction standards. It is intended that any existing standards be substantially reviewed, modified, and incorporated into the new standards. It is further intended that the new standards should be modeled after the existing water well construction standards adopted by the Montana well drillers association and the United States environmental protection agency. It is the intent of the legislature that the act of transferring the board of water well contractors from the department of commerce to the department of natural resources and conservation may not be construed to abridge or otherwise restrict the existing authority and autonomy of the board of water well contractors."

1983 Amendment: Substituted reference to state special revenue fund for reference to earmarked revenue fund.

1989 Amendment: In definition of professional guide, after ““Professional guide””, inserted “and “guide”” and inserted (b) relating to a person who contracts independently as a guide; and made minor changes in phraseology.

1987 Amendment: In introductory clause substituted “chapter” for “part”; inserted definitions of license year and nonresident; deleted former (4) that read: “(4) “Outfitters’ council” means the Montana outfitters’ council provided for in 2-15-3403”; and made minor grammatical change.

Transfer of Agency: Section 10, Ch. 528, L. 1987, provided: “Transfer of agency — name change — duties transferred. (1) The Montana outfitters’ council is transferred to the department of commerce and is renamed the board of outfitters.

(2) The authority and functions of the department of fish, wildlife, and parks regarding licensing of outfitters and guides are transferred to the board of outfitters, and any reference in 87-4-122, 87-4-124, 87-4-125, 87-4-129, 87-4-131, and 87-4-143 to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks or to the department or director, meaning the department of fish, wildlife, and parks or the director of that department, is changed to the board, meaning the board of outfitters.”

1983 Amendment: In (3), following “person” deleted “persons, company, or corporation” and inserted clause creating exception from definition.

1981 Amendments: Chapter 170 added “for consideration” at the beginning of (3)(d); and added (7) defining participant.

Chapter 545 deleted definition of advisory council; changed license year in (1) from May 1 through April 30 of the next year to January 1 through December 31 of the same year; added “and accompanies such a party or person on an expedition for any of these purposes” to (3)(b); inserted “for consideration” at the beginning of (3)(d); inserted (4) defining outfitters’ council; and deleted ““Resident guide” means a resident who guides resident or nonresident friends for the purpose of hunting game animals without compensation.”

Case Notes

Traversing State Lands to Conduct Outfitting on Private Land as Not Constituting Outfitting on State Lands: The Weitzs owned a ranch, and within the boundaries of their land was state land that they leased. The Weitzs were using roads on their leased land to spot game and were traveling across the leased land on existing roads to get to their own property to hunt. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation concluded that the defendants were engaged in recreational use of state lands and were in violation of a Department rule prohibiting vehicle travel across state lands. The Supreme Court upheld the District Court’s decision that noted that the hearings examiner had acknowledged that no elk or deer had been killed, shot at, or pursued on leased state land by the defendants and therefore reversed the hearings examiner’s decision as being based upon faulty reasoning, conjecture, and speculation. The Supreme Court also upheld the lower court’s ruling that the Department’s application of the rule prohibiting travel across state lands by a lessee to conduct activity elsewhere was an overbroad and unlawful application of the rule. In addition, the Supreme Court held that crossing state lands to conduct outfitting on private lands does not constitute outfitting on state lands. Weitz v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 284 M 130, 943 P2d 990, 54 St. Rep. 807 (1997).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 543 in (5)(d) after "client" substituted "hunter use, as set forth in 37-47-316 and 37-47-317" for "hunting use" and after "plan" deleted "in order to determine if the proposal will cause an undue conflict with existing hunting use of the area, constituting a threat to the public health, safety, or welfare. The board may not approve a new operations plan or the proposed expansion of net client hunting use under the existing operations plan if it finds that the proposal will cause an undue conflict with existing hunting use of the area"; inserted (5)(e) requiring board to adopt rules establishing outfitter reporting requirements and requiring annual reports on actual leased acreage used and unused by clients; and inserted (7) requiring board to maintain records of actual clients served by certain Montana outfitters. Amendment effective April 30, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 328 in (4) inserted "guide standards"; in (5)(b), after "including", deleted "but not limited to" and after "licensure" inserted "as an outfitter, guide, or professional guide" and at beginning of second sentence substituted "Qualifications for outfitters" for "These qualifications", after "training" inserted "testing", and at end inserted "and the filing of an operations plan"; in (5)(c), before "health", inserted "public" and after "welfare" substituted "including evidence of qualification and licensure under this chapter for any person practicing or offering to practice as an outfitter, guide, or professional guide" for "of those persons using the services of outfitters and for the protection of landowners, the general public, and outfitters' employees, agents, and representatives"; inserted (5)(d) relating to rules setting standards for new operations plans and expansion of net client hunting use; at end of (6), after "outfitters", inserted "guides"; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 328, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because rulemaking authority is granted to the board of outfitters in 37-47-201 requiring the board to establish qualifications for two levels of guides and to review proposed operations plans and changes to operations plans.

The legislature intends that at a minimum the rules on professional guide qualifications address experience, and if the board considers it appropriate, additional training and a qualifying examination to ensure that licensed professional guides are qualified to safely provide services for compensation to clients of the endorsing outfitter.

The legislature intends that rules on operations plans be directed toward a reduction in new hunting uses of areas by outfitters when the new uses will cause undue conflict with existing hunting uses of the areas."

Severability: Section 23, Ch. 328, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 220 in (5)(b), in second sentence after "experience", inserted "in activities similar to the service to be provided"; at end of (5)(c) inserted "and outfitters' employees, agents, and representatives"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Severability: Section 18, Ch. 220, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 1, Ch. 143, L. 1991, repealed sec. 14, Ch. 528, L. 1987, which terminated the 1987 amendments to this section July 1, 1991. Effective March 25, 1991.

1987 Amendment: In introductory clause substituted "board" for "department"; deleted last sentence of (1) that read: "The costs of publication of the pamphlet shall be paid from the state special revenue fund, fish and game account"; in (2), after "government", deleted "through its appropriate agencies or instrumentalities"; and substituted (3) through (6) (see 1987 Session Law for text) for former (3) through (6) that read: "(3) establish a minimum of two meetings annually with the outfitters' council;

(4) consult with the outfitters' council to develop policy concerning the administration of outfitting;

(5) designate a warden with no conflict of interest whose primary duties are to administer outfitting and guiding laws and regulations;

(6) when the commission determines it necessary to protect the fishing resource, public health, public safety, or public welfare, establish and regulate a moratorium on either or both the Madison River or Big Hole River, the issuance of outfitter licenses for the purpose of float fishing as defined in 87-4-101(3)(c) except that those fishing outfitters licensed in 1980 may receive renewal licenses, if qualified. The total number of professional guide licenses endorsed by fishing outfitters under a moratorium may not be less than the total number issued in 1980."

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 528, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is submitted for this bill because the board of outfitters established in section 1 [2-15-3403] is required to adopt rules under section 4 [87-4-104] concerning the licensing of outfitters and guides. Because the licensing and enforcement authority is simply being transferred from the department of fish, wildlife, and parks to the board with no substantive change in requirements, it is intended that the board of outfitters should adopt rules substantially similar to those currently in place as adopted by the department."

1983 Amendment: Substituted reference to state special revenue fund for reference to earmarked revenue fund.

1981 Amendments: Chapter 490 added (6) relating to an outfitting moratorium on the Madison or Big Hole River.

Chapter 545 inserted "license" before "year" in second sentence of (1); changed "advisory council" to "outfitters' council" in (3) and (4); and deleted "or ex officio warden" from (5).

Attorney General's Opinions

Failure of Board of Outfitters to Adopt Required Rules — Ruling on Case-by-Case Basis Ruled Improper Implementation of Statute: Subsection (5)(d) of this section required the Board of Outfitters to adopt rules containing standards for review and approval of outfitter operation plans in order for the Board to determine whether a proposed outfitter operation would cause an undue conflict with existing hunting use that would constitute a threat to public health, safety, or welfare. The statutory requirement for the Board to adopt rules was sufficiently clear, definite, and certain that the failure of the Board to initially adopt the rules required by the statute and instead determine on a case-by-case basis whether the proposed use would cause "undue conflict" was not a proper implementation of the statute. 47 A.G. Op. 22 (1998).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 543, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, private property rights and free market principles will result in a certain amount of ebb and flow of outfitter presence statewide or in any particular geographical region; and

WHEREAS, approval or denial of an outfitter's request for expansion of client service base is predicated upon the state's broad power to regulate for the public health, welfare, and safety, which includes wildlife held in public trust, public hunting, private property rights, and private enterprise; and

WHEREAS, approval or denial of a net client hunter use expansion request must provide due process for outfitters and the opportunity for public comment under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act, including agency response to those public comments; and

WHEREAS, implementing the regulations necessary to meet the Legislature's goal of a reduction in new hunting use of areas by outfitters when the new use will cause undue conflict with existing hunting uses in the areas, providing necessary due process to outfitters, and providing for and responding to public comment will require time, staff, and resources not currently available in agency budgets."

Case Notes

Operating Business Across State Lines Not a Fundamental Right: The right to operate an outfitting business across state lines is not a fundamental right within the meaning of the Equal Protection Clause. In re Outfitter's License of Godfrey v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 193 M 304, 631 P2d 1265, 38 St. Rep. 661 (1981).

Outfitter's Residency Requirements Violative of Equal Protection: Prior to 1983 amendment of 87-4-122 (renumbered 37-47-302) and repeal of 87-4-126, in-state residency requirements for holders of an outfitter's license violated the Equal Protection Clause of the Montana Constitution. None of the reasons advanced by the state in defense of the statutes justified the inequities engendered by the statutes. Following St. v. Jack, 167 M 456, 539 P2d 726 (1975). Further, the two exceptions contained in the statutes bore little relationship to what the statute sought to accomplish. In re Outfitter's License of Godfrey v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 193 M 304, 631 P2d 1265, 38 St. Rep. 661 (1981).

Attorney General's Opinions

Statutory Qualifications Not Exclusive: A rule of the Board of Outfitters that requires certain experience as a condition to outfitter licensure and that may not be satisfied by an applicant based on experience in Montana prior to his 18th birthday is not inconsistent with this section, which conditions licensure on an applicant's being at least 18 years of age. 42 A.G. Case Notes

Three-Year Statute of Limitations Reasonable for Prosecution of Misdemeanor Fish and Game Violations — Equal Protection and Due Process Not Violated: Defendant was charged with five misdemeanor fish and game and outfitter violations that occurred nearly 2 years earlier. Although misdemeanor violations must generally be charged within 1 year, 45-1-205(5) and (6) allow charges for misdemeanor fish and game crimes to be brought within 3 years of violation. Defendant contended that the extended statute of limitations for charging fish and game crimes violated equal protection and due process guarantees. The District Court reviewed the legislative history of 45-1-205(5) and (6) and concluded that the extended statute of limitations served a reasonable relation to the proper legislative purpose of protecting wildlife and that in order to effectively enforce fish and games laws, additional time to discover and investigate fish and game violations was warranted. The Supreme Court agreed. A separate class of misdemeanors for fish and game violations did not violate equal protection because all persons who commit such crimes are in a similarly situated class and subject to the same treatment. Further, because fish and game and outfitter violations sometimes require investigation over several hunting seasons and involve perpetrators who reside out of state, an extended statute of limitations is a reasonable exercise of the state's legitimate police power in preserving wildlife and does not violate substantive due process. St. v. Egdorf, 2003 MT 264, 317 M 436, 77 P3d 517 (2003).

Application of Federal Lacey Act to Outfitting and Guiding — Statute of Limitations on Charges of Conspiracy: While a prosecution under the federal Lacey Act, 16 U.S.C. §3371, et seq., which prohibits transportation or acquisition in interstate commerce of wildlife in violation of state laws, may not properly be had for the substantive acts of selling guiding services and hunting permits, a prosecution can be maintained for conspiracies to violate the Act while providing outfitting and guiding services, such as arranging for out-of-state hunters to use elk licenses and permits belonging to other hunters, knowing that any elk taken would be transported out of state. The Act applied when evidence was sufficient to establish the involvement of defendant, a hunting guide and outfitter, in a conspiracy to transport elk in interstate commerce in violation of Montana law. Further, the 5-year "catchall" statute of limitations set out in 18 U.S.C. §3282 applied to charges of conspiring to violate the Act. U.S. v. Thomas, 887 F2d 1341 (9th Cir. 1989), distinguishing U.S. v. Stenberg, 803 F2d 422 (9th Cir. 1986).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (2)(e), near end after "the initial", deleted "annual". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted former (2)(d) that read: "(d) rules prescribing requirements for continuing education to be met by certified public accountants and licensed public accountants, in order to maintain their professional knowledge and competence, as a condition to continuing in the practice of public accounting. In issuing rules and individual orders regarding continuing education, the board in its discretion:

(i) may, among other things, use or rely upon guidelines and pronouncements of recognized educational and professional associations;

(ii) may prescribe the content, duration, and organization of courses; and

(iii) shall take into account the accessibility to applicants of such continuing education as it may require and any impediments to interstate practice of public accounting that may result from differences in such requirements in other states"; deleted former (2)(f) that read: "(f) internal rules considered necessary to initiate and conduct investigations and protect the confidences of the client of any certified public accountant or licensed public accountant subjected to board disciplinary proceedings"; and made minor changes in style.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

1983 Amendment: In (2)(c) inserted "as provided in 37-50-305"; deleted former (2)(f) that read "rules setting forth the terms, not exceeding 2 years, and areas of experience required for certification as a certified public accountant and licensing as a licensed public accountant"; inserted (2)(f) referring to internal rules; inserted (2)(g) referring to rules defining accounting experience requirements; inserted (2)(h) referring to other rules required to enforce chapter; deleted (3), which read: "At least 60 days prior to the adoption of a rule or amendment, the department shall mail copies of the proposed rule or amendment to each holder of a certificate or license issued under 37-50-314, with a notice advising him of the proposed effective date of the rule or amendment and requesting that he submit his comments on it at least 15 days prior to the effective date. These comments are advisory only. The department's certificate of mailing to licensed accountants is conclusive proof thereof."

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 335, L. 1983, provided: "This bill requires a statement of intent because it requires rulemaking by the Board of Public Accountants.

Under new subsections added to section 37-50-203, the Board must adopt internal rules to preserve the confidences of clients of investigated public accountants, rules defining experience requirements, and rules for investigations and enforcement of the law and board rules. The internal rules required are intended to prevent disclosure by board members and employees of facts learned through board investigations which the client of the investigated party, who may be unaware of the investigation, never consented to. The Legislature believes this to be a sensitive area, as investigations may or may not result in civil and criminal charges and may even result in legal action by others against the client. Rules governing experience required by the Board must require only so much experience as is necessary for the protection of the public and must not impede access to the profession by those persons reasonably well qualified. Enforcement rules must create a positive enforcement program which will require application of continuing education principles for persons who, among others, may be close to violations of the law but for which other disciplinary action is not warranted."

Existing Orders and Rules Effective Until Revoked or Modified: Section 22, Ch. 684, L. 1979, provided: "All orders and rules relating to the practice of accounting made by the board of public accountants prior to July 1, 1979, remain in effect until revoked or modified in accordance with law."

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 489 (Ch. 684, L. 1979) provided in part: "1. The Board may establish rules setting standards for determining a practitioner's competency in specialized fields of accounting. It is contemplated the rules should address the following:

- (a) the fields of specialized practice such as auditing of financial institutions, auditing of governmental entities, estate tax planning and other fields requiring specialized knowledge;
- (b) types of programs required for determining competency such as classroom instruction, seminars, homestudy, experience, examination or any combination thereof;
- (c) standards for determining programs to be approved for fulfillment of the requirements such as adequacy of facilities, qualifications of instructors, course content and endorsement by other regulatory agencies or professional or educational groups;
- (d) the number of hours of instruction or experience, if any, required;
- (e) contents of examinations, if any, required;
- (f) alternative methods of fulfilling the requirements such as intrafirm or company programs and a provision for waiver of the requirements for hardship.

The rules may not prohibit the person holding a license or certificate from practicing in any area or field of public accounting nor affect his ability to acquire annual renewal of his certificate or license.

2. The Board may establish rules governing education requirements for certification or licensure. It is contemplated that the rules should supplement and interpret 37-50-305 as amended by the bill by:

- (a) making determinations as to recognized colleges and universities. The Board may use the University System schools of business as a yardstick;
- (b) determining standards for accepting college graduates with majors other than accounting, including but not limited to:
 - (i) the minimum number of accounting credits required;
 - (ii) subjects of courses allowed as supplementary business-related courses; and
 - (iii) the total number of credits required in business administration.

3. The Board may adopt rules prescribing continuing education for continued practice in public accounting. It is contemplated that they should address the following:

- (a) types of programs required for determining knowledge and competence such as classroom instruction, seminars, homestudy, experience, examination, or any combination thereof;
- (b) standards for determining programs to be approved for fulfillment of the requirements such as adequacy of facilities, qualifications of instructors, course content and endorsement by other regulatory agencies or professional or national groups;
- (c) the number of hours of instruction or experience, if any, required;
- (d) contents of examinations, if any, required;
- (e) alternative methods of fulfilling the requirements such as intrafirm or intracompany programs or prospective programs of study;
- (f) methods of monitoring and enforcement;
- (g) the rules may not deny a person the ability to acquire annual renewal of his certificate or license if continuing education requirements constitute a hardship due to inaccessibility to programs or interference with an interstate practice;

(h) the rules should reflect standards for continuing education programs to ensure equal access, reasonable cost, exceptions for financial or physical hardships or impediments and reference to areas commonly and not rarely practiced by those engaged in public accounting.

4. The Board may establish rules governing partnerships and corporations practicing public accountancy. It is contemplated that the rules should address the following:

(a) the financial ability of a partnership or corporation to protect the public from damages caused by negligence or malpractice, if any;

(b) the method of establishing financial ability such as unimpaired capital, professional liability insurance, self-insurance or mutual insurance, or agreement;

(c) other areas of regulation regarding firm style, name, title, affiliations, and joint and several liability of members or shareholders are governed by existing statutory law regulating partnerships and professional corporations.

5. The Board may establish rules setting forth terms, not exceeding two years, and areas of experience for original certification or licensure. It is contemplated that the rules should address the following:

(a) the duration of experience required, not to exceed two years;

(b) the areas of experience such as private, public or governmental accounting, or accounting experience as an educator, researcher, publisher or military serviceman, or combination thereof;

(c) the rules should not discriminate between the areas of experience."

Saving Clause: Section 14, Ch. 375, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 123 in (1) in second sentence after “37-50-313” substituted “shall” for “may”; in (2) at end substituted “certified public accountants pursuant to the requirements of 37-50-330 unless it is registered as required under 37-50-335” for “certified public accountants unless it is registered under 37-50-331 or 37-50-332, whichever is applicable, and all of its offices in this state for the practice of public accounting are maintained and registered as required under 37-50-335”; in (4) near end after “registered” deleted “under 37-50-331, 37-50-332, 37-50-333, or 37-50-334, whichever is applicable, and all of its offices in this state for the practice of public accounting are maintained and registered”; in (5) in second sentence after “37-50-313” substituted “shall” for “may” and at end inserted phrase relating use of “EA” by an enrolled agent; in (7) at end substituted “corporation conforms to the requirements of 37-50-330 and is registered as required under 37-50-335” for “corporation is registered under 37-50-331, 37-50-332, 37-50-333, or 37-50-334 and all of its offices in this state for the practice of public accounting are maintained and registered as required under 37-50-335”; in (8) at end of first sentence substituted “corporation that has been formed subject to the provisions of 37-50-330 and registered under 37-50-335” for “corporation registered under 37-50-331, 37-50-332, 37-50-333, or 37-50-334”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1983 Amendment: At end of first sentence of (1), substituted “unless such person holds a current certificate as a public accountant under this chapter.” for “unless such person has received a certificate as a certified public accountant in some state and is certified under 37-50-302, 37-50-310, or 37-50-311 and all of such person’s offices in this state for the practice of public accounting are maintained and registered as required under 37-50-335.”; at end of (3) substituted “unless such person holds a current license as a licensed public accountant under this chapter.” for “unless such person is licensed as a public accountant under this chapter, holds a current license issued under 37-50-314, and all of such person’s offices in this state for the practice of public accounting are maintained and registered as required under 37-50-335 or unless such person has received a certificate as a certified public accountant in some state, holds a current license issued under 37-50-314, and all of such person’s offices in this state for the practice of public accounting are maintained and registered as required under 37-50-335.”; in (5) inserted “who has registered under 37-50-313” after “However, a foreign accountant”; in (6) substituted “permit” for “license” before “issued under 37-50-314”.

1981 Amendment: Substituted “his country” for “this country” in (5).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted (2) through (5) that read: "(2) After the expiration of the 3-year period immediately following the effective date of a board rule establishing continuing education requirements, each application for renewal of a permit by a person who has held his certificate or license for 3 years or more must be accompanied or supported by evidence satisfactory to the board of fulfillment of such requirements during the 3-year period immediately preceding the application.

(3) The board may in its discretion waive the requirement stated in subsection (2) if the applicant agrees to follow a particular program or schedule of continuing education agreeable to the board.

(4) The board may relax or suspend continuing education requirements for an applicant who certifies that he does not intend to engage in the practice of public accounting and for an applicant who cannot fulfill the requirement due to individual hardship.

(5) Subject to subsections (3) and (4), the board may revoke, suspend, or refuse to renew the permit of an applicant who fails to furnish evidence of having met the continuing education requirements established by the board"; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: In (1) substituted language, providing that a public accountant must have a current permit which must be issued by the Department to an applicant who holds a certificate as a certified public accountant and complies with chapter requirements, for former text that read: "Annual certificates and licenses to engage in the practice of public accounting in this state shall be issued by the department to certified public accountants and to licensed public accountants. There is an annual certificate or license renewal fee in an amount to be determined by the board. Annual certificates and licenses expire on December 31 of each year and may be renewed for a period of 1 year by certified public accountants and licensed public accountants in good standing on payment of the annual renewal fee."; deleted former (2), which read: "A person who fails to renew his license or certificate shall promptly surrender it to the board upon request."; in (2) inserted "of a permit" after "renewal"; in (5) substituted "permit" for "certificate or license"; inserted (6) requiring current annual permit to be displayed.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 489 (Ch. 684, L. 1979) provided in part: "Section 13 allows the Board to prescribe a reasonable annual renewal fee. It is intended that the fee not exceed an amount necessary to meet administrative costs."

Construction of Inconsistent Statutes: Statutes relating to the Board of Public Accountants, contained in Title 37, ch. 50, appear to have been amended by implication by the Executive Reorganization Act of 1971, now codified as part of Titles 2, 37, and 39, thereby transferring the duties specified in 37-1-101 and 37-1-121 from the Board of Public Accountants to the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing (now Department of Labor and Industry) and the director thereof. Where two acts of the Legislature are inconsistent on the same subject, the prior statute is to be treated as repealed by the subsequent statute. 35 A.G. Op. 58 (1974).

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

Statute of Limitations Barring Professional Negligence Claim Against Accountant Who Entered Business With Client: Brevig's company executed a cattle share agreement with Brevig's accountant wherein the accountant purchased cattle and bulls, paid taxes on the livestock, and agreed to supply labor for the operation of the herd. In turn, the company agreed to manage the herd, cover certain expenses, market the stock, and maintain herd records. The partnership split calves born to the herd, 60% to the company and 40% to the accountant. The arrangement was profitable for both parties and produced appropriate returns on the accountant's investment. Brevig later argued that it was unethical for the accountant to go into business with the partnership because the partnership was one of the accountant's clients. The 3-year statute of limitations in 27-2-204 barred Brevig's negligence claim with respect to the cattle share agreement because the claim of professional negligence was not filed within 3 years from the time that the agreement was executed. *McCormick v. Chapter Administrative Rules

Title 8, chapter 58, ARM Board of Realty Regulation.

Chapter Case Notes

Counterclaim for Payment of Commission Remanded Along With Claims for Fraud, Negligent Misrepresentation, Breach of Contract, and Breach of Covenant of Good Faith: May brought an action against a Bozeman real estate company and a real estate broker, alleging fraud, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress, negligent misrepresentation, and professional negligence. The defendants counterclaimed for payment of their commission, and the District Court granted summary judgment for the defendants and against May on all issues. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court on several of May's claims and remanded them to the District Court. The Supreme Court also held that the defendants' counterclaim for their commission, although not briefed by the parties, was so inextricably connected to the facts of those of May's claims remanded to the District Court that the counterclaim should also be remanded to the District Court for determination along with May's remaining claims. May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 302 M 326, 15 P3d 1179, 57 St. Rep. 1256 (2000).

Professional Negligence — Expert Testimony Required to Establish Standard of Care — Statutory Standard Inapplicable: May sued a Bozeman real estate company and real estate agent over the sale of his service station and alleged professional negligence on the part of the agent as one of his claims for relief. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's holding that the defendants were entitled to summary judgment because May had not listed an expert witness to give expert testimony to establish the standard of care for the agent. The Supreme Court distinguished Durbin v. Ross, 276 M 463, 916 P2d 758 (1996), and relied upon Newville v. St., 267 M 237, 883 P2d 793 (1994), reasoning that real estate sales is among the professions requiring special knowledge and that a lay jury could not pass judgment on the question of whether an individual correctly used that knowledge without the assistance of expert testimony. The Supreme Court also held that inasmuch as 37-51-313 had not been enacted until after the instant case arose, the statute could not be relied on to provide express duties of the agent. May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 302 M 326, 15 P3d 1179, 57 St. Rep. 1256 (2000).

Real Estate Sale — Alleged Breach of Fiduciary Duties Held Repetitious of Other Claims: May brought an action against a Bozeman real estate company and agent, claiming that defendants breached their fiduciary duty to him and also alleging fraud, professional negligence, negligent misrepresentation, and bad faith. The Supreme Court held that the District Court properly dismissed the claim for breach of fiduciary duties, which May alleged on the basis of Durbin v. Ross, 276 M 463, 916 P2d 758 (1996), because that claim was based upon the same facts as the other claims, was therefore repetitious of those other claims, and added nothing to May's claims for relief. May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 302 M 326, 15 P3d 1179, 57 St. Rep. 1256 (2000).

Real Estate Sale — Disclosure Statement Not Susceptible to Violation — Standard Listing Agreement Violation: In an action against a realtor for breach of contract, May alleged violation of both a document entitled "Disclosure Regarding Types of Real Estate Agency Relationships Available" (disclosure statement), listing the duties of a real estate agent, and a "Standard Listing Contract". The Supreme Court held that the disclosure statement was not a contract and could not serve as the basis for a breach of contract action. The Supreme Court also held that the Standard Listing Contract could be violated and that May had sufficiently alleged breach of a specific provision of that contract, that provision being one that the broker was employed to find a buyer ready and willing to acquire the property on the terms stated in the contract, to survive a motion for summary judgment. May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 302 M 326, 15 P3d 1179, 57 St. Rep. 1256 (2000).

Qualifications of Real Estate Experts — Differing Valuation: At a hearing concerning the valuation and division of property in the dissolution of Maureen and Joseph's marriage, an agricultural real estate broker testified for Maureen that the parties' ranch was worth $398,000 to $400,000, while a certified and licensed property appraiser testified for Joseph that the ranch was worth $182,500. Joseph contended that the District Court erred in accepting the value of the ranch as testified to by the real estate broker because the broker had no experience as a real property appraiser. Citing Jim's Excavating Serv., Inc. v. HKM Associates, 265 M 494, 878 P2d 248 (1994), the Supreme Court held that whether an adequate foundation has been established for the admission of expert testimony is an issue largely within the discretion of the District Court and that the District Court did not abuse its discretion when it relied upon the testimony of the real estate broker. The Supreme Court therefore affirmed the part of the District Court's order that valued the parties' ranch at $400,000. In re Marriage of Ortiz, 282 M 500, 938 P2d 1308, 54 St. Rep. 446 (1997).

Sale Not Occurring — Broker Entitled to Commission Based on Terms of Contract: Language in a listing agreement was clear and unambiguous in stating that a broker was entitled to a commission upon procuring a buyer who was "ready and willing to purchase" and who entered into a written agreement to make the purchase. The District Court did not err in granting summary judgment in favor of the broker when the seller was obligated to pay the commission even though the proposed sale did not go through. Sayegusa v. Rogers, 256 M 269, 846 P2d 1005, 50 St. Rep. 89 (1993), followed in Johnson v. Nyhart, 269 M 379, 889 P2d 1170, 52 St. Rep. 37 (1995).

Variation From Terms of Listing Contract — No Entitlement to Commission: When differences in the sale offers produced by a real estate broker varied substantially from the terms of the listing contract, the broker was not entitled to a commission on the sale of the property. Watson v. Fultz, 239 M 364, 782 P2d 361, 46 St. Rep. 1751 (1989).

Commission Reduction Agreement Not Breach of Fiduciary Duty: Cady listed his ranch for sale with Ussin, a realtor. Ussin found a buyer in Ehly. Ussin advised Ehly that Cady would not accept Ehly's offer but that Ussin would reduce his commission to make a sale. The agreement entered was that Ussin would reduce his commission by the amount between what Cady wanted and what Ehly wanted to pay. This was not communicated to Cady. A buy-sell was entered, and Cady later breached. He refused to pay Ussin his commission. The District Court awarded Ussin his commission. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that the fiduciary duty of a realtor to the seller is breached if: (1) a seller is foiled or deceived by the contract or does not understand the contract; or (2) full disclosure of all pertinent facts is not made by the broker. The court held that although arguably Ussin had breached his duty to Cady by not disclosing all pertinent facts, there was no damage to Cady. The flow of money to Cady was the same regardless of the commission reduction agreement. Cady suffered no prejudice or damage from the agreement. Ussin was entitled to his commission. Ehly v. Cady, 212 M 82, 687 P2d 687, 41 St. Rep. 1611 (1984).

Duty of Broker to Disclose: The fiduciary relationship which exists between a broker and his client imposed upon plaintiff a duty to verbally disclose a number of facts which were not disclosed verbally, although contained in the listing agreement. These included the fact that defendants could not withdraw plaintiff's authority under the agreement without forfeiting a sizable commission, and could not sell the property on their own during the term of the agreement. The District Court erred in finding there was no fraud involved in the execution of the employment contract. Lyle v. Moore, 183 M 274, 599 P2d 336, 36 St. Rep. 1307 (1979), followed in Watson v. Fultz, 239 M 364, 782 P2d 361, 46 St. Rep. 1751 (1989).

Scope of Act — Honest Mistake: The Real Estate License Act of 1963 (Ch. 250, L. 1963) should be construed to lend maximum efficacy to the enforcement of the fiduciary relationships involved in the real estate profession. However, willful misconduct must be present as opposed to an "honest" mistake, regardless of the argument that another course of conduct or the lack of some negligence would have avoided the situation complained of. Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988, 35 St. Rep. 1956 (1978), partially overruled in Cechovic v. Hardin & Associates, Inc., 273 M 104, 902 P2d 520, 52 St. Rep. 854 (1995).

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 483 in definition of department substituted reference to department of labor and industry for reference to department of commerce and substituted "part 17" for "part 18". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Chapter 492 deleted former definition of broker associate that read: "Broker associate" means a broker who associates, as an employee or independent contractor, with a broker owner and does not own an interest in a real estate firm"; deleted former definition of broker owner that read: "Broker owner" means a broker who owns or has a financial interest in a real estate firm"; in definition of in-house buyer agent designate and in-house seller agent designate near beginning after "broker" deleted "associate" and in two places after "broker" deleted "owner"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 565 inserted definitions of adverse material fact, buyer, buyer agent, buyer broker agreement, buyer subagent, dual agent, in-house buyer agent designate, in-house seller agent designate, listing agreement, negotiations, real estate transaction, seller, seller agent, seller subagent, and statutory broker; in definition of broker associate, after "associates", inserted "as an employee or independent contractor"; substituted salesperson for salesman as defined term; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 142 inserted definition of property manager; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1991 Amendment: Inserted (3)(f) to include in definition of broker one who, for a fee, commission, or other compensation, refers a person to another to buy or sell real estate; and in (3)(g) changed subsection reference.

1989 Amendment: Throughout (3) made minor changes in grammar, phraseology, and style; in (3)(a), before first occurrence of "valuable consideration", deleted "a fee, commission, or other"; in (3)(b) substituted "disposition of real estate for consideration" for "disposition thereof at a salary or a fee, commission, or any other consideration"; in (3)(d), at beginning, inserted "makes the advertising, sale, lease, or other real estate information available by public display to potential buyers"; and inserted (3)(e) relating to locating or obtaining real estate.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (1) defining account.

2004 Annotations to the MCA

1981 Amendment: Substituted "department of commerce" for "department of professional and occupational licensing" in (5); changed internal references to the department and the board.

Case Notes

Officers of National Realty Corporation Not Brokers — Distinction Between "Fee" and "Commission": The officers of a national corporation that provides licensed brokers with catalogs, confidential listings, and referrals for a commission received only after a sale are not acting as "brokers". The forbidden act is the collection of a fee for advertisement of real estate for sale, and there is a distinction between a fee and a commission collected only after an actual sale. Bradt v. Strout Realty, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 1259, 36 St. Rep. 1989 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Questions of Law: Whether plaintiff was doing business in Montana within purview of statute governing foreign corporations or was carrying on business of a real estate broker were questions of law under 26-1-201. Union Interchange, Inc. v. Parker, 138 M 348, 357 P2d 339 (1960).

Attorney General's Opinions

License Not Required for Advertising Real Estate Information: The mere advertisement of a seller's property for a fee charged to the seller does not constitute an act regulated by real estate licensing law. Therefore, a person is not required to be licensed as a real estate broker or salesperson in order to obtain and organize information from potential sellers of real estate and to advertise the information to interested potential buyers for a fee charged to the seller only. 43 A.G. Op. 8 (1989), distinguishing 34 A.G. Op. 23 (1972).

Licensing Regulations Not Applicable to Finder's Fee: A person is not required to be licensed as a real estate broker or salesperson in order to receive a fee, commission, or compensation for referring the name of a potential buyer of real estate. Further, a broker's license should not be revoked or suspended for paying a finder's fee when the payee does not perform any negotiation or other services regulated by real estate licensing law. 43 A.G. Op. 8 (1989), distinguishing 34 A.G. Op. 23 (1972).

"Broker" and "Salesman" (now "Salesperson") — Scope of Definitions: The definitions of "broker" and "salesman" (now "salesperson") include individuals engaged in the business of renting or leasing real property, transacting interests in condominiums, providing lists of real property rentals, or arranging fee ownership time-sharing of real property. 40 A.G. Op. 54 (1984).

Computer Referral Service: Corporations operating a computer referral service for the purpose of promoting the sale, lease, or disposition of real estate within the state must comply with the licensing requirements of Title 37, ch. 51, part 3, in order to conduct operations in Montana. 34 A.G. Op. 23 (1971).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 251 in (1), near middle of introductory clause after "section", substituted "must identify" for "shall constitute"; in (1)(b), near beginning before "special", deleted "duly executed"; inserted (1)(i) exempting a person who performs acts with respect to certain right-of-way transfers, condemnations, or governmental or tribal permits from licensure requirements; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Amendment: Pursuant to sec. 6, Ch. 565, L. 1995, the Code Commissioner in (1) substituted "salesperson" for "salesman".

1989 Amendments: Chapter 180, in (1)(b), after "executed", inserted "special or general", after "authorizing the" deleted "final consummation of any contract for the", and after "real estate" inserted language clarifying that attorney-in-fact exemption from licensing requirement does not apply to a person who regularly, consistently, or for commission or consideration participates in a real estate transaction for another in conjunction with business or to avoid licensing requirements.

Chapter 314 near beginning of (1), before "compensation", deleted "a commission or"; inserted (2) excepting general circulation print and broadcast media; and made minor changes in grammar and style.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 180, L. 1989, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds that there presently is an attorney-in-fact exemption from the requirement that a person be licensed as a real estate broker or salesman [now salesperson]; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds that there is a potential use of the attorney-in-fact exemption by certain persons on a regular or consistent basis, thereby allowing those persons to avoid license requirements and negating adequate safeguards to the public; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds the present attorney-in-fact exemption is limited to one based on a special power of attorney; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds that the attorney-in-fact exemption from the requirement that a person be licensed as a real estate broker or salesman [now salesperson] should be expanded to include a general power of attorney.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds it appropriate to expand the attorney-in-fact exemption to include one based on a general power of attorney and to limit all attorney-in-fact exemptions to occasional use under circumstances in which it is reasonably certain that adequate safeguards to the public are maintained."

Case Notes

Agent Seller — Bond Coverage: Members of the public have the right to rely upon express or implied representations of a licensed real estate agent or broker, although the agent is in fact the owner of the property being sold. Therefore, the surety is bound by such express or implied representations, and the bond must cover such judgments entered. Twite v. W. Sur. Co., 176 M 286, 577 P2d 1219 (1978).

Advertising Not Dealing: Advertising for purpose of bringing buyers and sellers together is not dealing in real estate for license purposes. Union Interchange, Inc. v. Parker, 138 M 348, 357 P2d 339 (1960).

Isolated Transactions: Under former provision (sec. 3, Ch. 195, L. 1921, repealed by Ch. 250, L. 1963) defining real estate broker and setting forth classes exempted from Ch. 195, L. 1921, provision similar to present 37-51-401 had no application to one who acted as a broker in connection with a single transaction only. Harbolt v. Hensen, 78 M 228, 253 P 257 (1927).

Case Notes

No Board Requirement to Rule With Particularity on Objections and Exceptions: Proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law as prepared by a hearing examiner detailed the factual basis for his conclusion that the Board of Realty Regulation had power to suspend or revoke Sorini's broker's license. Prior to her appearance before the full Board, Sorini submitted her contentions of claimed error in the findings and conclusions. The Board considered these contentions and voted unanimously to adopt the findings and conclusions of the hearing examiner. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that Sorini was entitled to nothing further and that the Board was not required to specifically state in writing that her exceptions to the proposed findings were insufficient. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Penalty Not Unusual or Unwarranted: Sorini argued that the revocation of her broker's license was based on a finding by a hearing examiner that the mortgage on her client's home was foreclosed due to her actions. The violations with which she was charged did not include causing the foreclosure, and she maintained that she was punished to an unusual and unwarranted degree for the violations with which she was charged. The Supreme Court noted that the Board of Realty Regulation found that Sorini had violated three statutory prohibitions under 37-51-321, any one of which would result in revocation or suspension at the Board's discretion. There were enough facts before the Board to allow revocation without considering whether Sorini caused the foreclosure. The court held that the penalty was not unusual or unwarranted. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Revocation of Real Estate Broker's License — No Denial of Rights at Administrative Hearing — Hearing Examiner and Board Attorney as Deputy Attorneys General: A hearing examiner recommended that Sorini's real estate broker's license be revoked for violations of 37-51-321. On appeal, Sorini argued that she was denied her rights at the administrative hearing because both the hearing examiner and the attorney for the Board of Realty Regulation were deputies in the Attorney General's office; however, she failed to submit any proof to support this allegation. The Supreme Court noted that 2-4-611 establishes the manner in which a party may file an affidavit for disqualification of a hearing examiner, holding that in the absence of an affidavit it was not proper to raise the issue on appeal. The court agreed that having a greater separation of prosecutorial and decisionmaking functions would eliminate an appearance of impropriety, but found nothing to warrant a reversal of the District Court. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Part 3 Licensing

Part Case Notes

Intentional Violation Not Required to Recover Under Real Estate License Laws: Saville, the seller, and her realtor were sued by the purchasers of her property. The suit was based on negligent misrepresentation of the boundaries of the property by the realtor. Saville cross-claimed for indemnification against the realtor for any judgment obtained against her by the plaintiffs and was awarded indemnification by the jury. Hardin, the realtor, appealed, arguing that Saville was not an aggrieved person as contemplated by this chapter. The Supreme Court held that Saville did not have to show that the misrepresentation made by the realtor was a malicious or intentional violation of the chapter in order to be an aggrieved person under the chapter. Cechovic v. Hardin & Associates, Inc., 273 M 104, 902 P2d 520, 52 St. Rep. 854 (1995), partially overruling Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988 (1978).

Case Notes

No Recovery When Seller Owns Property: The plaintiffs sought to recover for a real estate loss from the state's real estate recovery account. The plaintiffs had been part of a partnership in which the general partner had fraudulently sold some of his own property in a manner that caused the partnership to lose money. The Supreme Court held that when an owner sells his own property, no real estate license is required and therefore under the terms of the statute, no recovery is available from the state's fund. (Decided prior to 1989 amendments.) Yellowstone Valley Properties v. Bd. of Realty Regulation, 243 M 241, 794 P2d 341, 47 St. Rep. 1209 (1990).

Advice to Broker by Nonlicensed Corporate Employee: The act of a nonlicensed employee of a national corporation, whose job was to procure brokers to enter into contracts with the corporation, in accompanying a broker to get a real estate listing and in advising the broker how to set up a "net listing" did not put the corporation out of compliance with this section. The employee was not an "officer" of the corporation in the usual sense, and his actions did not amount to the negotiation of a listing. Bradt v. Strout Realty, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 1259, 36 St. Rep. 1989 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Licensing of Corporate Officers: It is not required that every officer of a corporation be licensed, only those officers who "perform the functions of a broker". By way of illustration, the president of a Montana corporation who himself did no real estate business of any kind but simply managed the office and general corporate affairs would not need to be licensed. The purpose of Montana law is to require that the buying and selling of real estate be handled by persons who are licensed. Bradt v. Strout Realty, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 1259, 36 St. Rep. 1989 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Advertising Not Dealing: Advertising for purpose of bringing buyers and sellers together is not dealing in real estate for license purposes. Union Interchange, Inc. v. Parker, 138 M 348, 357 P2d 339 (1960).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 deleted former (6) that read: "(6) A broker's license must indicate whether the broker is a broker owner or a broker associate"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Pursuant to sec. 6, Ch. 565, L. 1995, the Code Commissioner throughout section substituted "salesperson" or "salesperson's" for "salesman" or "salesman's".

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2)(e) requiring applicant for broker's license to furnish evidence of completion of required course of study; and inserting (4)(a)(iv) requiring applicant for salesman's license to furnish evidence of completion of required course of study.

1981 Amendment: Deleted former subsection (2)(a) requiring U.S. citizenship.

Citizenship Qualifications — Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 341, L. 1981, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislative Audit Committee in its sunset reviews determined that a few professions and occupations require citizenship as a qualification for licensure; and

WHEREAS, a number of courts, including the United States Supreme Court, have found citizenship qualifications for licensure unconstitutional.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this act to delete citizenship requirements as a qualification for licensure by those boards presently having a citizenship requirement."

Case Notes

Charges of Incompetence and Untrustworthiness Not Determined by Issuance of Broker's License: A complaint was filed against Sorini, a licensed real estate salesperson, for violations of 37-51-321 relating to her competence and trustworthiness. After charges were filed, she was allowed to sit for the real estate broker's examination and was subsequently issued a broker's license. On appeal, she argued that the question of her competence or trustworthiness became moot because the Board of Realty Regulation was required to consider those characteristics before issuing her a broker's license under this section. The Supreme Court noted that while the Board is required by statute to determine that an applicant for a broker's license meets certain standards, in the absence of evidence that the Board considered the pending charges, the determination that she met the standards of conduct was not dispositive of the pending charges against her. The court found no such evidence in the record and concluded that the issue of competence and trustworthiness as raised by the charges was not determined by the issuance of the real estate broker's license. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

No Board Requirement to Rule With Particularity on Objections and Exceptions: Proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law as prepared by a hearing examiner detailed the factual basis for his conclusion that the Board of Realty Regulation had power to suspend or revoke Sorini's broker's license. Prior to her appearance before the full Board, Sorini submitted her contentions of claimed error in the findings and conclusions. The Board considered these contentions and voted unanimously to adopt the findings and conclusions of the hearing examiner. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that Sorini was entitled to nothing further and that the Board was not required to specifically state in writing that her exceptions to the proposed findings were insufficient. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 170 inserted (4) regarding submission of proof of completion of continuing education; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1), at beginning, substituted "License fees" for "Except as provided in subsection (2), annual fees" and substituted "licensure period at a time prescribed by department rule" for "year during the month of December of each year" and in second sentence, near beginning, substituted "annual" for "renewal" and substituted "the expiration date of the licensure period" for "January 1"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The board may by rule change the annual renewal and automatic cancellation dates provided for in subsection (1)"; in (2), after "failing to remit the", deleted "annual"; in (2) and (2)(a) substituted "the expiration date" for "January 1"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1987 Amendment: Inserted (3) establishing procedure for reinstatement following lapse for failure to remit renewal fee; and inserted (4) allowing for late charge for failure to timely renew license.

1985 Amendment: In (1) inserted exception clause at beginning of subsection; and inserted (2) allowing Board by rule to change annual renewal and automatic cancellation dates.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 275, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is necessary for this bill because section 1 [37-51-310(2)] grants the board of realty regulation rulemaking authority to change the annual renewal and automatic cancellation dates for real estate brokers' and salesmen's licenses.

The department of commerce [now department of labor and industry], bureau of business and professional licensing, of which the board of realty regulation is a part, is contemplating a reorganization to facilitate services to the public and to the professional licensees.

Toward that end, the reorganization contemplates the possibility of computerizing renewals of all licensees. Because most boards tend to renew by December 31 of each year, it is contemplated that this would create a tremendous workload at one time of the year and leave a comparative time of ease thereafter.

This bill is intended to allow the board to adopt by rule a change in that renewal and cancellation period to better balance the workload throughout the year."

1985 Amendment: In (2) near middle of second sentence, after "need not", substituted remainder of sentence for "file a bond with the department as provided in 37-51-304"; and deleted former (3) that read: "The board shall adopt a schedule of fees. However, a fee once set for one of the items for which a fee is charged cannot be increased or decreased until at least 1 year has passed since the fee for that particular item was last increased or decreased".

1983 Amendment: Substituted reference to state special revenue fund for reference to earmarked revenue fund.

1981 Amendment: Deleted "following" after "The" at the beginning of (1); inserted "prescribed by the board" after "fees" near the beginning of (1); deleted subsections (1)(a) through (1)(k) which specified the maximum fees for various licenses; substituted "charge an annual fee" for "charge a $5 annual fee" in the first sentence of (2); and deleted "within the limits set by this section" after "adopt a schedule of fees" at the end of (3).

witness to give expert testimony to establish the standard of care for the agent. The Supreme Court distinguished Durbin v. Ross, 276 M 463, 916 P2d 758 (1996), and relied upon Newville v. St., 267 M 237, 883 P2d 793 (1994), reasoning that real estate sales is among the professions requiring special knowledge and that a lay jury could not pass judgment on the question of whether an individual correctly used that knowledge without the assistance of expert testimony. The Supreme Court also held that inasmuch as this section had not been enacted until after the instant case arose, the statute could not be relied on to provide express duties of the agent. *May v. A disclosure must contain substantially the following information:

(a) Seller agent disclosure to the seller: "(Name of seller agent) will be representing you as your agent or subagent in the sale of your property located at (address of property). Your seller agent is obligated to you as enumerated below. If your seller agent is also representing a buyer who becomes interested in your property, a dual agency may be created. In a dual agency relationship, the seller agent is obligated to the buyer in the same way as to you. This conflict will prohibit the seller agent from advocating exclusively on your behalf or the buyer's behalf and may limit the level of representation you receive. If the potential for a dual agency arises, the seller agent shall provide you with a dual agent disclosure. A seller agent cannot act as a dual agent without your consent and that of the buyer. This consent is given by you and the buyer signing the dual agent disclosure. If you or the buyer declines to give this consent, your opportunity to sell your property to that buyer may be lost.

Your seller agent is obligated to you as follows:

- (1) to act solely in the best interests of the seller to the exclusion of all other interests, including those of the seller agent;
- (2) to obey promptly and efficiently all lawful instructions of the seller;
- (3) to disclose to the seller all relevant and material information that concerns the real estate transaction and that is known by the seller agent and not known by the seller, unless the information is subject to confidentiality arising from a prior or existing agency relationship;
- (4) to safeguard the seller's confidences;
- (5) to exercise reasonable skill, care, and diligence in pursuing the seller's objectives as established in the listing agreement;
- (6) to fully account to the seller for all funds or property of the seller coming into the seller agent's possession;
- (7) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations; and
- (8) to carry out the terms of the listing agreement."
- (b) Seller agent disclosure to the buyer: "(Name of seller agent) is the agent of the seller with respect to the seller's property located at (address of property). Although the seller agent is primarily obligated to the seller, the seller agent is obligated to you as specified below.

A seller agent is obligated to a buyer as follows:

- (1) to disclose to a buyer any adverse material facts that concern the property and that are known to the seller agent;
- (2) to deal in good faith with the buyer; and
- (3) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations.

"Adverse material fact" means a fact that should be recognized by a broker as being of enough significance as to affect a person's decision to enter into a contract to buy or sell real property and may be a fact that materially affects the value or structural integrity or presents a documented health risk to occupants of the property. The term may not include the fact that an occupant of the property has or has had a communicable disease or that the property was the site of a suicide or felony."

(c) Buyer agent disclosure to the buyer: "(Name of buyer agent) will be representing you as your agent or subagent in the purchase of real property of the nature described in the buyer broker agreement. Your buyer agent is obligated to you as enumerated below. If your buyer agent is also representing a seller of property that you become interested in, a dual agency may be created. In a dual agency relationship, the buyer agent is obligated to the seller in the same way as to you. This conflict will prohibit the buyer agent from advocating exclusively on your behalf or on the seller's behalf and may limit the level of representation you receive. If the potential for a dual agency arises, the buyer agent shall provide you with a dual agent disclosure. A buyer agent cannot act as a dual agent without your consent and that of the seller. This consent is given by you and the seller signing the dual agent disclosure. If you or the seller declines to give this consent, your opportunity to acquire the seller's property may be lost.

Your buyer agent is obligated to you as follows:

- (1) to act solely in the best interests of the buyer to the exclusion of all other interests, including those of the buyer agent;
- (2) to obey promptly and efficiently all lawful instructions of the buyer;
- (3) to disclose to the buyer all relevant and material information that concerns the real estate transaction and that is known by the buyer agent and not known by the buyer, unless the information is subject to confidentiality arising from a prior or existing agency relationship;
- (4) to safeguard the buyer's confidences;
- (5) to exercise reasonable skill, care, and diligence in pursuing the buyer's objectives as established in the buyer broker agreement;
- (6) to fully account to the buyer for all funds or property of the buyer coming into the buyer agent's possession;
- (7) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations; and
- (8) to carry out the terms of the buyer broker agreement."

(d) Buyer agent disclosure to the seller: "(Name of buyer agent) is representing the buyer with respect to the seller's property located at (address of property). Although the buyer agent is primarily obligated to the buyer, the buyer agent is obligated to you as specified below.

A buyer agent is obligated to a seller as follows:

- (1) to disclose to a seller any adverse material facts that concern the ability of the buyer to perform on any purchase offer and that are known to the buyer agent;
- (2) to deal in good faith with the seller; and
- (3) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations.

"Adverse material fact" means a fact that should be recognized by a broker as being of enough significance as to affect a person's decision to enter into a contract to buy or sell real property and may be a fact that materially affects the buyer's ability or intent to perform the buyer's obligations under a proposed or existing contract."

(e) Statutory broker disclosure to the buyer and seller: "(Name of statutory broker) will be involved as a statutory broker with respect to the purchase and sale of real property located at (address). A statutory broker is not the agent of the buyer or seller but is only assisting the parties in executing a sale of the property. A statutory broker is obligated to the buyer and seller as specified below.

A statutory broker is obligated to the parties as follows:

- (1) to disclose to a buyer any adverse material fact that concerns the property and that is known to the statutory broker and not known to the buyer. However, the statutory broker is not required to conduct an independent inspection of the property or to verify any representation made by the seller.
- (2) to disclose to the seller any adverse material fact that concerns the buyer's intent or ability to perform on the purchase offer and that is known to the statutory broker and not known to the seller;
- (3) to exercise reasonable skill, care, and diligence in facilitating the purchase and sale of the property; and
- (4) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations.

"Adverse material fact" means a fact that should be recognized by a broker as being of enough significance as to affect a person's decision to enter into a contract to buy or sell real property. It may be a fact that materially affects the value or structural integrity or presents a documented health risk to occupants of the property, but may not include the fact that an occupant of the property has or has had a communicable disease or that the property was the site of a suicide or felony, or it may be a fact that materially affects the buyer's ability or intent to perform the buyer's obligations under a proposed or existing contract."

(f) Dual agent disclosure to the buyer and seller: "(Name of dual agent) is the agent of the buyer interested in purchasing the property and of the seller of the property located at (address of property). A dual agent is obligated to the buyer and seller as follows:

(1) to act solely in the best interests of the buyer and seller to the exclusion of all other interests including the dual agent's;

(2) to obey promptly and efficiently all lawful instructions of the buyer and seller;

(3) to disclose to the buyer and seller all relevant and material information that concerns the real estate transaction and that is known by the dual agent and not known by the buyer or seller, unless the information is subject to confidentiality arising from a prior or existing agency relationship;

(4) to exercise reasonable skill, care, and diligence in pursuing the buyer's and seller's objectives as established in the listing agreement and buyer broker agreement;

(5) to fully account to the buyer and seller for all funds or property of the buyer and seller coming into the dual agent's possession;

(6) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations;

(7) to carry out the terms of the buyer broker agreement; and

(8) to safeguard the buyer's and seller's confidences, subject to the obligation to disclose to a buyer or a seller any adverse material facts that are known to the dual agent, regardless of any confidentiality considerations. The following may not be disclosed without the written consent of the party to whom the information is confidential:

(a) that the buyer is willing to pay more than the buyer has offered for the property;

(b) that the seller is willing to accept less than the asking price for the property;

(c) factors motivating the buyer to buy or the seller to sell; and

(d) any other information that a party specifically indicates in writing to the dual agent is to be kept confidential and that is not an adverse material fact.

"Adverse material fact" means a fact that should be recognized by a broker as being of enough significance as to affect a person's decision to enter into a contract to buy or sell real property. It may be a fact that materially affects the value or structural integrity or presents a documented health risk to occupants of the property, but may not include the fact that an occupant of the property has or has had a communicable disease or that the property was the site of a suicide or felony, or it may be a fact that materially affects the buyer's ability or intent to perform the buyer's obligations under a proposed or existing contract.

Upon signing this disclosure form, the buyer and seller acknowledge that they understand the obligations owed by a dual agent to them and consent to the dual agent representing them as a dual agent"; inserted (7) setting out form of subsequent disclosure; inserted (8) setting out information permitted in any required disclosure; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 1999.

Case Notes

Alleged Failure to Disclose Agency Relationship — Resolution of Conflicting Evidence — Alternative Findings Not Required: Garrison purchased property on Flathead Lake through Averill, a real estate broker. Later, Garrison filed suit against Averill and the seller of the property, alleging that he, Garrison, considered Averill his agent and relied on Averill to represent his interests and that Averill was aware of that reliance. Garrison also argued that the District Court ignored testimony from his expert to the effect that Averill breached the standard of care by failing to document his disclosure to Garrison of his agency relationship with the seller. Garrison also alleged that Averill was negligent and that the negligence caused Garrison's damages. The Supreme Court pointed out testimony in the record from Averill's expert and concluded that the District Court had not ignored the testimony presented by Garrison but simply resolved conflicting evidence against Garrison. Citing Yellowstone Basin Properties, Inc. v. Burgess, 255 M 341, 843 P2d 341 (1992), the Supreme Court held that just because there is evidence in the record on which the District Court could have based certain findings of fact does not require the District Court to make those findings. Garrison v. Averill, 282 M 508, 938 P2d 702, 54 St. Rep. 454 (1997).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (2) in introductory clause after "made by the broker's" deleted "broker associate or"; in (2)(b) at beginning substituted "the subagent" for "a broker associate" and at end after "independent contractor" deleted "or subagent"; and in (2)(c) near beginning after "a broker" deleted "associate". Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 294 in (1)(r) substituted "supervising broker" for "registered broker" and at end inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 170 in (1)(a) near middle of second sentence after "broker's own name" substituted "or" for "in the franchise name or logotype or does not conspicuously display, on the broker's letterhead and other printed materials available to the public, a statement that the broker's office is independently owned and operated and" and at end inserted "in the franchise name or logotype". Amendment effective March 24, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 565 in (1)(l), after "real property", substituted "directly with a seller or buyer" for "directly with an owner or lessee", substituted "seller or buyer" for "owner", and after "outstanding" substituted "listing agreement or buyer broker agreement" for "contract"; and made minor changes in style.

Purported Repeal — Coordination: Section 128, Ch. 429, L. 1995, repealed this section, but sec. 130, Ch. 429, L. 1995, a coordination section, voided the repeal.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 246 at end of second sentence of (1)(a) inserted "and the trade name, if any, by which the office is known"; in (1)(g), after "transaction", inserted "including failing to disclose in advertisements for real property the person's dual capacity as broker and principal"; inserted (2) requiring a broker or salesperson to have a signed listing agreement from the property owner prior to openly advertising the property and providing a penalty; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Expert Testimony Unnecessary on Issue of Standard of Care — District Court Not Directed as to All Expert Testimony on All Claims: Durbins purchased a home through the seller's realtors. Contrary to the representations of the realtors, Durbins discovered that the property had no legal septic system, that the household water was unsafe to use for any purpose, and that the access road was located on the neighbor's property. Durbins brought an action against the realtors, alleging negligent misrepresentation, actual and constructive fraud, and statutory violations involving the Montana real estate licensing laws and the Montana Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act of 1973. The defendants sought and achieved dismissal of the case on the grounds that Durbins failed to prove through expert testimony the applicable standard of care of the realtors. The Supreme Court held that expert witnesses were unnecessary to prove a standard of care. Durbins also asked that the Supreme Court direct the District Court to exclude testimony of any expert witnesses on any claim asserted by the Durbins. The Supreme Court noted that the District Courts have great latitude concerning the admissibility of evidence and that the District Court would in any event have to comply with Rule 702, M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10). The Supreme Court therefore declined to direct the District Court as requested by the Durbins. Durbin v. Ross, 276 M 463, 716 P2d 758, 53 St. Rep. 471 (1996).

Board of Realty Regulation Not Empowered to Award Damages — Complaint to Board Inadequate Notice of Legal Claim: The Board of Realty Regulation may only revoke or suspend a broker's license and has no power to award damages for negligence or fraud. Further, because the Board is not designated by law as a quasi-judicial board pursuant to 2-15-124, a complaint to the Board does not give adequate notice of the existence of a legal claim. Erickson v. Croft, 233 M 146, 760 P2d 706, 45 St. Rep. 1379 (1988).

No Duty to Disclose What Seller Already Knows: On the question of a real estate agent's duty to inform sellers of the buyer's offer to secure the balance of the purchase price for property with bonds encumbered by margin loans, the Supreme Court noted that the sellers' attorneys were aware of this fact from buyer's initial proposals. The real estate agent had no duty to disclose what the sellers already knew. Bills v. Hannah, Inc., 230 M 250, 749 P2d 1076, 45 St. Rep. 179 (1988).

No False Representations by Real Estate Agent — Dismissal Proper: Real estate agent was properly dismissed from an action involving fraudulent misrepresentations of income by the seller of a business when it was found the agent concealed nothing from buyers and had no knowledge of and made no representations to buyers concerning business profitability. Selvidge v. McBeen, 230 M 237, 750 P2d 429, 45 St. Rep. 168 (1988).

Charges of Incompetence and Untrustworthiness Not Determined by Issuance of Broker's License: A complaint was filed against Sorini, a licensed real estate salesperson, for violations of this section relating to her competence and trustworthiness. After charges were filed, she was allowed to sit for the real estate broker's examination and was subsequently issued a broker's license. On appeal, she argued that the question of her competence or trustworthiness became moot because the Board of Realty Regulation was required to consider those characteristics before issuing her a broker's license under 37-51-302. The Supreme Court noted that while the Board is required by statute to determine that an applicant for a broker's license meets certain standards, in the absence of evidence that the Board considered the pending charges, the determination that she met the standards of conduct was not dispositive of the pending charges against her. The court found no such evidence in the record and concluded that the issue of competence and trustworthiness as raised by the charges was not determined by the issuance of the real estate broker's license. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

No Board Requirement to Rule With Particularity on Objections and Exceptions: Proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law as prepared by a hearing examiner detailed the factual basis for his conclusion that the Board of Realty Regulation had power to suspend or revoke Sorini's broker's license. Prior to her appearance before the full Board, Sorini submitted her contentions of claimed error in the findings and conclusions. The Board considered these contentions and voted unanimously to adopt the findings and conclusions of the hearing examiner. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that Sorini was entitled to nothing further and that the Board was not required to specifically state in writing that her exceptions to the proposed findings were insufficient. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Penalty Not Unusual or Unwarranted: Sorini argued that the revocation of her broker's license was based on a finding by a hearing examiner that the mortgage on her client's home was foreclosed due to her actions. The violations with which she was charged did not include causing the foreclosure, and she maintained that she was punished to an unusual and unwarranted degree for the violations with which she was charged. The Supreme Court noted that the Board of Realty Regulation found that Sorini had violated three statutory prohibitions under this section, any one of which would result in revocation or suspension at the Board's discretion. There were enough facts before the Board to allow revocation without considering whether Sorini caused the foreclosure. The court held that the penalty was not unusual or unwarranted. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Revocation of Real Estate Broker's License — No Denial of Rights at Administrative Hearing — Hearing Examiner and Board Attorney as Deputy Attorneys General: A hearing examiner recommended that Sorini's real estate broker's license be revoked for violations of this section. On appeal, Sorini argued that she was denied her rights at the administrative hearing because both the hearing examiner and the attorney for the Board of Realty Regulation were deputies in the Attorney General's office; however, she failed to submit any proof to support this allegation. The Supreme Court noted that 2-4-611 establishes the manner in which a party may file an affidavit for disqualification of a hearing examiner, holding that in the absence of an affidavit it was not proper to raise the issue on appeal. The court agreed that having a greater separation of prosecutorial and decisionmaking functions would eliminate an appearance of impropriety, but found nothing to warrant a reversal of the District Court. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Broker Malpractice — Failure to Provide Copy of Assignment: A real estate agent was found by the trial court to have been culpable of broker malpractice along with her broker in failing to supply purchasers, who had assigned their purchase interest to the agent and broker, with a copy of the assignment. However, the Supreme Court held that the agent was in no position to give the purchasers a copy of the assignment because not all the purchasers signed the assignment at the same time. The agent turned the partially signed document over to the broker for the remaining purchaser to sign. Hoefer v. Wilckens, 210 M 218, 684 P2d 468, 41 St. Rep. 1019 (1984).

Aggrieved Persons — Persons Sustaining Damages — Waiver of Damages: Appellants do not qualify as aggrieved persons or persons sustaining damages for an alleged violation of 37-51-321(9) when suing a broker over an alleged defect in an easement purportedly conveyed to the appellants because appellants failed to first establish the nonexistence of the easement in question. Secondly, and more importantly, appellants waived any claim for damages by closing the transaction after they became aware of the alleged defect in the easement. Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988, 35 St. Rep. 1956 (1978).

Agent Seller — Bond Coverage: Members of the public have the right to rely upon express or implied representations of a licensed real estate agent or broker, although the agent is in fact the owner of the property being sold. Therefore, the surety is bound by such express or implied representations, and the bond must cover such judgments entered. Twite v. W. Sur. Co., 176 M 286, 577 P2d 1219 (1978).

Misrepresentation Action in Real Estate Sale: The court properly awarded summary judgment to defendants in a misrepresentation action under the Montana Real Estate License Act of 1963 (Ch. 250, L. 1963) when the record indicated that no fraudulent representations were made by defendants and the Statute of Limitations had expired, notwithstanding the "discovery" exception. Anderson v. Applebury, 173 M 411, 567 P2d 951 (1977).

Fraudulent Listing: Broker who obtained exclusive listing through a discharged real estate salesman and assured seller that he would "get rid" of a prior exclusive listing of same property which seller had made with another broker was in violation of this section. Johnson v. Doran, 167 M 501, 540 P2d 306 (1975).

Wide Range of Evidence Allowed in Fraud Cases: Where broker induced sellers to sign listing agreement coupled with option to purchase, knowing different broker had exclusive listing, which caused sellers considerable expense, it was not error for trial court to allow wide range of evidence in order that fraud may be detected and exposed, as fraud assumes many shapes, disguises, and subterfuges and is generally so secretly hatched that it can only be detected by a consideration of facts and circumstances which are not infrequently trivial, remote, and disconnected. Johnson v. Doran, 167 M 501, 540 P2d 306 (1975).

Civil Liability Resulting From Violation: Vendor was entitled to cancellation of contract for sale of land as well as damages from real estate broker for misrepresentations relating to marketability of title made by broker during course of dealings with vendor in violation of subsections (2) and (3) of this section. The vendee was entitled to damages from broker for misrepresentations and failure to remit vendee's earnest money to vendor in violation of subsections (2), (3), and (5) of this section. Stafford v. Love, 151 M 270, 442 P2d 190 (1968).

Innocent Misrepresentation of Acreage: Misrepresentation as to acreage of tract offered by broker was not in itself sufficient ground for cancellation of license where acreage stated was that stated by landowner, broker had no reason to believe that acreage stated was incorrect, and prospective purchaser had been over the tract and was not deceived by the misrepresentation. Meyer v. Unroe, 139 M 174, 362 P2d 218 (1961).

Attorney General's Opinions

Licensing Regulations Not Applicable to Finder's Fee: A person is not required to be licensed as a real estate broker or salesman in order to receive a fee, commission, or compensation for referring the name of a potential buyer of real estate. Further, a broker's license should not be revoked or suspended for paying a finder's fee when the payee does not perform any negotiation or other services regulated by real estate licensing law. 43 A.G. Op. 8 (1989), distinguishing 34 A.G. Op. 23 (1972).

Case Notes

Intentional Violation Not Required to Recover Under Real Estate License Laws: Saville, the seller, and her realtor were sued by the purchasers of her property. The suit was based on negligent misrepresentation of the boundaries of the property by the realtor. Saville cross-claimed for indemnification against the realtor for any judgment obtained against her by the plaintiffs and was awarded indemnification by the jury. Hardin, the realtor, appealed, arguing that Saville was not an aggrieved person as contemplated by this chapter. The Supreme Court held that Saville did not have to show that the misrepresentation made by the realtor was a malicious or intentional violation of the chapter in order to be an aggrieved person under the chapter. Cechovic v. Hardin & Associates, Inc., 273 M 104, 902 P2d 520, 52 St. Rep. 854 (1995), partially overruling Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988 (1978).

Statute of Limitations Begins at Time of Injury: Plaintiff alleged defendant violated this section by misrepresenting himself as being a real estate broker licensed by another state. Plaintiff's complaint was filed over 2 years after the alleged tort. Plaintiff contends that defendant's alleged misrepresentation constitutes concealment of a material fact, and therefore the statute of limitations should be tolled. The court held that defendant's misrepresentation was not an affirmative act calculated to obscure plaintiff's cause of action. In nonmalpractice tort actions, the statute of limitations begins to run on the date of plaintiff's injury. This action is barred because plaintiff did not file within the 2-year period. Payne v. Stratman, 229 M 377, 747 P2d 210, 44 St. Rep. 2059 (1987).

Penalty Not Unusual or Unwarranted: Sorini argued that the revocation of her broker's license was based on a finding by a hearing examiner that the mortgage on her client's home was foreclosed due to her actions. The violations with which she was charged did not include causing the foreclosure, and she maintained that she was punished to an unusual and unwarranted degree for the violations with which she was charged. The court held that the penalty was not unusual or unwarranted. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Treble Damages Not Awarded — No Harm Caused by Realtor's Actions: No penalty was awarded under this section when an audit of a realtor's trust account indicated that even though disbursement from the client's trust account was not approved in advance by the client, the disbursements were proper and the client suffered no damages. United Farm Agency v. Blome, 198 M 435, 646 P2d 1205, 40 St. Rep. 19 (1982).

Aggrieved Persons — Persons Sustaining Damages — Waiver of Damages: Appellants do not qualify as aggrieved persons or persons sustaining damages for an alleged violation of 37-51-321(9) when suing a broker over an alleged defect in an easement purportedly conveyed to the appellants because appellants failed to first establish the nonexistence of the easement in question. Pappin*, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988, 35 St. Rep. 1956 (1978).

Scope of Act — Honest Mistake: The Real Estate License Act of 1963 (Ch. 250, L. 1963) should be construed to lend maximum efficacy to the enforcement of the fiduciary relationships involved in the real estate profession. However, willful misconduct must be present as opposed to an "honest" mistake, regardless of the argument that another course of conduct or the lack of some negligence would have avoided the situation complained of. Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988, 35 St. Rep. 1956 (1978), partially overruled in Cechovic v. Hardin & Associates, Inc., 273 M 104, 902 P2d 520, 52 St. Rep. 854 (1995).

Misrepresentation Action in Real Estate Sale: The court properly awarded summary judgment to defendants in a misrepresentation action under the Montana Real Estate License Act of 1963 (Ch. 250, L. 1963) when the record indicated that no fraudulent representations were made by defendants and the Statute of Limitations had expired, notwithstanding the "discovery" exception. Anderson v. Applebury, 173 M 411, 567 P2d 951 (1977).

Proof of Injury: To recover under this section, plaintiff must show not only that real estate broker violated this act (Ch. 250, L. 1963) but also that plaintiff suffered damage thereby. Evidence that broker received commission is not sufficient proof of damage. Sellers who exchanged their equity in residence for cash sufficient to pay broker's commission and assignment of buyer's interest in an installment promissory note were not entitled to recovery from broker when only two installments were paid on note in absence of evidence that note was valueless. Sellers who made no attempt to contact debtors for payment or to contact buyers for information or assistance were not yet damaged since note might still be fully collectible with interest. Denny v. Brissonneaud, 161 M 468, 506 P2d 77 (1973).

Civil Liability Resulting From Violation: Where vendor sued vendee, broker, and broker's surety for cancellation of contract for sale of land and for damages and where vendee filed cross-complaint against broker and broker's surety, vendor was entitled to cancellation of contract and both vendor and vendee were entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and equal share in treble damage award based on vendee's right to recover his earnest money from broker and broker's surety. Stafford v. Love, 151 M 270, 442 P2d 190 (1968).

1995 Amendment: Pursuant to sec. 6, Ch. 565, L. 1995, the Code Commissioner in two places substituted "salesperson" for "salesman".

Case Notes

Receipt of Asking Price and Licensing — Only Requirements for Commission: Defendants decided to sell their ranch and were contacted by plaintiff, a real estate salesperson. Defendants listed the ranch on a nonexclusive basis for $1.6 million and agreed to pay a 5% commission on the sale. Plaintiff presented offers from Semenza, which were rejected. Later, Semenza offered the asking price, and a contract to sell and purchase was executed, reciting that Semenza had paid $50,000 to plaintiff as earnest money. Semenza failed to obtain financing by the closing date, and it was determined he had never paid the earnest money to plaintiff. A new agreement to sell was executed, referencing the obtaining of long-term financing, at a meeting at which defendants were again represented by counsel. The transaction was closed, and defendants refused to pay plaintiff his commission, contending he was not a licensed broker as claimed at the time they entered the agreement and that he had actually represented the buyer. On appeal from a summary judgment, the Supreme Court found that under 37-51-401 a person need only be a licensed salesperson to receive a commission and that plaintiff was a licensed broker at the time the transaction closed. The defendants received their asking price through plaintiff's efforts, even though Semenza had to bring in a partner. There was no evidence defendants were damaged by the claimed conflict of interest. They ratified the entire transaction and were represented by competent counsel throughout. Deimler v. Ostler, 200 M 350, 651 P2d 41, 39 St. Rep. 1797 (1982).

Pretrial Order and Evidence to Establish Standing: In an action for a real estate commission, the real estate broker (Nardi) did not allege himself to be a licensed broker in his initial complaint. The pretrial order, however, contained an amendment to the complaint stating that Nardi was a licensed real estate broker. In addition, Nardi introduced his broker's license at trial. The pretrial order and the exhibit adequately proved Nardi to be licensed pursuant to the statute, giving him standing to sue. Nardi v. Smalley, 197 M 321, 643 P2d 228, 39 St. Rep. 606 (1982).

When Recovery of Compensation Not Barred — Out-of-State Services: Where defendant agreed to pay commission for brokerage services rendered by out-of-state plaintiff not licensed in Montana and services were performed by plaintiff both within and without Montana, the fact that recovery cannot be had for services rendered in Montana because of proscription of this section does not prevent recovery for services rendered out of the state. Ryckman v. Wildwood, Inc., 197 M 154, 641 P2d 467, 39 St. Rep. 378 (1982).

Completing Sale Distinguished From Finding Purchaser: In action to recover broker's commissions purportedly due and owing from sale of property owned by defendant, the Supreme Court held that the defendant was not liable because plaintiff broker failed to perform the terms of the exclusive listing agreement by completing the sale. It was insufficient under this agreement to merely find a purchaser. Diehl & Associates v. Houtchens, 173 M 372, 567 P2d 930 (1977), followed in Blumfield Agency v. Little Belt, Inc., 203 M 515, 663 P2d 1164, 40 St. Rep. 605 (1983).

Deal Held Not Option but Sale Entitling Broker to Commission: Where owner left deed to real property with broker under agreement to pay him 5% commission if he found party acceptable purchaser and broker produced a prospective purchaser who agreed to forfeit $200 downpayment if by a specified date he failed to meet the major portion of the purchase price, which proposal owner and his wife accepted in writing with the payment, the transaction was a sale and not a mere option, and broker was entitled to his commission. Anderson v. Craig, 111 M 182, 108 P2d 205 (1940).

Waiver of License Issue: Failure to allege license is waived where defendant fails to take advantage thereof by special demurrer (demurrer abolished, Rule 7(c), M.R.Civ.P., and 25-31-503, now repealed) or answer, a general demurrer (demurrer abolished) not reaching the point. Piatt & Heath Co. v. Wilmer, 87 M 382, 288 P 1021 (1930).

Isolated Transactions: Under former provision (sec. 3, Ch. 195, L. 1921, repealed by Ch. 250, L. 1963) defining real estate broker and setting forth classes exempted from Ch. 195, L. 1921, provision similar to this section had no application to one who acted as a broker in connection with a single transaction only. Harbolt v. Hensen, 78 M 228, 253 P 257 (1927).

Nonbroker Not Required to Prove Status — Waiver of Issue: This section did not require one who was not a real estate broker to allege and prove that he was not a broker; failure of defendant to raise issue of license in answer waived the point. Harbolt v. Hensen, 78 M 228, 253 P 257 (1927).

Case Notes

No Recovery When Seller Owns Property: The plaintiffs sought to recover for a real estate loss from the state's real estate recovery account. The plaintiffs had been part of a partnership in which the general partner had fraudulently sold some of his own property in a manner that caused the partnership to lose money. The Supreme Court held that when an owner sells his own property, no real estate license is required and therefore under the terms of the statute, no recovery is available from the state's fund. (Decided prior to 1989 amendments.) Yellowstone Valley Properties v. Bd. of Realty Regulation, 243 M 241, 794 P2d 341, 47 St. Rep. 1209 (1990).

Licensure of Property Managers

Part Compiler's Comments

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 142, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the board of realty regulation to provide for the licensure and regulation of real estate property managers. The legislature intends that the board have general authority to adopt rules in regard to licensing procedures, including but not limited to issuance of licenses, administration of examinations, establishment of criteria for grading of examinations, promulgation of disciplinary standards for licensees, establishment of fee schedules consistent with the program area costs, and provisions for investigation of complaints against licensees."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

Qualifications of Real Estate Experts — Differing Valuation: At a hearing concerning the valuation and division of property in the dissolution of Maureen and Joseph's marriage, an agricultural real estate broker testified for Maureen that the parties' ranch was worth $398,000 to $400,000, while a certified and licensed property appraiser testified for Joseph that the ranch was worth $182,500. Joseph contended that the District Court erred in accepting the value of the ranch as testified to by the real estate broker because the broker had no experience as a real property appraiser. Citing Jim's Excavating Serv., Inc. v. HKM Associates, 265 M 494, 878 P2d 248 (1994), the Supreme Court held that whether an adequate foundation has been established for the admission of expert testimony is an issue largely within the discretion of the District Court and that the District Court did not abuse its discretion when it relied upon the testimony of the real estate broker. The Supreme Court therefore affirmed the part of the District Court's order that valued the parties' ranch at $400,000. In re Marriage of Ortiz, 282 M 500, 938 P2d 1308, 54 St. Rep. 446 (1997).

Case Notes

Improper Award of Contractual Interest in Case of Negligent Misrepresentation of Real Property Appraisal: A professional appraiser prepared appraisal reports on two properties, which a lender reviewed and relied on in its decision to make loans at 61% to 62% of appraised market value and secured by the appraised properties. When the borrower defaulted, the lender foreclosed. After the Sheriff's sale, a deficiency judgment of $848,067, including $241,333.02 in contractual interest on the note, was entered against the borrower. The lender later sued the appraiser for damages arising from negligent misrepresentation of the appraisals, seeking an additional $620,572 in lost earnings on the deficiency. Under section 552B, Restatement (Second) of Torts, damages recoverable for a negligent misrepresentation are those necessary to compensate the plaintiff for the pecuniary loss of which the misrepresentation is a legal cause, including: (1) the difference between the value of what has been received in the transaction and its purchase price or other value given for it; and (2) pecuniary loss suffered otherwise as a consequence of the plaintiff's reliance on the misrepresentation. Under this rationale, the District Court erred in awarding the contractual interest but properly denied the award for lost earnings. United First Fed. S&L Ass'n v. White-Stevens, Ltd., 253 M 242, 833 P2d 170, 49 St. Rep. 490 (1992).

37-60-202. Rulemaking power.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted (9) requiring Board to adopt rules defining unprofessional conduct for the purposes of removal from the Board and suspension or revocation of licenses and identification cards; deleted (10) requiring rules establishing the expiration and renewal periods for licenses and identification cards; deleted (11) requiring rules for the temporary employment of persons without the required licenses or identification cards; deleted (12) requiring rules providing for the issuance of probationary and temporary licenses for contract security companies and private investigators; deleted (14) requiring rules providing for the application of administrative fines and penalties for minor infractions of this chapter and supporting rules; and made minor changes in style.

1987 Amendment: In lead-in deleted "reasonable" before "rules"; in (1), (3), (9), and (10) deleted reference to registration after reference to license; in (2) deleted "registrants" after "licensees"; in (8) substituted "file such insurance or proof of financial responsibility as the board considers necessary with the board" for "maintain such insurance coverage as the board considers necessary"; in (11) substituted "licenses" for "registration"; in (13) deleted "registration and" after "probationary"; and inserted (14) concerning fines and penalties.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 63, L. 1987, which amended this section, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because in section 3 [37-60-202] it expands the authority of the board of private security patrolmen and investigators to provide for the application of administrative fines and penalties for minor infractions of Title 37, chapter 60, and the supporting rules."

It is the intent of the legislature that the board adopt rules that conform with chapter 60 and other applicable statutes. Administrative fines and penalties for minor infractions of the chapter or of the board's rules must be commensurate with the gravity of the infraction, and the board may not suspend or revoke a license granted under this chapter except upon indisputable evidence of violation of this chapter, other applicable statutes, or the board's rules."

1985 Amendment: Inserted (12) referring to issuance of probationary and temporary licenses; and inserted (13) referring to issuance of probationary identification cards.

1983 Amendment: In lead-in changed "the director may" to "the board shall"; in (1) substituted language directing the Board to adopt and enforce rules relating to the form and procedure for granting, denying, suspending, or revoking any license, registration, or identification card for former text that read: "classifying licensees according to the type of business regulated by this chapter in which they are engaged, including but not limited to private investigators and private patrol operators, and limiting the field and scope of the operations of a licensee to those in which he is classified and qualified to engage"; in (2) before "licensees" inserted "resident managers, qualifying agents" and after "licensees" inserted "registrants, and holders of identification cards"; in (3) substituted language directing the Board to establish various licensing fees for former text that read: "carrying out generally the provisions of this chapter"; and inserted (4) through (10) requiring Board to adopt and enforce rules to prohibit establishment of branch offices, provide for certification of training programs, provide for approval of weapons, require maintenance of records, require filing of insurance policy or proof of financial responsibility, define unprofessional conduct, and establish expiration and renewal periods.

Subsection (1) of 37-60-202 requires the board to adopt rules specifying the form of various documents granted by the board and the method of taking various licensing actions on the same. The minimum standards for the documents are set out in section 37-60-309 but may include such other matters of identification, such as fingerprints, as the board determines to be necessary. The procedures and standards for suspension and revocation of a license, registration, or identification card are set out in 37-60-321 [now repealed]. This section facially allows the board to suspend or revoke the registration of an individual for violations by his licensed employee or vice versa. As to those situations involving the suspension or revocation of the document of one party for the actions by another, it is the Legislature's intent that the board rules governing this matter should only require or allow the suspension or revocation of a document issued by the board if the person or entity whose document is in jeopardy had the right of control over the person or entity whose actions put the document in jeopardy and if the person whose document is in jeopardy knew or should have known of the actions of that other person.

Subsection (4) of 37-60-202 also requires the board to adopt rules prohibiting the establishment of certain branch offices without approval by the board and establishing requirements for board approval. The qualifications that may be required by the board under this subsection may not apply to proprietary security organizations, and may concern such matters as the supervision and management of the office but must not prescribe requirements for office size, equipment, etc.

Subsection (5) requires the adoption of training program rules. It is the intention of the Legislature that these rules specify a minimum curriculum and minimum standards for instructors used in all phases of the program, including firearms instructors.

Board rules adopted under subsection (8) relating to insurance may not require schools to carry insurance to protect themselves against civil liability for negligent or inadequate training incurred after students graduate from the training program.

Board rules defining "unprofessional conduct" under subsection (9) may include only that conduct which has a direct relationship to the ability of the board member or the licensee, registrant, or identification cardholder to perform official duties or acts taken in the capacity of a licensee, registrant, or cardholder.

Under subsection (11), the board must adopt rules which, at a minimum, provide for a maximum period of time in which employees may be considered to be "on probation" with an employer and for that period only, excused from the requirements for identification or registration cards which would otherwise apply."

CHAPTER 61 ATTORNEYS AT LAW

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Publication of Rules: Rules governing attorneys at law are published in Vol. 1 of the MCA Annotations, as annotations to Art. VII, sec. 2, Mont. Const.

Chapter Case Notes

Insurer-Imposed Billing Rules and Procedures Violative of Rules of Professional Conduct: When presented with the question of whether an attorney licensed to practice in Montana or admitted pro hac vice may agree to abide by an insurer's billing and practice rules that impose conditions limiting or directing the scope and extent of representation of the attorney's client, the insured, the Supreme Court considered the requirement imposed by some insurers that defense counsel secure the consent of the insurer's claim professional before proceeding with the case, in order to ensure adequate consultation. Insurers cited Jessen v. O'Daniel, 210 F. Supp. 317 (D.C. Mont. 1962), for the proposition that under Montana law, in the absence of a real conflict, the insurer and the insured are dual clients of defense counsel, arguing that as co-client of defense counsel, the insurer may require preapproval of attorney activities. The Supreme Court noted that although decisions subsequent to Jessen recognized the conclusion that an insurance contract may place absolute control of litigation in the hands of the insurer, the dual representation doctrine is not recognized under the Rules of Professional Conduct, but applies only in determining whether the communications between an insurer and its attorneys are subject to the attorney-client privilege. The contractual relationship between insurer and insured does not supersede or waive defense counsels' obligations under the Rules of Professional Conduct. Rather, the Rules of Professional Conduct have application in all cases involving attorneys and clients, and under the rules, the insured is the sole client of defense counsel. The court concluded that defense counsel in Montana who submit to the requirement of prior approval from the insurer violate the Rules of Professional Conduct by fundamentally interfering with their duties to exercise independent judgment and to give their undivided loyalty to insureds. The court noted that the prior approval requirement also creates a substantial appearance of impropriety by suggesting that the insurer, rather than defense counsel, controls the day-to-day details of the defense. In re Rules of Professional Conduct & Insurer Imposed Billing Rules & Procedures, 2000 MT 110, 299 M 321, 2 P3d 806, 57 St. Rep. 433 (2000).

Requirement That Attorney Submit Detailed Descriptions of Services Violative of Client Confidentiality: When presented with the question of whether an attorney licensed to practice in Montana or admitted pro hac vice may be required by an insurer's billing and practice rules to submit detailed descriptions of professional services to outside persons or entities, such as third-party insurance auditors, without first obtaining the informed consent of the client, insurers cited U.S. v. Mass. Institute of Technology, 129 F3d 681 (1st Cir. 1997), in claiming that as agents of insurers, third-party auditors are part of a privileged community or magic circle within which confidential information may be shared without waiver of attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine. The insurers also cited Indian Law Resource Center v. Dept. of Interior, 477 F. Supp. 144 (D. D.C. 1979), for the proposition that an auditor is a confidential agent of a privileged party, so disclosure of attorney fee information did not waive any privilege. The Supreme Court found neither case persuasive, concluding that third-party auditors are not confidential agents of insureds, but function rather as agents of insurers, and thus are not within the magic circle of confidentiality. Rather, disclosure of detailed billing statements to third-party auditors constitutes disclosure to a potential adversary because there is always the possibility of disputes between auditors and defense counsel and their clients that could result in litigation. As possible adversaries, auditors stand in potential conflict with the interests of insureds in competent representation by defense counsel who exercise their independent professional judgment. The court looked to Rule 1.6 of the Rules of Professional Conduct, which extends to all communications between insureds and defense counsel, making it broader in both scope and protection than the attorney-client privilege and the work product doctrine. Although disclosures of billing information to insurers are permissible because insurers are impliedly authorized to carry out representation, disclosure to third-party auditors is not impliedly authorized. The court also rejected the insurers' argument that insureds' consent by contract to disclosure of billing statements comports with Rule 1.6. An insured executing a liability policy with an insurer cannot know at that time what kind of claim will be brought against that insured, what the issues will be, what kind of services will be undertaken by defense counsel, or the legal consequences that might result from the disclosure of billing information to a third-party auditor. Under Rule 1.6, for an insured to make a fully informed consent to disclosure of detailed billing statements, the consent must be contemporaneous with the facts and circumstances of which the insured should be aware. Thus, disclosure by defense counsel of detailed descriptions of professional services to third-party auditors without first obtaining the informed consent of the insured violates confidentiality under the Rules of Professional Conduct. In re Rules of Professional Conduct & Insurer Imposed Billing Rules & Procedures, 2000 MT 110, 299 M 321, 2 P3d 806, 57 St. Rep. 433 (2000), distinguishing U.S. v. Schwimmer, 892 F2d 237 (2nd Cir. 1989).

Corporate Officer Without Authority for Pro Se Representation of Corporation — Refusal to Consider Brief: Plaintiff realty corporation brought an action in District Court to find defendants in default for failure to make payments under a contract for deed. Plaintiff was represented by counsel in District Court, but on appeal, it was represented by the president of the corporation. The Supreme Court, sua sponte, raised the issue of whether the corporation could be represented by its president and held that it could not. Citing Weaver v. Law Firm of Graybill, 246 M 175, 803 P2d 1089 (1990), the Supreme Court held that a corporation is a separate legal entity and cannot appear on its own behalf through an agent other than an attorney. The Supreme Court therefore determined not to consider the brief filed by the president on behalf of the corporation. Cont. Realty, Inc. v. Gerry, 251 M 150, 822 P2d 1083, 48 St. Rep. 1134 (1991).

Legal Malpractice Complaint — Upheld Under Liberal Rules of Pleading: In a legal malpractice suit, the defendant-attorney moved to dismiss the action on the grounds that the complaint did not state a cause of action because the complaint did not specifically allege that had it not been for the negligence of the attorney, the client would have won the lawsuit. The District Court dismissed the case. The Supreme Court reversed, ruling that under Montana's liberal rules of pleading, the complaint was sufficient. R.H. Schwartz Constr. Specialties, Inc. v. Hanrahan, 207 M 105, 672 P2d 1116, 40 St. Rep. 1926 (1983).

Admission to Practice for Particular Purpose: The Supreme Court has the exclusive power to determine who may practice law in Montana, and the court may admit an attorney from another jurisdiction for the purpose of investigation and prosecution of criminal offenses disclosed by a legislative audit. St. v. Cline, 170 M 520, 555 P2d 724 (1976).

Legislative Veto Power Not to Extend to Admission to the Bar: Rules of appellate and civil procedure are subject to disapproval by the Legislature; however, as to rules promulgated by the court relative to practice, admission to the bar, and conduct of members of the bar, the Legislature has no such veto authority as, under the principle of separation of powers, the Supreme Court was given exclusive authority to promulgate such rules. In re McCabe, 168 M 334, 544 P2d 825 (1975).

Judicial Power to Make Rules Exclusive: Under Art. VII, sec. 2, Mont. Const., the Supreme Court has exclusive power to make rules governing admission to the bar and the conduct of its members, and the purported amendment of 37-61-204 (now repealed) by Ch. 342, L. 1974, was patently void and in contravention of the principle of separation of powers set forth in Art. III, sec. 1, Mont. Const. In re McCabe, 168 M 334, 544 P2d 825 (1975); In re Senate Bill No. 630, 164 M 366, 523 P2d 484 (1974).

Legality of Diploma Privilege:

Diploma privilege accorded graduates of University of Montana (now University of Montana-Missoula) law school does not violate the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th amendment and does not impinge upon fundamental right of interstate travel. Huffman v. Mont. Supreme Court, 372 F. Supp. 1175 (D.C. Mont. 1974), affirmed 419 US 955 (1974).

Familiarity of Supreme Court Justices with University of Montana (now University of Montana-Missoula) law school and its faculty and students justifies continuation of practice of admitting graduates without examination. Goetz v. Harrison, 154 M 274, 462 P2d 891 (1969).

Grant of diploma privilege to graduates of University of Montana (now University of Montana-Missoula) law school while requiring graduates of other accredited schools to take bar examination did not constitute an unconstitutional denial of equal protection of laws. Goetz v. Harrison, 154 M 274, 462 P2d 891 (1969).

Applicability to Administrative Proceedings: Section 37-61-208 (now repealed) is applicable to administrative proceedings under the supervision of the Supreme Court. Application of Am. Smelting & Ref. Co., 164 M 139, 520 P2d 103 (1973).

Jurisdiction of District Court: District Court had no jurisdiction of an action contesting the validity of 37-61-204 (now repealed) and seeking restraining order against members of Supreme Court in their official capacity. Goetz v. Harrison, 153 M 403, 457 P2d 911 (1969).

Waiver of Objection: Defendants, present in court during trial, who made no objection to the appearance of nonresident as their attorney, were not entitled to an order vacating and setting aside judgment on the ground that nonresident attorney was not licensed to practice in Montana. Shoal v. Bailey, 139 M 198, 362 P2d 234 (1961).

Admission Without Examination Denied: Where an applicant took and failed the bar examination three times, the Supreme Court will not allow a petition by the applicant to admit the applicant on motion and without examination, for this would set at naught the labors and recommendations of the Board of Law Examiners and nullify the governing statutes and rules of the court. Petition of Bergen, 125 M 607, 233 P2d 399 (1951).

Unauthorized Practice: Since the Supreme Court has been given the exclusive power to authorize persons to practice law and to deprive them of that right, it has jurisdiction to punish one attempting to practice in any court of law without a license as for a contempt. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937).

Fees of Nonresident Attorneys Not Allowed: While under 37-61-208 (now repealed) courts may permit a nonresident attorney who has been admitted to practice in his own state to appear on a cause on motion of a duly admitted attorney in this state, they may not allow a fee for his services to his client if successful. Vaill v. N. Pac. Ry. Co., 66 M 301, 213 P 446 (1923), overruled in Winer v. Jonal Corp., 169 M 247, 545 P2d 1094 (1976).

Notice to Nonresident Attorney: An attempted appearance for a foreign heir by an attorney residing in another state who had not been licensed to practice in this state either generally or specially, by means of a letter to the District Court stating that he appeared in behalf of the heir and requesting that notice in the proceeding be served upon him, amounted to no appearance and did not estop the heir from attacking the decree for want of notice. State ex rel. Rubin v. District Court, 62 M 60, 203 P 860 (1921), distinguished in Shoal v. Bailey, 139 M 198, 362 P2d 234 (1961).

Privileges of Nonresident Attorneys — Power of District Judge: A District Judge is without authority to grant anyone the privilege of appearing in his court to represent a client unless such person is duly admitted to practice law or a nonresident attorney, and in the latter case only for the purpose of conducting a particular cause and upon motion of a member of the bar of Montana. In re White, 54 M 476, 171 P 759 (1918).

Fraudulent Admission to Bar: It is ground for the disbarment of an attorney that he presented with his application a letter of recommendation to which he had forged the name of a local firm. In re Woodward, 27 M 355, 71 P 161 (1903).

Case Notes

Student Attorney Considered to Be Practicing Law: Following the resignation of the acting County Attorney, Jefferson County Commissioners interviewed applicants and subsequently selected Valerie Wilson to fill the position effective August 18, 1995. To be qualified for the position, state law requires an attorney to be admitted to practice for at least 5 years prior to appointment or election. The District Court concluded that although Wilson had begun practicing law as a student attorney in 1990, she was not admitted to the Montana Bar until October 1991 and thus would not achieve the required 5 years until October 1996. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, ruling that state law does not require that one must be admitted to the State Bar in order to be "deemed practicing law" in Montana. Certification of student attorneys by Supreme Court order along with certification by the dean of the law school provide the guidelines for admission of a student attorney to the practice of law. Shapiro v. Jefferson County, 278 M 109, 923 P2d 543, 53 St. Rep. 848 (1996).

Practicing Law Without License: The court properly dismissed appellants' complaint on the Daly Ditch decision because appellants' spokesman, Bernie Swift, was practicing law without a 2004 Annotations to the MCA license. He is not licensed to practice law in Montana and therefore cannot act as spokesman for others before the court. Swift v. St., 226 M 439, 736 P2d 117, 44 St. Rep. 786 (1987).

Filling In Preprinted Forms Not Practice of Law: When the bank filled in blanks on preprinted forms for a mortgage and deed of trust as a service to the buyer and the sellers and incident to a real estate transaction in which the bank was involved, this did not constitute the unauthorized practice of law. The Supreme Court listed three factors as most important in resolving the question of whether filling in preprinted real estate forms is the practice of law: (1) the real estate instruments must be prepared only incident to transactions in which the maker is interested; (2) the instruments must be prepared without a separate charge; and (3) the preparation must not go beyond the filling in of blank forms. Pulse v. N. Am. Land Title Co. of Mont., 218 M 275, 707 P2d 1105, 42 St. Rep. 1578 (1985).

Collection Agency Practices as Constituting the Practice of Law: Collection agency corporation acting in a representative capacity when it prepared pleadings and filed them in the District Court on assigned claims in which it was not the real party in interest and not entitled to bring the action under the facts presented was doing something usually done and performed by attorneys at law in the practice of their profession, and the corporation and its agent were practicing law within the meaning of this section. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937).

Acts Constituting Practice of Law: One who appears as an attorney of record in a cause pending in the District Court, files papers in behalf of a party thereto, and advertises himself as an attorney in newspapers, on letterheads used by him in his correspondence, or by a sign displayed in front of his office, practices law in a court of record. In re White, 54 M 476, 171 P 759 (1918); In re Bailey, 50 M 365, 146 P 1101 (1915).

Case Notes

Nonlawyer Filing Brief and Notice of Appearance for Civil Defendant: In the state's action against Brue for an injunction, alleging operation of an unlicensed and unshielded motor vehicle wrecking facility, Huffine filed a notice of appearance as counsel for Brue and a brief in support of the pleadings. Huffine advised the court that it should direct all further correspondence to him, "a private citizen having been designated to act as counsel by and for the Defendant". The actions of Huffine, who was not a licensed attorney, constituted the practice of law without a license and were a contempt of court. Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Denial of Lay Counsel in City Court — Any Prejudice Cured by Trial De Novo on Appeal: Henry was charged with driving under the influence and was tried in City Court. The City Court refused to permit a family friend to represent Henry in the trial. Henry then appealed to the District Court for a trial de novo in which Henry was represented by counsel. The Supreme Court refused to address the merits of Henry's claim of violation of the right to counsel. The trial de novo on appeal to the District Court cured any prejudice that may have resulted from the City Court's decision regarding representation. St. v. Henry, 271 M 491, 898 P2d 1195, 52 St. Rep. 516 (1995).

Nonlawyer Representing Others — Effect of Failure of Others to File Appeal Notice: A nonlawyer may represent himself or herself but may not represent another, including on appeal. Because the nonlawyer's relatives did not file notices of appeal, they were not properly before the court on the nonlawyer's appeal of the case. Traders St. Bank of Poplar v. Mann, 258 M 226, 852 P2d 604, 50 St. Rep. 509 (1993).

Limitation on Lay Representation in Courts of Limited Jurisdiction: Petitioners sought a declaration by the Supreme Court that under 25-31-601 and this section, nonattorneys have the right to represent clients in Montana courts of limited jurisdiction on a regular and recurring basis. After accepting original jurisdiction of the petition, the Supreme Court held that only practice before courts of limited jurisdiction as is specifically authorized by statute or court rule may be undertaken by lay people. This representation does not extend to criminal proceedings in any court or to representation in any jurisdiction on a regular and recurring basis. Section 25-31-601 provides for a one-time only grant of the privilege in Justice Court civil cases to enable a friend or relative to assist and speak on behalf of a party at one proceeding. Recurring representation constitutes the unauthorized practice of law. Sparks v. Johnson, 252 M 39, 826 P2d 928, 49 St. Rep. 124 (1992).

Pro Se Practice of Law by Corporate Shareholders and Directors Prohibited: Although shareholders and directors of a corporation have the right under 35-1-930 (now repealed) to take action on behalf of the corporation, that does not entitle those persons to practice law on behalf of the corporation. A corporation is a separate legal entity and cannot appear through an agent other than an attorney. Representation by a stockholder or director who is not an attorney constitutes contempt of court punishable under this section. Weaver v. Law Firm of Graybill, Ostrem, Warner & Crotty, 246 M 175, 803 P2d 1089, 47 St. Rep. 2316 (1990).

No Right to Representation by Nonlawyer: A defendant has an inalienable right to represent himself, but has no right to demand representation by a nonlawyer. A District Court lacks authority to allow representation of a defendant by a nonlawyer. St. v. Barnes, 232 M 405, 758 P2d 264, 45 St. Rep. 1150 (1988).

Corporate Practice of Law: Where an incorporated collection agency was practicing law, it was guilty of contempt for its acts in the Justices' Courts as well as in the District Court, for such a corporation cannot be entitled to practice law and is not a "person" entitled to the exceptions stated in this section. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937).

Acts Constituting Practice of Law Without a License: One who, though not admitted by the Supreme Court to practice in the courts of the state, holds himself out as an attorney at law by conducting legal correspondence on letterheads on which was printed his name followed by "Attorney at Law", by signing himself as such, by advertising himself by the use of a professional card in newspapers and telephone directory, and by a sign on his office building as an attorney, by taking and perfecting appeals from the Justice to the District Court, and appearing in the appellate court in connection with such appeals is practicing without a license and guilty of contempt of court under this section. In re Phillips, 64 M 492, 210 P 89 (1922).

District Court Power to Permit Practice Without License: Since a District Judge has no authority to permit one to practice law without having been admitted to the bar, such person cannot justify his violation of the law in this regard by alleging such permission as his excuse. In re White, 54 M 476, 171 P 759 (1918).

Nonresident Attorneys — Admission for Particular Case: Under 37-61-208 (now repealed), a nonresident attorney who has been admitted to practice in the highest courts of the state of his residence may, on motion of a member of the bar of this state, be permitted by a Judge before whom a trial is pending to appear and conduct that particular case. In re White, 54 M 476, 171 P 759 (1918).

Acts Constituting Practice of Law: A person who advises clients in legal matters pending or to be brought before a court of record, prepares pleadings or proceedings for use in a court of record, or appears before a court of record, either directly or by a partner or proxy, is practicing law in a court of record; and, if he has no license to do so, he is guilty of contempt of court. Case Notes

Validity of Attorney License Tax: A $25 license tax on attorneys, along with the attendant penalty provision for nonpayment, has the effect of regulating the practice of law in that an attorney may not practice law in Montana without paying the tax. The tax is a minimal and inoffensive intrusion on the Supreme Court's constitutional prerogatives and is valid as a legislative enactment in aid of the power of the court to regulate the practice of law. In re Application of Kradolfer v. Smith, 246 M 210, 805 P2d 1266, 47 St. Rep. 1861 (1990).

Tax on Sale of Attorney's Services — Invalid: A city ordinance imposing an annual tax on every lawyer or law firm carrying on the practice of law, calculated on the basis of gross revenue generated from attorney-client relationships, was held to be an unconstitutional sales tax. The tax was beyond the scope of self-government powers and in violation of 7-1-112, since it was not related to any regulatory control measure for the health or welfare of the city but was a tax on the sale of attorneys' services. Brueggemann v. Billings, 221 M 375, 719 P2d 768, 43 St. Rep. 905 (1986).

Regulatory Municipal Business License Applicable to Attorneys — Unconstitutional: A business license ordinance enacted by a self-governing municipality requiring municipal licensure of attorneys and providing for regulation was an unconstitutional encroachment on the Supreme Court's authority to regulate the bar as provided in Art. III, sec. 2, Mont. Const., because the ordinance conditions attorneys' access to the practice of law. The ordinance included police provisions that could conceivably cover standards of practice, prohibited attorneys from carrying on their occupation without procuring a municipal license, required municipal licensure of nonresident attorneys practicing in the municipality, and provided for fines and incarceration for failing to comply with the ordinance. Attorney Disclaiming Knowledge of Licensing Requirements: Upon returning to the state, an attorney paid his outstanding bar dues but was denied a license to practice law because there was an unresolved matter pending against him before the Commission on Practice. Subsequently, the attorney entered a notice of appearance in two actions. The attorney argued that he should not be disbarred for his actions because he was unsure of his status since paying his bar dues. The Supreme Court held that an attorney cannot disclaim knowledge of the licensing laws of the state. Practicing without a license is a misdemeanor that can subject an attorney to disbarment. In re Halprin, 244 M 363, 798 P2d 80, 47 St. Rep. 1242 (1990).

37-61-215. Allowance of attorneys' fees to unlicensed persons forbidden.Case Notes

Pro Se Litigant — No Standing to Question Validity of Statute: With respect to the purported unconstitutionality of 37-61-215 on the grounds that it did not provide for attorney fees to nonattorneys, Lussy had no standing to question its validity. He was not a prevailing party in the action below. The general rule is in the absence of statute or contract, attorney fees will not be awarded. On a reciprocal basis, if the respondents were entitled to attorney fees in this case by virtue of contract, Lussy would be entitled to the same under 28-3-704. However, to bring himself within the latter section, he must be the prevailing party. Lussy's assertion that he was attorney-in-fact for the members of his family was frivolous. Lussy v. Bennett, 214 M 301, 692 P2d 1232, 41 St. Rep. 2487 (1984).

Sister State Attorney — Recovery for Services: Court held that an attorney licensed in one state may recover for services rendered in Montana, even though not duly licensed in Montana, if he initially discloses that fact to his client and further informs him of the necessity to associate with local counsel because such an interpretation is better suited to the modern practice of law and in promoting comity between the states. Winer v. Jonal Corp., 169 M 247, 545 P2d 1094 (1976), overruling Vaill v. N. Pac. Ry. Co., 66 M 301, 213 P 446 (1923).

Justice Court Practice: Under this section the allowance of an attorney's fee by any court is unlawful in an action where the party to whom allowed is represented by one other than a duly licensed attorney. A demand for such allowance by one not an attorney in a Justice Court amounts to an unlawful practice of law. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937).

Admission and License Required: An attorney's fee is not allowable in any action or proceeding in which attorneys' fees are allowed by law unless the attorney has been duly admitted and licensed to practice in Montana, and though the words of the section are "duly admitted or licensed", the word "or" must be read "and", any other construction rendering the provision meaningless. Vaill v. N. Pac. Ry. Co., 66 M 301, 213 P 446 (1923).

Part 3Disbarment and Suspension*Part Case Notes

Constitutional Due Process and Equal Protection Rights Not Violated by Procedure in Rule 9 Regulating Practice of Attorneys: Formal complaints against two attorneys were filed with the State Bar Commission on Practice, which recommended disciplinary actions against the attorneys. In their appeal, the attorneys contended that Rule 9 of the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement, which sets forth the procedure relied on by the Commission, unconstitutionally violated their rights to due process, to an impartial tribunal, and to equal protection, because the procedure improperly vested both investigatory and adjudicatory functions in one body—the Commission. The Supreme Court disagreed. Applying Withrow v. Larkin, 421 US 35, 43 L Ed 2d 712, 95 S Ct 1456 (1975), the court noted that bias in a decisionmaker is not presumed and must be proved and that state and federal case law generally rejects the idea that the combination of judging and investigation functions is a denial of due process. Although attorneys who are confronted with proceedings that may result in the loss of their licenses to practice law are entitled to the same due process considerations as any other professionals faced with such proceedings, the attorneys in this case cited no authority stating that either equal protection or due process requires that identical procedures must be followed in all types of disciplinary proceedings, nor did they establish that the procedure for handling disciplinary complaints under Rule 9 denied them their constitutional rights. In re Goldstein & Albers v. Comm'n on Practice, 2000 MT 8, 297 M 493, 995 P2d 923, 57 St. Rep. 31 (2000), following In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984).

Constitutional Right to Due Process Not Violated by Confidentiality Provisions in Rule 13 Regulating Complaints Against Attorneys: Formal complaints against two attorneys were filed with the State Bar Commission on Practice, which recommended disciplinary actions against the attorneys. In their appeal, the attorneys contended that Rule 13 of the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement violated their rights to due process, based on their alleged inability to prepare for their cases before the Commission because of the prohibition against reviewing documents in the Commission's files that were filed prior to the filing of the formal complaints against them. Although agreeing that any exculpatory evidence obtained by the Commission prior to filing of the formal complaints that is related to the matters eventually included in the formal complaints must be disclosed to the respondent attorneys, the Supreme Court's examination of the files and records in the present case revealed no such exculpatory evidence. Thus, the attorneys failed to demonstrate any due process violation. In re Goldstein & Albers v. Comm'n on Practice, 2000 MT 8, 297 M 493, 995 P2d 923, 57 St. Rep. 31 (2000), following In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984).

Constitutional Right to Equal Protection Not Violated by Confidentiality Provisions in Rule 13 Regulating Complaints Against Attorneys: Formal complaints against two attorneys were filed with the State Bar Commission on Practice, which recommended disciplinary actions against the attorneys. In their appeal, the attorneys contended that Rule 13 of the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement violated their rights to equal protection under the law, making a comparison with the constitutional provision in Art. VII, sec. 11, Mont. Const., and statutes concerning the Judicial Standards Commission under which a judge responding to a disciplinary complaint may waive confidentiality. The Supreme Court found the argument inscrutable and unworthy of consideration. The attorneys failed to establish that they were treated differently under the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement from than any other attorney facing disciplinary charges. In re Goldstein & Albers v. Comm'n on Practice, 2000 MT 8, 297 M 493, 995 P2d 923, 57 St. Rep. 31 (2000), following In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984).

Constitutional Right to Free Speech Not Violated by Confidentiality Provisions in Rule 13 Regulating Complaints Against Attorneys: Formal complaints against two attorneys were filed with the State Bar Commission on Practice, which recommended disciplinary actions against the attorneys. In their appeal, the attorneys contended that Rule 13 of the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement violated their rights to free speech by placing a blanket gag order on all freedom of expression relating to ethical charges against an attorney, citing Doe v. Supreme Court of Fla., 734 F. Supp. 981 (S.D. Fla. 1990). The Supreme Court distinguished Doe based on totally different facts and circumstances. The attorneys failed to establish that their free speech rights were violated. In re Goldstein & Albers v. Comm'n on Practice, 2000 MT 8, 297 M 493, 995 P2d 923, 57 St. Rep. 31 (2000), following In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984).

Disciplinary Rules for Attorneys in Remarks on Criminal Cases — Violation of Attorney's Freedom of Speech: Disciplinary Rules 7-107(B) and (H) of the Canons of Professional Ethics, adopted in Montana to govern the conduct of attorneys, restrict the use of extrajudicial statements in criminal actions on various subjects to protect the accused's right to a fair trial. The Supreme Court voided the Rules because, read literally, the Rules invaded an attorney's right of free speech; thus, a standard for interpretation of the Rules would be necessary to balance an attorney's right to free speech and the accused's right to a fair trial. The court declined to adopt such a standard and instead provided that new disciplinary rules be drafted incorporating such a standard. In re Keller, 213 M 196, 693 P2d 1211, 41 St. Rep. 2045 (1984).

Commission on Practice and Disciplinary Proceedings — Not Violative of Due Process: The Commission on Practice, a body appointed by the Supreme Court, undertakes proceedings relating to the discipline of members of the bar. The proceedings are designed to establish a record upon which the Supreme Court may act, the Supreme Court having retained exclusive jurisdiction over disciplinary matters. The accused member of the bar retains full rights of representation, confrontation, production of evidence, and argument before the Commission. The report of the Commission is not binding on the Supreme Court, and the accused may again make denials and argue defenses before the Supreme Court. This process does not constitute any deprivation of due process rights but rather provides an orderly process preserving in the accused the widest latitude of due process. In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984), followed in In re Goldstein & Albers v. Comm'n on Practice, 2000 MT 8, 297 M 493, 995 P2d 923, 57 St. Rep. 31 (2000).

Preservation of Confidences and Secrets of Client — Disciplinary Rule 4-101: Disciplinary Rule 4-101 relates to the preservation of confidences and secrets of a client. As the term "secret" is used in the rule, the rule prohibits the unconsented-to disclosure of information that would be embarrassing or detrimental to the client even though the information related to the client's child rather than to the client herself. In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984).

GENERAL

County Attorney Censured for Questioning Defendant Without Opposing Counsel Present: The Supreme Court censured a County Attorney for questioning a defendant when the defendant's attorney was not present and for failing to attend several hearings scheduled by the Commission on Practice. In re Quinlan, 245 M 438, 801 P2d 1337, 47 St. Rep. 2182 (1990).

Commission Findings Adopted — Disbarment Ordered: Adopting the findings of the Commission on Practice, the Supreme Court ordered disbarment based on facts that the attorney: (1) had been temporarily suspended from practice in 1990 for conviction of the crime of issuing bad checks and for nonpayment of State Bar of Montana membership dues; (2) failed to respond orally or in writing to a complaint filed by the Commission; (3) failed to perfect an appeal in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals on behalf of a client who paid him to do so; (4) was convicted of criminal contempt for failure to appear at the sentencing of his client before the U.S. District Court of Western Michigan and misrepresented to the District Court Judge the nature of the Montana bad check charge; (5) was suspended by the State Bar in 1986 for noncompliance with court rules for mandatory continuing legal education and for failure to pay State Bar dues; (6) represented a client in federal court in California while suspended from practice of law in Montana; and (7) was admonished by the Third Circuit Court of Appeals in 1988 for failure to diligently prosecute his client's cause. In re Shrom, 246 M 333, 806 P2d 23, 47 St. Rep. 2086 (1990).

Commission Not Divested of Jurisdiction by Surrender of License: The appellant argued that his surrender of his license divested the Commission on Practice of its jurisdiction so that it could not take the further action of recommending his disbarment. The Supreme Court disagreed, pointing out that the pertinent rule was amended prior to the date of the surrender so that surrender no longer affected the Commission's jurisdiction. In re Pearce, 246 M 313, 806 P2d 21, 47 St. Rep. 2054 (1990).

Distinction Between Disbarment and Suspension: The Supreme Court held that although the statutes do not differentiate between disbarment and suspension, a difference does exist. The court indicated that disbarment implies a more permanent or severe penalty even though the disbarred attorney has the same rights to seek reinstatement as a suspended attorney. In re Morse, 245 M 49, 798 P2d 75, 47 St. Rep. 1189 (1990).

Consideration of Nature of Dealings Between Attorney and Client: When the determination of duties owed to an insurance company by its attorney involved a question of fact, the District Court did not err in examining past legal dealings between the parties or in ascertaining the exact duties expected of the attorney from an examination of the parties' conduct. Based on that conduct, the court properly concluded that the attorney had fulfilled his required advisory duties and was not liable for any negligence or breach of contract. Aetna Fin. Co. v. Ball, 237 M 535, 774 P2d 992, 46 St. Rep. 1031 (1989).

Establishment of Professional Negligence Action Against Attorney — Proof Required: To establish a professional negligence action, the plaintiff must prove that the professional owed him a duty and that the professional failed to live up to that duty, causing damages to the plaintiff. In pursuing a negligence or breach of contract action against an attorney, the plaintiff must initially establish the existence of an attorney-client relationship. The plaintiff must then establish that the acts constituting negligence or breach of contract occurred, proximately causing damages to the plaintiff. Finally, the plaintiff must establish that but for the negligence or breach of contract, the client would have been successful in the prosecution or defense of the action. Lorash v. Epstein, 236 M 21, 767 P2d 1335, 46 St. Rep. 151 (1989), citing Christy v. Saliterman, 179 NW 2d 288 (Minn. 1970), and followed in Merzlak v. Purcell, 252 M 527, 830 P2d 1278, 49 St. Rep. 139 (1992), Oar Lock Land & Cattle Co. v. Crowley, 253 M 336, 833 P2d 146, 49 St. Rep. 456 (1992), Kane v. Miller, 258 M 182, 852 P2d 130, 50 St. Rep. 488 (1993), Moore v. Does 1 to 25, 271 M 162, 895 P2d 209, 52 St. Rep. 399 (1995), Fang v. Bock, 2001 MT 116, 305 M 322, 28 P2d 456 (2001), and Babcock Place Ltd. Partnership v. Berg, Lilly, Andriolo, & Tollefsen, P.C., 2003 MT 111, 315 M 364, 69 P3d 1145 (2003).

Misconduct Warranting Disbarment Rather Than Suspension: Disbarment, rather than temporary suspension, was appropriate for an attorney charged with seven counts of misconduct in the practice of law, including the use of methods that serve only to embarrass and burden a third party, failure to provide competent representation, failure to exercise the degree of competency required of an attorney in prosecuting an action without a good faith basis, and the promotion of prostitution. In re Bechhold, 235 M 383, 771 P2d 563, 46 St. Rep. 74 (1989).

Indefinite Suspension Proper — Violation of Ethics Rules: The Supreme Court adopted the recommendations of the Commission on Practice that an attorney be indefinitely suspended from practice, be required to remit client fees, and pay Commission costs. The Commission found that Rules 1.16(d) and 8.4(c) of the Rules of Professional Conduct were violated by the attorney's failure to remit client fees and return his work product to the clients when he knew or should have known that he was going to leave the state and could not represent the clients. Also, Rules 8.4(c), 8.4(d), and 3.3(a)(1) were violated when the attorney set forth as one continuous quotation statements actually taken from two entirely different portions of a deposition, resulting in a misleading representation of testimony. In re Ziskind, 233 M 510, 766 P2d 218, 45 St. Rep. 1691 (1988).

Suspension and Censure Appropriate — Ethics Violations: The Supreme Court affirmed the recommendations of the Commission on Practice to censure and suspend an attorney after substantiating counts of filing frivolous and unfounded ethics violations claims against opposing counsel; disobedience of a judge's order; attempting to obstruct justice; physical assault; outrageous, undignified, and discourteous conduct; intimidation and threats to a public official; contacting a prospective client for private representation on a matter investigated by the County Attorney's office; conflict of interest; contacting an adverse party represented by counsel; and a continued pattern of misconduct. In re Belue, 232 M 365, 766 P2d 206, 45 St. Rep. 1119 (1988).

Expert Testimony Required in Legal Malpractice Case — Directed Verdict Proper: An attorney's standard of care depends on the skill and care ordinarily exercised by attorneys—a criteria that rarely falls within the common knowledge of lay persons. Therefore, expert testimony is required in a legal malpractice case. Absent such testimony, a directed verdict was proper. Carlson v. Morton, 229 M 234, 745 P2d 1133, 44 St. Rep. 1929 (1987), followed in Brown v. Small, 251 M 414, 825 P2d 1209, 49 St. Rep. 98 (1992), and Moore v. Does 1 to 25, 271 M 162, 895 P2d 209, 52 St. Rep. 399 (1995).

Disciplinary Action Against Attorney: The Supreme Court relied on the findings of fact of the Commission on Practice and concluded that the attorney who was the subject of the disciplinary action failed to shift the burden of demonstrating that the findings were not supported by the evidence or that the recommendations were erroneous or unlawful. However, the court rejected the Commission's recommendation that the attorney be disbarred. In re Goldman, 179 M 526, 588 P2d 964, 35 St. Rep. 1912 (1978).

Maliciously Attempting to Deprive Persons of Property: Professional misconduct in the form of maliciously filing a quitclaim deed to cloud the title of property in order to deprive the owner of the property merits disbarment. In re Conklin, 169 M 549, 556 P2d 1237, 33 St. Rep. 1024 (1976).

Exceptions to Findings of Commission on Practice — Sham: The purpose of making and filing exceptions to the report, findings, and recommendations of the Commission on Practice is to permit one charged with misconduct to challenge the findings of the Commission or its conclusions resulting from an adversary hearing wherein the weight of evidence is considered and the conclusions arrived at thereby. When the person charged offers no evidence and waives the presentation of proof, an exception to the findings or conclusions of the Commission is a sham and frivolous. In re Carstensen, 167 M 321, 539 P2d 387 (1975).

Recommendations of Commission Rejected: Although the recommendations of the Commission on Practice are given careful consideration, the recommendation of indefinite suspension was rejected for attorney who admitted to violations involving moral turpitude with no proof of mental disease or defect, and disbarment was ordered. In re Hall, 164 M 543, 530 P2d 456 (1974).

Debauching of Young Girl: Disbarment was justified for attorney who had been previously disciplined by reprimand and who, after having been charged with debauching young girl, represented her procurer in criminal proceedings, represented both parties in procurer's divorce action, represented girl in quashing affidavit after procurer had married her, and represented another defendant charged with raping the girl. In re Keast, 159 M 311, 497 P2d 103 (1972).

No Jurisdictional Question as to Decision to Act: Where the accused attorney is charged with felonies committed without the sphere of his duties as such but the court, after an investigation by the Attorney General and report made to it by him sufficient to move its discretion, has decided to act, its exercise of that discretion does not present a jurisdictional question. In re Young, 77 M 332, 250 P 957 (1926).

Jurisdiction of Supreme Court Exclusive: The Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction in a disbarment proceeding to hear the evidence and determine the truth of charges of crimes and misdemeanors involving moral turpitude, whether committed within this jurisdiction or not and whether within or without the sphere of official duty. In re Thresher, 33 M 441, 84 P 876 (1906).

Sufficiency of Evidence: Sufficient facts were not stated to render respondent liable to disbarment under subsection (2)(e) of this section. In re Weed, 26 M 241, 67 P 308 (1902), distinguished in In re McCue, 80 M 537, 261 P 341 (1927).

Accusation by Private Person Allowed: Where an accusation preferred by a private person in a disbarment proceeding is for a cause named in subsection (2)(e) of this section, an objection that such accusation is preferred by a person not authorized by law to inform the court of the matters therein charged is without merit. In re Wellcome, 23 M 140, 58 P 45 (1899).

Nature of Action Not Criminal: A proceeding in disbarment is in no sense a criminal investigation. In re Thresher, 33 M 441, 84 P 876 (1906); In re Wellcome, 23 M 213, 58 P 47 (1899).

Truth of Charges Alone Not Investigated: Where the accused is charged with bribery and conspiracy, the court will refuse to inquire into the truth of the charges unless reasons be furnished by the accusation or by a showing in support of it why jurisdiction should be entertained in advance of a criminal prosecution and conviction. In re Wellcome, 23 M 140, 58 P 45 (1899), distinguished in In re Young, 77 M 332, 250 P 957 (1926).

CONVICTION OF CRIME

Censure and Temporary Suspension for Crimes of Moral Turpitude: The record of conviction of misdemeanors involving moral turpitude, including failure to disburse and an aggravated case of resisting arrest, was conclusive evidence of cause for public censure and removal or suspension from practice. In re Vainio, 240 M 413, 787 P2d 744, 46 St. Rep. 2094 (1989).

Scheme to Defraud as Warranting Disbarment: Conviction by a jury in a federal court of the offense of devising and intending to devise a scheme to defraud and to obtain money by means of false and fraudulent pretenses warranted attorney's disbarment. In re Gross, 160 M 506, 503 P2d 995 (1972), certiorari denied 410 US 991 (1973).

Action by Court on Own Motion: Under subsection (2)(a) of this section, whenever it is brought to its attention that an attorney of the bar of this state has been convicted of a felony or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude in a state or federal court, the Supreme Court will on its own motion and on the record of conviction alone strike his name from the roll of attorneys. In re Peters, 73 M 284, 235 P 772 (1925).

Only Record of Conviction Necessary: Since, generally, the record of conviction of an attorney itself shows whether the crime or misdemeanor of which he was convicted involved moral turpitude, the only question before the Supreme Court in a disbarment proceeding based upon subsection (2)(a) of this section is whether he was convicted, not whether he was actually guilty. In re Peters, 73 M 284, 235 P 772 (1925).

Nature of Action Not Criminal: A proceeding in disbarment is in no sense a criminal investigation. In re Thresher, 33 M 441, 84 P 876 (1906); In re Wellcome, 23 M 213, 58 P 47 (1899).

DECEIT INVOLVING MORAL TURPITUDE

Fraudulent Procurement of Real Estate: Disbarment, rather than 3 months' suspension, was ordered for attorney who grossly overcharged aged and illiterate client on annual retainer basis, then procured conveyance to himself of valuable real estate on pretext of protecting client's interest but refused to reconvey on demand claiming that the conveyance had been in consideration for legal services. In re McDonald, 112 M 129, 113 P2d 790 (1941).

Defrauding of Bank: Evidence in a disbarment proceeding reviewed and held sufficient to warrant the referee's findings that the accused had made a false entry upon a blank bank deposit slip on which by inadvertence the signature of a bank officer had been placed in carbon and on which on presentation to the bank he had obtained credit for the amount of such entry, thus defrauding the bank of that amount. In re Young, 77 M 332, 250 P 957 (1926).

Misrepresentation as to Sanity of Party: Where an attorney at law testifies, in an action which, by reason of the defense interposed, involves the legality of a marriage, that one of the parties to such marriage was at the time thereof insane, such testimony being given for the purpose and with the intent of deceiving the court and inducing the presiding judge to believe that such party was incapable of entering into a marriage contract, such conduct of the attorney justifies his disbarment under subsection (2)(e) of this section. In re O'Keefe, 55 M 200, 175 P 593 (1918).

Attorney Representing Both Parties: Where an attorney acted for both parties in a divorce proceeding without acquainting the court with all the facts connected with the case, he was guilty of deceit and malpractice involving moral turpitude. In re Carleton, 33 M 431, 84 P 788 (1906).

Divorce Proceedings — Agreement for Fees: The conduct of an attorney who entered into a contract with his client in a divorce proceeding whereby he was to receive, in addition to the attorney's fee that might be allowed him by the court, a portion of all money received by his client as alimony, and who failed to call such agreement to the court's attention prior to the making of the order allowing counsel fees, is reprehensible and in violation of his duty as a member of the bar, in that he was guilty of deceit and malpractice involving moral turpitude. In re Carleton, 33 M 431, 84 P 788 (1906).

MISAPPROPRIATION

Commingle of Client's Funds: When an attorney commingled the proceeds of a Veterans' Administration (now Veterans Affairs) loan with his own funds and used them to pay obligations other than that for which the loan was intended, deceived the Veterans' Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs) and the client as to the status of documents pertaining to the loan, and had received a prior private censure for like conduct, he was ordered disbarred. In re Carstensen, 167 M 321, 539 P2d 384 (1975).

Unauthorized Use of Estate Funds as Deceit: The conduct of an attorney in opening a checking account in the name of an estate of which he had been appointed executor and making withdrawals for his personal use constituted deceit and malpractice involving moral turpitude. In re O'Donnell, 143 M 51, 387 P2d 303 (1963).

Willful Refusal to Return Funds as Violation of Oath: Under subsection (2)(b) of this section, providing that an attorney may be disbarred for "violation of the oath taken by him, or of his duties as such attorney", an attorney may be punished for a willful omission to remit money collected by him as such, even though he did not practice deceit and frankly admits his delinquency. In re McCue, 80 M 537, 261 P 341 (1927).

Misrepresentation and Personal Use of Funds Deposited With Clerk: An attorney, after securing an order of court to that effect, withdrew the sum of $414.90 deposited by a client with a Clerk of Court as a tender, after final disposition of the action by the Supreme Court adverse to his client, and thereafter, in reply to inquiries by the client, repeatedly stated that the money was still in the hands of the Clerk, where it should remain until the end of the litigation so as to keep the tender good, notwithstanding the funds had long been misappropriated by him. Under pretense that he was still conducting the litigation in her behalf, he obtained the additional sum of $65 at various times as court fees and expenses. For these acts the attorney was guilty of conduct warranting his disbarment. In re Thresher, 33 M 441, 84 P 876 (1906). See also In re Lunke, 56 M 226, 182 P 126 (1919).

MORAL TURPITUDE

Pattern of Conduct as Reason for Disbarment: Even though an act falls short of an offense involving moral turpitude under case law prior to adoption by the Supreme Court of the canons of professional ethics, it may justify disbarment. Even though an individual act or omission may in and of itself be insufficient grounds for action, repeated violations establishing a pattern of conduct revealing a gross disregard for the highest standards of honesty, justice, or morality may and should be grounds for disbarment, suspension, censure, or a request for surrender of license to practice law. In re Advisory Opinion to Comm'n on Practice, 156 M 514, 495 P2d 1128 (1971).

Failure to Return Employees' Withholding Taxes: Failure of attorney to make return of employees' withholding taxes was offense involving moral turpitude under this section so as to justify indefinite suspension from practice. In re Kline, 156 M 177, 477 P2d 881 (1970).

Vices to Affect Attorneys' Personal or Professional Integrity: Since complaints against attorneys may be prosecuted only for causes specified by this section, where specific charges under that section are made and none of them present the question of general moral delinquency other than such as may be included under subsection (2)(e), "being guilty of deceit, malpractice, crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude", the court is confined to the specifications made against him, upon which he was tried, and cannot punish him for vices affecting to some extent his moral character but not his personal or professional integrity. In re McCue, 80 M 537, 261 P 341 (1927).

Definition: Moral turpitude, within the meaning of this section, authorizing the disbarment of an attorney on conviction of a crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, is everything done contrary to justice, honesty, or good morals. In re Peters, 73 M 284, 235 P 772 (1925).

Forgery: The crime of forgery involves moral turpitude within the meaning of subsection (2)(a) of this section. In re Sutton, 50 M 88, 145 P 6 (1914).

Permanent Disbarment Not Mandated for Felony: Permanent disbarment is not mandated upon conviction of a felony. In re McKeon, 201 M 515, 656 P2d 179, 39 St. Rep. 2270 (1982).

Reinstatement Following Disbarment for Multiple Felonies: On the record, petitioner showed by clear and convincing evidence that he was entitled to reinstatement to the State Bar of Montana. Petitioner had pleaded guilty to the felonies of offering false evidence, obtaining money by false pretenses, grand larceny by bailee, and forgery. Eight years had passed, and he had served his prison time and was making restitution on schedule. He had lived an exemplary life during the 8 years and had a record of immense service to the public prior to the commission of the felonies. The evidence against reinstatement consisted of a letter stating that felons should be denied reinstatement and a statement from a businessman that reinstatement should be denied in view of the severity of the crimes. Reinstatement was supported by 20 letters and by petitions with approximately 250 signatures, 48 of them those of lawyers. No person requested an opportunity to appear at a hearing in opposition to the application for reinstatement. An investigation into the application had been made. The evidence uniformly showed that applicant had reformed and that the public believed he had reformed. In re McKeon, 201 M 515, 656 P2d 179, 39 St. Rep. 2270 (1982).

Part 4

Provisions Regulating Practice

Part Case Notes

Question of Material Fact Regarding Law Firm's Handling of Real Estate Contract — Summary Judgment Improperly Granted: Plaintiff sued its law firm for work performed in writing a contract for a real estate transaction. Plaintiff's expert opined that the firm violated the standard of care when it: (1) had a nonattorney with no contract drafting experience draft the initial agreement and insert an inaccurate legal description of the property obtained from plaintiff's own engineering firm; (2) used the phrase "more or less" to cure defects in the property description when the legal description was clearly deficient; (3) failed to include a provision that required the seller to sign future applications for a final plat; and (4) failed to execute proper escrow documents to prevent the seller from having veto power over any proposed development of the property. The law firm presented its own expert to refute the allegations. The District Court analyzed the allegations of negligence, applying the legal malpractice standards in Lorash v. Epstein, 236 M 21, 767 P2d 1335 (1989), and, finding no issues of material fact, granted the law firm's motion for summary judgment. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed, finding that summary judgment was improper. The conflicting expert testimony itself raised a material issue of fact regarding the standard of care that required resolution by a trier of fact. Further, material questions remained concerning whether the law firm's independent failure to recognize a problem with the legal description contributed as a cause to plaintiff's damages, whether the firm followed the requisite standard of care in drafting the escrow agreement, and whether the purported terms of the escrow agreement satisfied the requisite standard of care. Babcock Place Ltd. Partnership v. Berg, Lilly, Andriolo, & Tollefsen, P.C., 2003 MT 111, 315 M 364, 69 P3d 1145 (2003).

Defense Attorney's Remarks Constituting Entry of Plea Without Defendant's Consent and Undermining Plea Agreement — Prejudice Warranting New Trial: Jefferson indicated in a pretrial letter to the District Court that he wished to withdraw from a plea agreement to plead guilty to felony assault in order to have the opportunity to either be acquitted or be convicted of a lesser offense than felony assault. However, in both opening statements and in closing arguments, Jefferson's defense counsel admitted Jefferson's guilt to felony assault, undermining the very purpose for which Jefferson withdrew from the plea agreement and directly contravening the reason Jefferson accepted the risk involved in facing the more serious charge of attempted deliberate homicide in a jury trial. Counsel's statements had the effect of entering a plea for Jefferson without Jefferson's consent and by which the jury was not bound. The admission could not be considered a trial strategy or tactical decision under the circumstances, and counsel's conduct fell below the reasonable range of professional conduct required. The question under the Strickland test then became whether Jefferson was prejudiced by counsel's conduct. Counsel precluded Jefferson from making a case for a lesser offense by admitting Jefferson's guilt of felony assault, denying Jefferson of both the right to deny guilt and to have the benefit of the previous agreement to admit guilt. There would have been no reason for Jefferson to withdraw from the plea agreement or to go to trial if he had been aware that his counsel would initiate the trial with an admission of guilt to felony assault. This prejudicial conduct by counsel rendered the criminal proceeding fundamentally unfair, and the Supreme Court reversed for a new trial. St. v. Jefferson, 2003 MT 90, 315 M 146, 69 P3d 641 (2003).

Implied Attorney-Client Relationship — Motion for Disqualification of Attorney — Client's Burden of Showing Reasonable Belief That Attorney-Client Relationship Exists: Defendant telephoned attorney Penwell's office and spoke to the legal secretary regarding possible representation in this action, but never spoke personally to Penwell. Defendant was informed that Penwell was accepting no new cases and was referred to another attorney. Penwell ultimately appeared as counsel for plaintiff, and defendant moved to disqualify Penwell, asserting that confidential information was disclosed during the telephone conversation with the secretary and that the information was imputed to Penwell, creating an attorney-client relationship. At the hearing on the motion, defendant did not disclose what type of information was allegedly disclosed, relying on the conclusory statement that what was disclosed was confidential. The District Court denied the motion, holding that defendant had failed to meet the burden of conclusively establishing the existence of an attorney-client relationship. Defendant appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Although an alleged client should not be required to reveal actual confidences at a disqualification hearing, the alleged client must at least inform the court of the nature of the information disclosed so that the court can make a reasoned judgment. Under the circumstances, defendant could not have reasonably believed that an attorney-client relationship was formed with Penwell, based upon two telephone conversations with the secretary, when defendant never spoke or met with Penwell, and was advised that Penwell would not take the case. Pro-Hand Serv. Trust v. Monthei, 2002 MT 134, 310 M 165, 49 P3d 56 (2002).

Improper Grant of Motion to Dismiss Legal Malpractice Suit for Failure to State Claim Upon Which Relief Could Be Granted: Hauschulz faced criminal charges in Billings, and while awaiting trial, he was extradited to Idaho on unrelated charges and incarcerated. The Michael Law Firm was hired to represent Hauschulz in the Billings proceedings, which Hauschulz could not attend. Instead of moving for dismissal of the charges unless Montana extradited Hauschulz, the law firm professed not to know where Hauschulz was and negotiated an unauthorized plea agreement on behalf of Hauschulz. Upon learning of the law firm's actions, Hauschulz filed a legal malpractice complaint alleging constitutional violations and requesting damages. The District Court dismissed the action on grounds that Hauschulz had failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, reasoning that no damages could be awarded because Hauschulz's problems all stemmed from the failure to appear at trial. Hauschulz appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. A complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond a doubt that plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the claim that would entitle the plaintiff to relief, and a dismissal will be affirmed by the Supreme Court only if plaintiff is not entitled to relief under any set of facts that would support the claim. As set out in Merzlak v. Purcell, 252 M 527, 830 P2d 1278 (1992), to recover damages in a legal malpractice claim, plaintiff must establish that: (1) the professional owed plaintiff a duty of care; (2) the professional breached the duty of care through failure to use reasonable care and skill; (3) plaintiff suffered an injury; and (4) the professional's conduct was the proximate cause of the injury. In this case, the Supreme Court found that each element was satisfied. Hauschulz might be able to prove a set of facts that would entitle him to relief and has stated a sufficient claim to survive a challenge under Rule 12(b), M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20). Hauschulz v. Michael Law Firm, 2001 MT 160, 306 M 102, 30 P3d 357 (2001). See also Trankel v. St., 282 M 348, 938 P2d 614 (1997).

Failure to Show That but for Negligent Legal Advice, Deportation Could Have Been Successfully Defended — Professional Negligence Claim Properly Dismissed: Fang, a Chinese citizen and lawful permanent United States resident employed by Montana State University-Bozeman, was involved in a domestic dispute with his wife that resulted in charges of assault. Fang consulted Bock, who worked at the university legal services offices, regarding the possibility of deportation. Bock in turn consulted Rice, an attorney who had made a presentation on immigration law at a seminar that Bock had attended, and asked if a misdemeanor domestic abuse charge was grounds for deportation. Rice informed Bock that the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) would not initiate deportation proceedings until the commission of two misdemeanors. Bock relayed that information to Fang, who relied at least in part on the information and pleaded guilty to family member assault. However, in 1996, Congress enacted a new immigration statute (see 8 U.S.C. 1227(a)(2)(E)(i)) that provides that domestic violence convictions are deportable offenses. Several weeks after pleading guilty, Fang received a notice to appear and face deportation. After hiring new counsel, Fang moved to withdraw the guilty plea. The District Court granted the motion on grounds that the failure of Bock to inform Fang of the possibility of removal to China constituted ineffective assistance of counsel, and the INS agreed to suspend further proceedings until the resolution of charges against Fang. Based on the advice of his new counsel, Fang reached a plea agreement with the Gallatin County Attorney to plead guilty to an amended charge of assault. Following conviction, the INS again moved to deport Fang, and based on the fact that assault also constitutes a crime of violence against a protected person pursuant to federal immigration law, Fang was ordered to be deported. Fang then filed a complaint against Bock, seeking damages for professional negligence and negligent supervision and treble damages under 37-61-406. The District Court applied Lorash v. Epstein, 236 M 21, 767 P2d 1335 (1989), and determined that Fang could not satisfy the last element of the test for a prima facie case of professional negligence, which requires a showing that but for such negligence, Fang would have successfully defended against the offense. The court then summarily dismissed the case. Fang appealed, contending that because of Bock's advice, he was exposed to the possibility of removal from this country and had to spend substantial amounts of money to avoid that exposure. Pursuant to Lorash, the Supreme Court had to determine whether Fang would have been exposed to the possibility of removal from this country with or without Bock's advice, in light of the offenses to which Fang pleaded guilty, the statutory basis for deportation, and the immigration judge's explanation for the deportation order. Under either charge, Fang was guilty of an offense of violence against a protected person—his wife. The title of the offense was irrelevant because for purposes of immigration law, misdemeanor assault is considered just as much a crime of violence against a spouse as family member assault. Further, Fang's argument that a different result was compelled by the fact that the assault conviction was subsequently expunged based on a deferred prosecution also failed because under federal case law, no effect is to be given to a state action that purports to remove a guilty plea or conviction by operation of a state rehabilitative statute. Thus, Fang's situation was a result of the conduct that he admitted and was the same following correct legal advice as it was following Bock's incorrect advice. Although Bock misinformed Fang, that advice did not lead to Fang's predicament, nor would the money that he spent to have the first conviction set aside have changed the result. Fang could not prove that but for negligent legal advice he could have avoided deportation, and Bock was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fang v. Bock, 2001 MT 116, 305 M 322, 28 P3d 456 (2001).

In-House Counsel Not Precluded From Bringing Wrongful Discharge From Employment Claim Even if Proof of Claim Requires Disclosure of Confidential Information: Burkhardt was hired as in-house counsel for Semitool, Inc. (Semitool). Following his discharge from employment, Burkhardt sued Semitool for wrongful discharge. The District Court concluded that even though Burkhardt had a right to protection against wrongful discharge, Semitool also had a right to protection of its trade secrets and that because the rights conflicted, the attorney-client privilege must prevail. The court dismissed Burkhardt's claim on grounds that he was precluded from bringing an employment claim because, as staff counsel hired to provide legal advice or services, proof of the claim would require disclosure of confidential matters. Burkhardt maintained on appeal that the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act applied to any employee and that there was no exclusion for attorneys. Semitool argued that because Art. VII, sec. 2, Mont. Const., gives the Supreme Court sole authority to regulate the conduct of lawyers, the Act is unconstitutional to the extent that it interferes with that authority. Semitool also cited Campbell v. Bozeman Investors of Duluth, 1998 MT 204, 290 M 374, 964 P2d 41 (1998), for the "universal rule" that clients may fire lawyers at any time, for any reason, with or without cause and that for that reason, application of the Act to the employment relationship of staff attorneys and the client employer was not proper. In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court examined two lines of cases from other jurisdictions that appeared to support either conclusion. The court then concluded that the reasoning and analysis in Gen. Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court, 876 P2d 487 (Calif. 1994), and its progeny were the more sound and realistic approach. The holding in Campbell does not create an absolute right to discharge an attorney with complete impunity no matter the form of the attorney-client relationship. The universal rule does not apply in an attorney-client relationship in which the attorney is the employee of the client because in that context, the client has avoided the traditional relationship and granted the attorney protections that do not apply to independent contractors, but do apply to employees, including the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act. Further, although Art. VII, sec. 2, Mont. Const., gives the Supreme Court sole authority to regulate the conduct of lawyers, the court does not have sole authority to regulate employer conduct. The Act pertains solely to employer conduct and does not implicate the conduct of lawyers in the practice of law, and thus, it is not an unconstitutional encroachment on the court's authority for the Act to apply to lawyers as employees or employers. Further, Rule 1.6 of the Montana Rules of Professional Conduct contemplates that a lawyer may reveal confidential attorney-client information to the extent that the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to establish an employment-related claim against an employer who is also a client. Thus, the plain language of the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act requires courts to recognize an in-house counsel's right to pursue and maintain an action for wrongful discharge, and those claims are within the contemplation of the rules of professional conduct for attorneys. A lawyer does not forfeit rights simply because confidential information must be used to prove them, nor may a client gain the right to cheat the lawyer by imparting confidences. Burkhardt v. Semitool, Inc., 2000 MT 201, 300 M 480, 5 P3d 1031, 57 St. Rep. 785 (2000). See also Doe v. A Corp., 709 F2d 1043 (5th Cir. 1983).

Insurer-Imposed Billing Rules and Procedures Violative of Rules of Professional Conduct: When presented with the question of whether an attorney licensed to practice in Montana or admitted pro hac vice may agree to abide by an insurer's billing and practice rules that impose conditions limiting or directing the scope and extent of representation of the attorney's client, the insured, the Supreme Court considered the requirement imposed by some insurers that defense counsel secure the consent of the insurer's claim professional before proceeding with the case, in order to ensure adequate consultation. Insurers cited Jessen v. O'Daniel, 210 F. Supp. 317 (D.C. Mont. 1962), for the proposition that under Montana law, in the absence of a real conflict, the insurer and the insured are dual clients of defense counsel, arguing that as co-client of defense counsel, the insurer may require preapproval of attorney activities. The Supreme Court noted that although decisions subsequent to Jessen recognized the conclusion that an insurance contract may place absolute control of litigation in the hands of the insurer, the dual representation doctrine is not recognized under the Rules of Professional Conduct, but applies only in determining whether the communications between an insurer and its attorneys are subject to the attorney-client privilege. The contractual relationship between insurer and insured does not supersede or waive defense counsels' obligations under the Rules of Professional Conduct. Rather, the Rules of Professional Conduct have application in all cases involving attorneys and clients, and under the rules, the insured is the sole client of defense counsel. The court concluded that defense counsel in Montana who submit to the requirement of prior approval from the insurer violate the Rules of Professional Conduct by fundamentally interfering with their duties to exercise independent judgment and to give their undivided loyalty to insureds. The court noted that the prior approval requirement also creates a substantial appearance of impropriety by suggesting that the insurer, rather than defense counsel, controls the day-to-day details of the defense. In re Rules of Professional Conduct & Insurer Imposed Billing Rules & Procedures, 2000 MT 110, 299 M 321, 2 P3d 806, 57 St. Rep. 433 (2000).

Requirement That Attorney Submit Detailed Descriptions of Services Violative of Client Confidentiality: When presented with the question of whether an attorney licensed to practice in Montana or admitted pro hac vice may be required by an insurer's billing and practice rules to submit detailed descriptions of professional services to outside persons or entities, such as third-party insurance auditors, without first obtaining the informed consent of the client, insurers cited U.S. v. Mass. Institute of Technology, 129 F3d 681 (1st Cir. 1997), in claiming that as agents of insurers, third-party auditors are part of a privileged community or magic circle within which confidential information may be shared without waiver of attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine. The insurers also cited Indian Law Resource Center v. Dept. of Interior, 477 F. Supp. 144 (D. D.C. 1979), for the proposition that an auditor is a confidential agent of a privileged party, so disclosure of attorney fee information did not waive any privilege. The Supreme Court found neither case persuasive, concluding that third-party auditors are not confidential agents of insureds, but function rather as agents of insurers, and thus are not within the magic circle of confidentiality. Rather, disclosure of detailed billing statements to third-party auditors constitutes disclosure to a potential adversary because there is always the possibility of disputes between auditors and defense counsel and their clients that could result in litigation. As possible adversaries, auditors stand in potential conflict with the interests of insureds in competent representation by defense counsel who exercise their independent professional judgment. The court looked to Rule 1.6 of the Rules of Professional Conduct, which extends to all communications between insureds and defense counsel, making it broader in both scope and protection than the attorney-client privilege and the work product doctrine. Although disclosures of billing information to insurers are permissible because insurers are impliedly authorized to carry out representation, disclosure to third-party auditors is not impliedly authorized. The court also rejected the insurers' argument that insureds' consent by contract to disclosure of billing statements comports with Rule 1.6. An insured executing a liability policy with an insurer cannot know at that time what kind of claim will be brought against that insured, what the issues will be, what kind of services will be undertaken by defense counsel, or the legal consequences that might result from the disclosure of billing information to a third-party auditor. Under Rule 1.6, for an insured to make a fully informed consent to disclosure of detailed billing statements, the consent must be contemporaneous with the facts and circumstances of which the insured should be aware. Thus, disclosure by defense counsel of detailed descriptions of professional services to third-party auditors without first obtaining the informed consent of the insured violates confidentiality under the Rules of Professional Conduct. In re Rules of Professional Conduct & Insurer Imposed Billing Rules & Procedures, 2000 MT 110, 299 M 321, 2 P3d 806, 57 St. Rep. 433 (2000), distinguishing U.S. v. Schwimmer, 892 F2d 237 (2nd Cir. 1989).

Disqualification of Attorney's Firm Upon Disqualification of Attorney: Once an attorney is found to be disqualified, such as for previous representation of an adverse party, the attorney's firm is also disqualified. In re Guardianship of Mowrer, 1999 MT 73, 294 M 35, 979 P2d 156, 56 St. Rep. 300 (1999), following Trone v. Smith, 621 F2d 994 (9th Cir. 1980).

No Duty of Attorney to Nonclient in Child Custody Case: An attorney must be able to vigorously advocate a client's interests in litigation without being compromised by obligations to nonclients. If an attorney were considered to owe the same duty of care to both a parent and child in an adversarial custody case, neither parent nor child would be served effectively. Because the interests of a parent and those of a child may not be identical, the attorney's duty runs solely to the client except if the conduct rises to the level of deceit or collusion or is intentionally reckless. Rhode v. Adams, 1998 MT 73, 288 M 278, 957 P2d 1124, 55 St. Rep. 303 (1998).

Attorney Fees Awardable — Contractual Obligation — Nominal Damages: The District Court erred by not awarding attorney fees to the prevailing plaintiff, even though plaintiff recovered only nominal damages, when the record on appeal does not support the court's decision. Maloney v. Heer, 257 M 500, 850 P2d 957, 50 St. Rep. 382 (1993).

Representation of Client Adverse to Former Client After Professional Relationship Terminated: In determining whether a claim for attorney malpractice existed based on an attorney's representation of an adverse client against a former client, the Supreme Court cited Butler Bros. Dev. Co. v. Butler, 111 M 329, 108 P2d 1041 (1941), in holding that while the general rule prohibits an attorney from representing both adverse parties, it does not bar an attorney, when the relationship to the former party has been terminated, from representing a client adverse to the former client if the matter in controversy is different or even though the controversy arises out of facts with which the attorney might have been familiar. Before the former client can complain, he must show that the disclosures made in the former employment were used prejudicially against him. Oar Lock Land & Cattle Co. v. Crowley, 253 M 336, 833 P2d 146, 49 St. Rep. 456 (1992), followed in In re Guardianship of Mowrer, 1999 MT 73, 294 M 35, 979 P2d 156, 56 St. Rep. 300 (1999).

Failure to Establish Attorney-Client Relationship: The plaintiff brought an action for attorney malpractice on his own behalf. The Supreme Court found that the plaintiff was a shareholder of the corporation that the defendant had allegedly misrepresented. The court ruled that no attorney-client relationship existed between shareholders of a corporation and an attorney representing the corporation. Stott v. Fox, 246 M 301, 805 P2d 1305, 47 St. Rep. 2040 (1990).

No Recovery for Attorney Malpractice Without Proving Damages: The Supreme Court found that the plaintiff was not entitled to damages from the defendant for malpractice because the plaintiff had no valid cause of action upon which he could have recovered in the suit the plaintiff had hired the defendant to handle. Kinniburgh v. Garrity, 244 M 350, 798 P2d 102, 47 St. Rep. 1655 (1990), followed in Kane v. Miller, 258 M 182, 852 P2d 130, 50 St. Rep. 488 (1993).

No Recovery for Failure to Timely File Appeal Without Proof of Damage to Client: The Supreme Court determined that the plaintiff had no valid cause of action upon which he could recover in the suit the plaintiff had hired the defendant to handle. Therefore, the court ruled that the defendant's failure to timely file an appeal did not damage the plaintiff. Kinniburgh v. Garrity, 244 M 350, 798 P2d 102, 47 St. Rep. 1655 (1990).

Attorney as Expert Witness — Not to Advise Jury as to Law of Case: Insurance company argued that the District Court's instructions implying that company's position was frivolous as a matter of law were reinforced by detailed attorney opinion testimony on the law applicable to insurance coverage, in violation of 25-7-102 and Rule 704, M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10). The Supreme Court, citing Energy Oils, Inc. v. Mont. Power Co., 626 F2d 731 (9th Cir. 1980), adopted the finding that admission of opinion testimony as to the legal effect of a contract is erroneous, but in view of the District Court holding that there was insurance coverage as a matter of law, the Supreme Court concluded that counsel's testimony regarding the law of the case did not constitute reversible error under the unique facts of this case. The court found no abuse of discretion in allowing attorneys who appear as expert witnesses to state their opinion on an insurer's duty to evaluate the facts, on what constitutes a reasonable evaluation of the facts, or on how an insurer should have approached the negotiations with the plaintiff; however, as a general rule an attorney cannot advise the jury as to the law of the case. Safeco Ins. Co. v. Ellinghouse, 223 M 239, 725 P2d 217, 43 St. Rep. 1689 (1986).

Neglect of Attorney Attributable to Client: When defendant's attorney received notices and talked on the phone on behalf of his clients but failed to do anything in response to numerous requests by opposing counsel and continued to postpone preparation and filing of a pleading, the attorney's procrastination was a type of neglect which was properly attributable to a client and did not constitute abandonment, which would excuse neglect. The Supreme Court found no abuse of discretion in District Court's conclusion that the attorney's conduct was not excusable neglect. Paxson v. Rice, 217 M 521, 706 P2d 123, 42 St. Rep. 1355 (1985).

No Conflict of Interest: There was no conflict of interest for an attorney appointed to represent the child in a proceeding for modification of custody when the attorney occupied an office that had formerly been shared by the attorney representing the father and the judge presiding over the case (before he became a judge). In re Marriage of Stout, 216 M 342, 701 P2d 729, 42 St. Rep. 856 (1985).

Attorney's Obligation to Deal in Good Faith: Because of the inequality that exists between attorney and client in bargaining over a fee, attorney has an obligation to deal fairly and in good faith when negotiating, charging, and collecting a fee. In a fee dispute over handling of dissolution, client pleaded sufficient facts to raise question whether there was a breach of the obligation owed to deal fairly and in good faith. District Court erred in granting summary judgment for attorney. Supreme Court reversed and remanded for trial, giving client leave to amend counterclaim to specifically describe a breach of the implied covenant. Morse v. Espeland, 215 M 148, 696 P2d 428, 42 St. Rep. 251 (1985).

GENERAL

Implied Attorney-Client Relationship — Motion for Disqualification of Attorney — Client's Burden of Showing Reasonable Belief That Attorney-Client Relationship Exists: Defendant telephoned attorney Penwell's office and spoke to the legal secretary regarding possible representation in this action, but never spoke personally to Penwell. Defendant was informed that Penwell was accepting no new cases and was referred to another attorney. Penwell ultimately appeared as counsel for plaintiff, and defendant moved to disqualify Penwell, asserting that confidential information was disclosed during the telephone conversation with the secretary and that the information was imputed to Penwell, creating an attorney-client relationship. At the hearing on the motion, defendant did not disclose what type of information was allegedly disclosed, relying on the conclusory statement that what was disclosed was confidential. The District Court denied the motion, holding that defendant had failed to meet the burden of conclusively establishing the existence of an attorney-client relationship. Defendant appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Although an alleged client should not be required to reveal actual confidences at a disqualification hearing, the alleged client must at least inform the court of the nature of the information disclosed so that the court can make a reasoned judgment. Under the circumstances, defendant could not have reasonably believed that an attorney-client relationship was formed with Penwell, based upon two telephone conversations with the secretary, when defendant never spoke or met with Penwell, and was advised that Penwell would not take the case. Pro-Hand Serv. Trust v. Monthei, 2002 MT 134, 310 M 165, 49 P3d 56 (2002).

Disqualification of Attorney's Firm Upon Disqualification of Attorney: Once an attorney is found to be disqualified, such as for previous representation of an adverse party, the attorney's firm is also disqualified. In re Guardianship of Mowrer, 1999 MT 73, 294 M 35, 979 P2d 156, 56 St. Rep. 300 (1999), following Trone v. Smith, 621 F2d 994 (9th Cir. 1980).

Authority of Attorney to Represent Client in Second Count of Two-Count Information When Severance of Counts Denied: Stanko was charged with two counts of reckless driving and represented himself on one of the two counts and was represented by counsel on the other. Early in the proceedings, Stanko moved for severance of the two counts for purposes of trial, but the request was denied. Later, the state requested a continuance of the charge for which Stanko was represented by counsel because of the illness of a witness, and Stanko's counsel consented. Stanko argued on appeal that his attorney had no authority to consent to continuance of the charge on which Stanko was representing himself. The Supreme Court held that Stanko's argument was "without merit" and explained that because severance had already been requested and denied, if trial on one of the counts was continued, the trial on the other count would also be continued. More important, the Supreme Court noted, Stanko failed to allege that he was prejudiced in any way by the continuance of the trial on the count for which he represented himself and it was disingenuous for Stanko to argue that the trial on that count should have been held as originally scheduled when Stanko submitted several motions 2 days before the trial date and the state would have had to request a continuance to respond to those motions even if the witness had not become ill. St. v. Stanko, 1998 MT 323, 292 M 214, 974 P2d 1139, 55 St. Rep. 1313 (1998).

Death of Defendant in Criminal Case Abates Case Entirely — Prior Cases Clarified: Holland was convicted in District Court of criminal syndicalism by accountability and other offenses and appealed his conviction. Holland died after the case had been briefed to the Supreme Court but before it was decided, so the state moved to dismiss. Holland's counsel opposed the motion to dismiss, arguing that it was in the best interests of society and the judicial system to allow the appeal to be decided on its merits. The Supreme Court noted that its earlier opinions in the cases of St. v. Lawrence, 122 M 277, 201 P2d 756 (1949), St. v. Pichette, 125 M 327, 237 P2d 1076 (1951), St. v. Hale, 128 M 116, 270 P2d 993 (1954), St. v. Koble, 129 M 605, 285 P2d 837 (1955), St. v. Clark-Kotarski, 156 M 527, 486 P2d 876 (1971), and St. v. Cripps, 177 M 410, 582 P2d 312 (1978), all held that the death of a defendant abates an appeal. The Supreme Court pointed out that subsection (2) of this section requires that a civil case go forward notwithstanding the death of a party but that in criminal cases, no case or controversy remains when a defendant dies and that if a deceased defendant's sentence were affirmed on appeal, it would be impossible to execute the sentence. The Supreme Court also noted, citing State ex rel. Fletcher v. District Court, 260 M 410, 859 P2d 992 (1993), that it does not render advisory opinions and that the Montana Rules of Appellate Procedure provide for substitution of a personal representative in the case of the death of a party in a civil action, but there is no such provision for criminal cases. The Supreme Court held that upon the death of the defendant, the prosecution of a criminal case, including fines, abates in its entirety. The Supreme Court's prior opinions were clarified to the extent that opinions in those cases were not consistent with its present opinion. St. v. Holland, 1998 MT 67, 288 M 164, 955 P2d 1360, 55 St. Rep. 282 (1998).

Client Bound by Attorney's Waiver of Right to Speedy Trial — Purpose of Statute: After defendant's attorney orally waived defendant's rights to a speedy trial in Justice's Court, defendant argued in his trial de novo appeal to District Court that he, the defendant, was not bound by his attorney's waiver. Defendant asserted that 37-61-401 makes the waiver binding only if it was entered with the defendant's knowledge or upon the record in open court. Citing Bush v. Baker, 46 M 535, 129 P 550 (1913), the Supreme Court ruled that this section has been applied only as to agreements between attorneys and that the purpose of that section is to relieve the presiding judge of the burden of determining disputes between attorneys concerning their unexecuted agreements. The Supreme Court stated that it would not apply this section literally as to agreements between an attorney and the court; to do so would lead to absurd consequences and greatly retard the business of the courts. The Supreme Court held that the defendant was thus bound by his counsel's waiver. St. v. Nelson, 251 M 139, 822 P2d 1086, 48 St. Rep. 1129 (1991).

Statements of Counsel as Binding on Client — New Trial Warranted: In closing arguments during a negligence trial that resulted in a jury finding of no negligence on behalf of defendant, defense counsel made unequivocal statements which, when taken in full context with the rest of his closing argument, constituted judicial admissions on the issue of negligence of his client that had the effect of a confessional pleading. Noting that the admissions of counsel are binding on the client, the Supreme Court granted a new trial, notwithstanding counsel's assertion that the statements were merely suggestions on the theory of the case. Kohne v. Yost, 250 M 109, 818 P2d 360, 48 St. Rep. 886 (1991).

Purpose of Statute: The purpose of subsection (1)(a) of this section is to enable an attorney to act on behalf of his client and make the attorney's action part of the record, not to bind clients irrevocably to any action the attorney enters upon the record. Schillinger v. Brewer, 215 M 333, 697 P2d 919, 42 St. Rep. 408 (1985).

Privilege Unavailable to Parties to Lawsuit Claiming Under a Deceased Client: The plaintiffs brought an action against their stepmother to collect the proceeds of their deceased father's life insurance policy, which had been paid to the defendant in accordance with the terms of the policy but contrary to the provisions of a divorce decree. The District Court did not err in relying upon attorney Sternhagen's deposition and file in the prior divorce proceedings between the deceased and his first wife in order to determine the true intentions of the deceased. Where both parties to a lawsuit claim under a deceased client, neither can assert the attorney-client privilege against the other. Herrig v. Herrig, 199 M 174, 648 P2d 758, 39 St. Rep. 1274 (1982).

Exclusive Representation by Attorney: A party having an attorney of record in an action must be heard in court through such attorney, and the court may not recognize anyone in the conduct or disposition of the case except the attorney of record therein, and even death of the party does not revoke the authority of his attorney of record. Endresse v. Van Vleet, 118 M 533, 169 P2d 719 (1946).

Authority of Attorney to Accept Settlement in Other Than Money: The agent has no implied authority to accept payment in anything but money; hence an attorney who is but the agent of his client, though authorized under this section to accept money in discharge of the client's claim, cannot by his retention of a draft payable to the client and to which a release was attached to be signed by him personally bind him to an agreement of settlement. Barbarich v. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. Ry., 92 M 1, 9 P2d 797 (1932).

Notice to Attorney as Notice to Client: Notice to the attorney of defendant in a divorce action of the setting of the cause for trial was notice to her, and therefore a new trial asked for on the ground that she herself did not have notice was properly refused. Davenport v. Davenport, 69 M 405, 222 P 422 (1924).

Authority of Attorney to Settle Case Not Implied — Void Judgment: An attorney, as such, has no authority to compromise a controversy of his client, no matter what may be the difficulties involved or however advantageous the result may be to the client. A general retainer in a case does not imply such authority, and if a compromise of the controversy be made, it must be made under special authority delegated for that purpose. Otherwise and in the absence of a ratification by the client, the compromise agreement as well as any judgment entered in pursuance of it is void at the option of the client. Harris v. Root, 28 M 159, 72 P 429 (1903).

STIPULATIONS AND AGREED STATEMENTS

Oral Estate Settlement Agreement Not Binding: An estate settlement agreement reached by the parties' attorneys over the telephone was not binding on the parties because the agreement was not in writing and was not filed with the Clerk of Court or entered upon the minutes of the court. In re Estate of Goick, 275 M 13, 909 P2d 1165, 53 St. Rep. 12 (1996).

Attorney's Stipulation as Waiver of Client's Right to Discovery or Jury Trial: Defendants argued that they should not be bound by their attorney's stipulation that a show cause hearing be a trial on the merits. The Supreme Court held that a client is bound by stipulations of his attorney if the agreement is entered upon the minutes of the court, regardless of whether or not the client had an opportunity to discuss the matter with his attorney beforehand. The stipulation voluntarily waived any right to discovery or to a jury trial or any other rights defendants claim to have lost. Daniels v. Dean, 253 M 465, 833 P2d 1078, 49 St. Rep. 535 (1992).

Ratification Through Acquiescence in Settlement Agreement: Appellant's knowledge of the terms of a settlement agreement and his acquiescence in the agreement for a period of nearly 2 years constitute a ratification of the settlement and dismissal, under the rulings of McGinley v. Md. Cas. of Baltimore, 85 M 1, 277 P 414 (1929), and Harris v. Root, 28 M 159, 72 P 429 (1903). Webb v. First Nat'l Bank of Hinsdale, 219 M 160, 711 P2d 1352, 42 St. Rep. 1919 (1985).

Judgment — Setoff Based on Stipulation: Plaintiff received a judgment against defendant. Defendant appealed, and the appeal was dismissed with prejudice when defendant advised the court that defendant did not wish to proceed with it. Defendant then filed a motion for a set off of an amount that plaintiff and defendant were both liable to pay to a third party. Defendant's attorney and plaintiff's attorney had entered into a stipulation that plaintiff was primarily liable and defendant secondarily liable for that amount and that if defendant paid it, the payment would be set off against any judgment granted plaintiff against defendant. The lower court properly set off that amount as partial satisfaction of the judgment. Although the motion was not made within the time required by the rules, it was properly considered because the Clerk of Court did not give defendant notice of entry of the judgment against defendant; therefore, the time for filing the motion had not commenced to run, since the motion was to be made within a certain time from the notice of entry of judgment. AAR Constr., Inc. v. Fergus Elec. Co-op., Inc., 215 M 102, 695 P2d 819, 42 St. Rep. 214 (1985).

Attorney-Client Relationship: A client is bound by stipulations made by counsel entered in open court. Counts v. Chapman, 180 M 102, 589 P2d 151, 36 St. Rep. 89 (1979).

Authority of Attorney to Make Agreed Statement of Facts: Under this section an attorney has implied authority to bind his client by entering into an agreed statement of facts upon which the case is to be tried; but independent of such statute, the presumption is, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that the attorney was acting within the scope of his authority in entering into the stipulation. Neglect of attorney to make proper inquiry into the facts before entering into the statement is the neglect of his client. Rieckhoff v. Woodhull, 106 M 22, 75 P2d 56 (1937).

Oral Stipulation for Time of Answer as Basis for Setting Aside Default: Little reliance is placed by courts upon oral agreements between counsel as to an extension of time within which an answer to a complaint might be filed as ground for setting aside a default. Stipulations of that nature should be in writing and filed or made in open court and entered in the minutes. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Freeman, 80 M 266, 260 P 124 (1927).

Authority of Attorney to Set Case for Trial — Common Law: Under the rule that if an attorney acts within the scope of his employment, express or implied, the client is bound, it is within the implied power of an attorney regularly employed in a criminal case to consent to the setting or continuance of the cause for trial. The provision of this section that an attorney has authority to bind his client "by his agreement filed with the clerk, or entered upon the minutes of the court, and not otherwise" neither enlarges nor abridges the authority of the attorney as it existed under the common-law rule, but only prescribes a rule for its exercise. St. v. Turlok, 76 M 549, 248 P 169 (1926).

Stipulation to Set Case for Trial: An attorney has authority to enter a stipulation for the setting of a cause for trial, and his client is bound thereby. Davenport v. Davenport, 69 M 405, 222 P 422 (1924).

Oral Stipulations Not Prevented: This section was not designed to prevent the enforcement by the courts of executed oral agreements or stipulations admitted by the party or his attorney against whom they are alleged, although they were neither reduced to writing nor made in open court. Bush v. Baker, 46 M 535, 129 P 550 (1913); Beach v. Spokane Ranch & Water Co., 21 M 184, 53 P 493 (1898).

Rule of Court Inapplicable — Oral Stipulation Enforceable: A rule of the District Court that agreements between attorneys relating to causes pending will be disregarded by the court unless made in open court and entered in the minutes or reduced to writing, subscribed by the party or his attorney against whom they are urged, has no application to an executed oral agreement or stipulation admittedly entered into by an attorney. Such agreement binds the attorney, though he is inclined to repudiate it, where the client did not interfere or dissent. Bush v. Baker, 46 M 535, 129 P 550 (1913).

Evidence of Stipulation Required: An order of the District Court cannot be based upon a stipulation between the attorneys in the case where the stipulation is denied by one of the attorneys and it was neither made in writing nor made in open court and entered in the minutes. Beach v. Spokane Ranch & Water Co., 21 M 184, 53 P 493 (1898).

Minor Attaining Majority — Termination of Ward's Authority to Employ Counsel: Where a suit in behalf of a minor by his guardian had been properly instituted but the guardian's authority automatically terminated by the ward's attaining majority, the court, upon being advised, having inherent power to investigate an attorney's authority, should have stayed further proceedings until counsel for plaintiff was shown to have been reemployed by plaintiff and committed error in proceeding to adjudicate his rights, being without jurisdiction of the cause. Mitchell v. McDonald, 114 M 292, 136 P2d 536 (1943).

Motion to Show Authority: The court may, on motion of either party made in good faith and upon a showing supported by affidavit or otherwise, require the attorney of the adverse party to produce and prove the authority under which he appears and, if it be shown that the attorney has no such authority, dismiss the action. In re Astibia's Estate, 100 M 224, 46 P2d 712 (1935); *Missoula Belt Line Ry. v. Affidavit Not Required: A motion for an order requiring an attorney to show by what authority he appears in a cause, authorized by this section, need not be supported by oath or affidavit; if made in good faith and supported by a showing of reasonable cause otherwise than by affidavit, the motion will be sufficient. Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Dismissal of Appeal Taken Without Authority: Where it is shown that an attorney has no authority to represent the party for whom he assumes to act in taking an appeal, he will not be permitted to act further and the appeal will be dismissed. Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Presumption and Burden of Proof: The presumption that a regularly admitted attorney appearing for a party in a cause is authorized to so appear is not conclusive. The opposite party having reasonable cause to doubt the attorney's authority may apply to the court requiring him to show his authority. The burden of proving lack thereof by positive evidence rests upon the attacking party, whereupon, such burden being sustained, the burden shifts to the attorney to show his authority. Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Trustee as Attorney — Specific Authority for Appeal Required: Showing made by an attorney on an order requiring him to show by what authority he, as one of five statutory trustees of a dissolved corporation, was prosecuting an appeal to the Supreme Court from an order appointing a receiver for the corporation without the consent of his four cotrustees, to the effect that he had for many years represented the trust in legal matters with their consent and that he had so represented them in the action resulting in the appeal, was insufficient in the absence of proof that they had authorized him to take the appeal. Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Letter as Evidence to Support Order Requiring Authority to Be Shown: Where an attorney who was one of five statutory trustees of a dissolved corporation assumed to prosecute an appeal to the Supreme Court from an order appointing a receiver for the corporation made with the consent of the other four trustees, a motion of the bank at the instance of which the appointment was made and which was the party respondent on appeal, asking that the attorney prosecuting the appeal be required to show by whose authority he was acting, supported by a letter from each of the cotrustees to the effect that they had never authorized the appeal, presented a sufficient showing to justify the issuance of the order prayed for. Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Motion to Be Made in Trial Court: Where a defendant does not challenge in the trial court the authority of an attorney of his adversary to appear for him, in accordance with the provisions of this section, his right to question it later is waived. In re Miller's Estate, 71 M 330, 229 P 851 (1924), distinguished in Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Criminal Plea — Conditions Violated: Where defendant had entered a plea of guilty to the charge of illegal transportation of intoxicating liquor and later authorized his attorney to withdraw that plea and enter one of guilty on condition that the District Judge would agree to the imposition of a certain fine with the jail sentence suspended and the attorney entered an unconditional plea of guilty, he exceeded his authority and the court, under this section, erred in refusing to set aside the judgment pronounced on the latter plea. St. v. Dow, 71 M 291, 229 P 402 (1924).

Early Motion for Authority Required to Be Made: The motion requiring the attorney for the adverse party to produce his authority must be made at the earliest practicable time, otherwise the right may be considered to have been waived. Missoula Belt Line Ry. Co. v. Smith, 58 M 432, 193 P 529 (1920).

Change of Attorney After Death of Client: Attorney was authorized to represent deceased client for whom there was filed a praecipe signed by counsel indicating withdrawal of previous counsel and requesting entry of name of new attorney for deceased even though signed and filed by counsel after death of client. State ex rel. Ross v. District Court, 150 M 233, 433 P2d 778 (1967).

Notice of Change of Attorney Required: In the absence of any relation of the attorney to the subject of the action, other than arising from his employment, the client may change his attorney at any stage of the action by complying with the statute, but such change must be entered upon the minutes of the court or be upon order of the court after notice. Thereafter written notice must be given to the adverse party of the change and substitution of a new attorney or of the appearance of the party in person. Endresse v. Van Vleet, 118 M 533, 169 P2d 719 (1946), followed in Saltzman v. Dept. of Transportation, 259 M 386, 856 P2d 965, 50 St. Rep. 845 (1993).

37-61-405. Death or removal of attorney.Case Notes

Required Notice of Withdrawal of Counsel: When counsel for a party withdraws, in order to properly protect the interests of the unrepresented party, the opposing party, by written notice, must require the unrepresented party to appoint another attorney or appear in person, as provided in this section. The written notice must include the date of the next action required in the case and notice that if the unrepresented party fails to appoint an attorney or appear in person within 20 days from the date of notice, the action or other proceeding will proceed and may result in a judgment or other order being entered against the unrepresented party. Once proper notice is given, any continued refusal by the unrepresented party to participate in the proceedings may justly result in default judgment or other final judgment against that party's interests. Quantum Elec., Inc. v. Schaeffer, 2003 MT 29, 314 M 193, 64 P3d 1026 (2003), following McPartlin v. Fransen, 178 M 178, 582 P2d 1255 (1978), and Stanley v. Holms, 281 M 329, 934 P2d 196 (1997), and overruling Sikorski & Sons, Inc. v. Sikorski, 162 M 442, 512 P2d 1147 (1973), and Audit Serv., Inc. v. Kraus Constr., Inc., 189 M 94, 615 P2d 183 (1980), to the extent that Sikorski and Audit Serv. waived a failure of opposing counsel to comply with this section.

Notice Required When Counsel Withdraws — Discovery Deadline Tolled: Only 3 days before the deadline for answers to discovery requests, Holms's counsel moved to withdraw, citing irreconcilable personal and professional differences with Holms regarding handling of the case and a breakdown in attorney-client communication. Four days after the discovery deadline, Stanleys moved for summary judgment based to a great extent on matters considered admitted by Holms's failure to respond to requests for admissions pursuant to Rule 36(a), M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20). Twelve days after the motion for summary judgment, the court heard and granted counsel's motion to withdraw. On the same day, Stanleys served Holms with confirmation of the court's oral instruction to Holms regarding Rule 10, M.U.D.C.R. (Title 25, ch. 19), and a notice of the hearing on the motion for summary judgment. Seven days before the hearing, Holms' new counsel agreed to undertake representation and the following day moved to amend the pleadings, to file amended responses to Stanleys' first discovery requests, and to continue Stanleys' motion for summary judgment. On the date set for hearing on the summary judgment, the court heard oral argument and granted Stanleys' motion about 3 months later. In its order, the court concluded that the 30-day deadline in Rule 36(a), M.R.Civ.P., was not tolled because Rule 10, M.U.D.C.R., did not apply. However, pursuant to Rule 10, M.U.D.C.R., and this section, the opposing party with notice of the withdrawal of counsel has a duty to provide adequate notice to the unrepresented party when that party's attorney ceases to act as such, not just when the attorney dies or is removed, suspended, or actually withdraws, before taking advantage of a default on the part of the other side. The purpose of this notice requirement is to prevent a represented party from taking unfair advantage of the situation of the opposing party who has actually or effectively lost representation and to ensure that the unrepresented party receives a fair trial. The case was remanded for consideration of the motion to amend the pleadings and reconsideration of the summary judgment motion in light of the amended pleadings, the discovery responses, and the state of the record at the time that the motion for summary judgment is heard. Stanley v. Holms, 281 M 329, 934 P2d 196, 54 St. Rep. 195 (1997), following McPartlin v. Fransen, 178 M 178, 582 P2d 1255 (1978). On remand, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in conducting the summary judgment hearing and ruling on Stanley's motion for summary judgment without allowing Holms the opportunity to conduct further discovery. Stanley v. Holms, 1999 MT 41, 293 M 343, 975 P2d 1242, 56 St. Rep. 178 (1999), following Howell v. Glacier Gen. Assurance Co., 240 M 383, 785 P2d 1018, 46 St. Rep. 2216 (1989).

Case Stayed When Notice Not Served: A party was notified of the trial but did not attend, and his counsel had been given leave to withdraw. The record did not show that the party was served with the notice required by this section; therefore, the case against him was stayed, and judgment could not be granted until proper notice was served. McWilliams v. Clem, 228 M 297, 743 P2d 577, 44 St. Rep. 1536 (1987).

Attorney Withdrawal With No Notice to Client — Default Set Aside: The lower court granted defendants' attorney's motion to withdraw and ordered him to notify defendants. Defendants claimed on appeal that they received no notice. The record showed no evidence of notice by the attorney and no evidence of the notice that this section required plaintiff to give. A default was issued against defendants at a time when they had no attorney and were not represented at the hearing. Defendants properly raised on appeal the lack of the lower court's power to proceed to default. The case was remanded with directions to set the default aside and grant a rehearing. Mont. Bank of Roundup, N.A. v. Benson, 220 M 410, 717 P2d 6, 43 St. Rep. 485 (1986), followed in In re Marriage of Whiting, 259 M 180, 854 P2d 343, 50 St. Rep. 747 (1993).

Notice to Appoint Counsel — Default Dissolution Set Aside: After the wife's second attorney withdrew, the court set the next hearing date for September 11. Pursuant to this section, the husband's counsel gave notice to her to appoint other counsel or appear in person on August 6, a date of no significance. When the wife did not appear on that date, a default judgment was granted. On appeal, the Supreme Court set aside the default based on the entirety of the circumstances. In part, it stated that the husband's notice to the wife should have stated that the wife would be expected to appear on the September date, with or without counsel. In re Marriage of Neneman, 217 M 155, 703 P2d 164, 42 St. Rep. 1095 (1985).

Required Notice When Counsel Withdraws: An adverse party with notice of the withdrawal of the opposing party's counsel has a duty to take reasonable steps to inform the opposing party of an appointed trial date and that he should either obtain new counsel or proceed to trial without counsel. If the represented party can show he made a good-faith effort to notify the unrepresented party and advise him that he should substitute counsel or appear in person and the notice also sets forth the date of the next hearing or action in the matter pending, then the represented party will have satisfied the notice requirements of this section. McPartlin v. Fransen, 178 M 178, 582 P2d 1255, 35 St. Rep. 1191 (1978), followed in Stanley v. Holms, 281 M 329, 934 P2d 196, 54 St. Rep. 195 (1997), and In re Marriage of Wallace, 284 M 360, 944 P2d 227, 54 St. Rep. 920 (1997).

Withdrawal of Attorney — Notice Between Parties Not Required: Adverse party was not required to advise the opposite party to appoint another lawyer or appear for himself where the opposite party's lawyer, with the consent of that party, withdrew from the case. Sikorski & Sons, Inc. v. Sikorski, 162 M 442, 512 P2d 1147 (1973).

Application for Extension of Filing Time Not Prohibited: There was no merit to an appellant's argument in opposition to a motion to strike a bill of exceptions that because an extension of time could not exceed 90 days without the consent of the adverse party pursuant to section 25-1-301 and because he could not get an extension until a new attorney for the adverse party was appointed pursuant to this section, he was prevented from making a timely filing of his bill. Even though appellee's attorney may have died, this section is not designated to enable a prospective appellant to disregard the time limitation on filing a bill by delaying notice to the adverse party to appoint a new attorney. Berg v. Fraser, 136 M 525, 349 P2d 317 (1960).

Demand for Replacement of Attorney Required: When one attorney dies, appointment of a successor must be demanded. Hand v. Hand, 131 M 571, 312 P2d 990 (1957).

Special Appearance Not Waiver of Failure to Appoint: Where a divorced wife's attorney died and defendant husband did not demand the appointment of a successor, the special appearance by an attorney to quash an order that the wife show cause why the divorce decree should not be modified did not waive the defect that there was no statutory substitution of an attorney. Hand v. Hand, 131 M 571, 312 P2d 990 (1957).

Dismissal of Appeal for Attorney's Death Denied: Where there is a failure to show that the procedure has been followed when an attorney for a party litigant dies, a motion to dismiss the appeal will be denied. In re Estate of Knowles, 130 M 637, 304 P2d 923 (1956).

Case Notes

Failure to Show That but for Negligent Legal Advice, Deportation Could Have Been Successfully Defended — Professional Negligence Claim Properly Dismissed: Fang, a Chinese citizen and lawful permanent United States resident employed by Montana State University-Bozeman, was involved in a domestic dispute with his wife that resulted in charges of assault. Fang consulted Bock, who worked at the university legal services offices, regarding the possibility of deportation. Bock in turn consulted Rice, an attorney who had made a presentation on immigration law at a seminar that Bock had attended, and asked if a misdemeanor domestic abuse charge was grounds for deportation. Rice informed Bock that the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) would not initiate deportation proceedings until the commission of two misdemeanors. Bock relayed that information to Fang, who relied at least in part on the information and pleaded guilty to family member assault. However, in 1996, Congress enacted a new immigration statute (see 8 U.S.C. 1227(a)(2)(E)(i)) that provides that domestic violence convictions are deportable offenses. Several weeks after pleading guilty, Fang received a notice to appear and face deportation. After hiring new counsel, Fang moved to withdraw the guilty plea. The District Court granted the motion on grounds that the failure of Bock to inform Fang of the possibility of removal to China constituted ineffective assistance of counsel, and the INS agreed to suspend further proceedings until the resolution of charges against Fang. Based on the advice of his new counsel, Fang reached a plea agreement with the Gallatin County Attorney to plead guilty to an amended charge of assault. Following conviction, the INS again moved to deport Fang, and based on the fact that assault also constitutes a crime of violence against a protected person pursuant to federal immigration law, Fang was ordered to be deported. Fang then filed a complaint against Bock, seeking damages for professional negligence and negligent supervision and treble damages under this section. The District Court applied Lorash v. Epstein, 236 M 21, 767 P2d 1335 (1989), and determined that Fang could not satisfy the last element of the test for a prima facie case of professional negligence, which requires a showing that but for such negligence, Fang would have successfully defended against the offense. The court then summarily dismissed the case. Fang appealed, contending that because of Bock's advice, he was exposed to the possibility of removal from this country and had to spend substantial amounts of money to avoid that exposure. Pursuant to Lorash, the Supreme Court had to determine whether Fang would have been exposed to the possibility of removal from this country with or without Bock's advice, in light of the offenses to which Fang pleaded guilty, the statutory basis for deportation, and the immigration judge's explanation for the deportation order. Under either charge, Fang was guilty of an offense of violence against a protected person—his wife. The title of the offense was irrelevant because for purposes of immigration law, misdemeanor assault is considered just as much a crime of violence against a spouse as family member assault. Further, Fang's argument that a different result was compelled by the fact that the assault conviction was subsequently expunged based on a deferred prosecution also failed because under federal case law, no effect is to be given to a state action that purports to remove a guilty plea or conviction by operation of a state rehabilitative statute. Thus, Fang's situation was a result of the conduct that he admitted and was the same following correct legal advice as it was following Bock's incorrect advice. Although Bock misinformed Fang, that advice did not lead to Fang's predicament, nor would the money that he spent to have the first conviction set aside have changed the result. Fang could not prove that but for negligent legal advice he could have avoided deportation, and Bock was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fang v. Bock, 2001 MT 116, 305 M 322, 28 P3d 456 (2001).

Statute of Limitations Applicable to Penalty for Deceit: Because this section, which provides a penalty for deceit or collusion by an attorney, is clearly a penalty statute, the 2-year statute of limitations in 27-2-211 applies rather than the 3-year general tort statute of limitations. Barrett v. Holland & Hart, 256 M 101, 845 P2d 714, 49 St. Rep. 1156 (1992), and 50 St. Rep. 63 (1993).

Dual Civil and Criminal Sanctions: This section has a dual purpose. One purpose is to compensate the innocent party who incurred additional time and expense as a result of the deceit of the culpable attorney. The other is to punish by criminal action any attorney who deceives the court or the other party. If criminal penalties are sought under this section, the accused lawyer must be indicted and prosecuted by the state. He is entitled to all of the rights guaranteed under the Constitution of the United States and the Montana Constitution. On the other hand, if only monetary sanctions are sought under this section, the determination can be made in a civil proceeding. LaFontaine v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 215 M 402, 698 P2d 410, 42 St. Rep. 496 (1985).

Misrepresentation and Improper Process by Attorney — Sanctions: Since under 33-1-602 defendant, a foreign insurer, could only be served by service upon the Commissioner of Insurance, personal jurisdiction over insurer was not obtained when it was served at its Billings claim office. Thus, when plaintiffs' attorney appealed quashing of the service, the appeal was dismissed. Plaintiffs' attorney represented to the District Court's personnel that he had won the appeal and was entitled to a default judgment, and the personnel entered one against insurer for $150,000 punitive damages and $385 costs. The default judgment was void for want of jurisdiction, and the District Court correctly vacated it. As insurer was not properly served, the District Court properly ruled plaintiffs could not take depositions. The attorney was properly adjudged liable to insurer for $4,031.50 under 37-61-406, stating that an attorney guilty of deceit or collusion with intent to deceive the court or a party forfeits to the party injured by his deceit or collusion treble damages. LaFontaine v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 215 M 402, 698 P2d 410, 42 St. Rep. 496 (1985).

Fraud by Party's Own Attorney — Not Within Section: Plaintiff alleged that his attorney had committed fraud in splitting a settlement and asked for treble damages. Defendant contended that treble damages did not apply to the facts. The court held that this section applies to deceit practiced upon the court or the adverse party during the litigation process. The act of deceit relating to this case constituted the incident upon which the cause of action was filed. For this reason, this section was not statutory grounds for assessing treble damages. Eaton v. Morse, 212 M 233, 687 P2d 1004, 41 St. Rep. 1708 (1984).

Abuse of Deposition Process — Basis for Tort of Abuse of Process: The plaintiff and his wife were divorced in 1976. The plaintiff sought to have the property agreement set aside as unconscionable and failed. In 1979, he filed a fraud action against his ex-wife and her attorney in conjunction with the dissolution. The ex-wife petitioned the court to hold plaintiff in contempt for failure to comply with the dissolution decree. Plaintiff, residing in Idaho, was served, failed to appear, and was held in contempt. The judge issued a bench warrant for his arrest. Defendants, counsel for the ex-wife in the fraud case, set a time to take plaintiff's deposition in Bozeman. Subsequent to noticing the deposition, defendants notified the District Court Judge that plaintiff would be in Bozeman that day. After taking plaintiff's deposition, defendants notified the judge, who had plaintiff arrested. Plaintiff filed suit against defendants for the tort of malicious abuse of process, and defendants moved for summary judgment. The federal court held that abuse of the power granted under Rule 30, M.R.Civ.P., relating to depositions can serve as the basis for the tort of abuse of process. Factual issues existed, so that the summary judgment motion was denied. Hopper v. Drysdale, 524 F. Supp. 1039, 38 St. Rep. 1970 (D.C. Mont. 1981).

Trustee Law Firm as Proper Party to Suit: Plaintiff law firm, acting as trustee for medical providers, sought to recover payment for medical care provided to the Harrisons' children. Following a 1-day nonjury trial, the District Court ordered the Harrisons to pay the medical bills and the costs of the action. On appeal, the Harrisons contended that the law firm was not a proper party because it had acquired an interest in claims for the purpose of bringing suit under certain contingencies, in violation of this section. The Supreme Court found that the law firm was a proper party and held that the Harrisons' contention was without merit. There was no violation of the trust agreement alleged, nor were the Harrisons' substantive rights prejudiced. Further, the trust agreement removed much of the risk of conflict of interest because it required the trust beneficiaries' consent to suit or compromise of claims, in conformity with State Bar Ethics Opinion 910529. Balyeat Law, P.C. v. Harrison, 1999 MT 144, 295 M 13, 983 P2d 902, 56 St. Rep. 566 (1999).

Attorney's Purchase of Interest in Client's Land With No Intent to Bring Action Not Champerty: Attorney Stone purchased an interest in land owned by his client, Green, knowing that Green and a cotenant, Gremaux, had been unable to agree to terms for the sale or lease of Green's interest. Gremaux contended that Stone's action constituted champerty. Distinguishing Lussy v. Bennett, 214 M 301, 692 P2d 1232 (1984), the Supreme Court held that Stone's action did not involve champerty because Stone purchased the interest without any intent of bringing an action against Gremaux for Stone's personal economic benefit. In re Green v. Gremaux, 285 M 31, 945 P2d 903, 54 St. Rep. 1029 (1997).

Party Proceeding Pro Se — Frivolous and Champertous Claim: By his own statement, Lussy acquired title to one of two parcels in order to bring an action to remove a "trespassing house" and intended to divide the proceeds among the remaining members of his family. Under 37-61-408, an attorney is prohibited from acquiring a claim or demand for purpose of bringing action. Under 37-61-411, the same rule applies when a party prosecutes in person instead of acting through an attorney. Lussy's complaints smack of champerty, and public policy requires dismissal of his action. Lussy v. Bennett, 214 M 301, 692 P2d 1232, 41 St. Rep. 2487 (1984).

Public Policy: This section and section 93-2801, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), providing that every action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, by clear implication intend to discourage litigation and keep it within certain bounds in the interest of a sound public policy. Streetbeck v. Benson, 107 M 110, 80 P2d 861 (1938), explained in N. Mont. Ass'n of Credit Men v. Hauge, 111 M 56, 105 P2d 1102 (1940), and Rae v. Cameron, 112 M 159, 114 P2d (1941).

37-61-413. Former public prosecutors not to defend.

Case Notes

No Violation When Separate Charges Involved: Appointment as defense counsel of attorney who had successfully prosecuted defendant on another charge over 7 years earlier was not a violation of defendant's constitutional rights; prosecution of an individual by a former County Attorney did not forever prohibit that attorney from defending that individual on a separate and distinct criminal charge. Petition of Pepperling, 162 M 524, 508 P2d 569 (1973), followed in St. v. Martz, 233 M 136, 760 P2d 65, 45 St. Rep. 1370 (1988).

Waiver: Defendant who had choice of defense counsel and chose attorney who had prosecuted him in earlier case waived any right to demand new trial based on such representation. St. v. Gallagher, 162 M 155, 509 P2d 852 (1973).

Previous Prosecution by Attorney — New Trial Refused: Under a repealed section prohibiting attorneys from defending prosecutions carried on formerly by themselves, convicted petitioner was not entitled to new trial merely on ground his voluntarily hired counsel had prosecuted him 4 years before, where petitioner at all times knew that his counsel was such former prosecutor and where the trial at hand had no relation to any official duty performed by his counsel as prosecutor. In re Petition of Allen, 161 M 547, 507 P2d 1049 (1973).

By Writ of Error Coram Nobis: Where prisoner was represented in a second case by court-appointed counsel who had formerly prosecuted him while serving as County Attorney in a case resulting in the prior conviction with which he was charged in the second case, the error, if any, should have been raised in the District Court by a Writ of Error Coram Nobis and not by habeas corpus proceeding in the Supreme Court. *Butler v. No Right to Representation by Nonlawyer: A defendant has an inalienable right to represent himself, but has no right to demand representation by a nonlawyer. Election Not to Be Represented by Counsel: Owner of a motor vehicle wrecking facility who had previously been fined by the court for failure to license and shield his facility knowingly waived his right to counsel at a later proceeding and was competent to represent himself. The later penalty would not be set aside because he was not represented by counsel at the show cause hearing. *St. v. Right to Manage Litigation and Employ Counsel: It is not a mere technicality to insist that a person's rights may not be litigated without his authority, for that is an inherent right guaranteed by the Due Process Clauses of both the federal Constitution (5th amendment; 14th amendment) and state Constitution (Art. III, sec. 27, 1889 Mont. Const., now Art. II, sec. 17, Mont. Const.) and by this section, applying to the right of a person sui juris (in the instant case the ward on attaining majority) to manage his own affairs, including the right to control his own litigation and select his own attorney. *Mitchell v. Application to State Prison: This section is sufficiently broad to include the Warden of the state prison and inmates thereof. State ex rel. Middleton v. District Court, 85 M 215, 278 P 122 (1929).

Nature of Attorney's Business Determinative: The right granted by this section to an attorney to consult with a prisoner depends upon legitimate business to be transacted, not upon a mere desire to visit the prisoner, and the reasonableness of the arrangement made for the interview in each case depends largely upon the nature and extent of the business to be transacted. State ex rel. Middleton v. District Court, 85 M 215, 278 P 122 (1929).

Particular Arrangements for Privacy Held Sufficient: Pursuant to the provisions of this section, the District Court in a proceeding in mandamus ordered the Warden of the state prison to permit an attorney to consult with a prisoner in absolute privacy. The Warden ordered that consultation be permitted through a small window fitted in the wall with a 1/2-inch wire mesh on each side of the wall, no one being within earshot but a guard standing outside a glass door where he could see the attorney but could not hear what was being said. The arrangement made by the Warden under the circumstances of the case sufficiently complied with the order of the court, and a judgment of contempt was not supported by the evidence. State ex rel. Middleton v. District Court, 85 M 215, 278 P 122 (1929).

Writ of Mandate Appropriate to Secure Right of Lawyer: An attorney for a prisoner confined in the state penitentiary against whom an untried criminal charge was pending in the District Court had the right under this section to a Writ of Mandate for a reasonable opportunity to consult with his client in absolute privacy, and the contention that an action of debt to recover the penalty of $100 from an officer violating the provision of the section affords the exclusive remedy open to the prisoner has no merit. State ex rel. Casleton v. Bd. of Prison Comm'rs, 84 M 14, 273 P 1044 (1929).

Kilmer received medical attention from a North Dakota hospital, which subsequently perfected a lien for the value of its services in the amount of $309,000. Hall had no insurance, but the co-owner of the vehicle had a $500,000 policy with Mountain West Farm Bureau (Mountain West). The policy had a step-down provision limiting Mountain West's liability to $25,000 for passengers other than the insured or a relative of the insured, so Mountain West initially found that Kilmer was entitled to only $25,000. However, after negotiating with Kilmer's attorney, Mountain West agreed to proffer the policy limit of $500,000, plus $30,000 in no-fault coverage. Mountain West then filed a complaint for interpleader, the hospital cross-claimed against Kilmer for satisfaction of its lien, and Kilmer cross-claimed against the hospital for a reduction in the hospital's recovery for a pro rata portion of Kilmer's attorney fees incurred in negotiating the settlement with Mountain West. The District Court applied Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Nichols, 157 M 106, 483 P2d 279 (1971), and held that the hospital was not liable for a pro rata portion of Kilmer's attorney fees. Kilmer appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. Under the 1999 version of 71-3-1114 applicable to this case, the hospital had a valid lien for its medical services; however, the statute was silent on the issue of attorney fee apportionment (see, however, 2001 amendments addressing a hospital's pro rata liability for an injured person's attorney fees). Generally, Montana follows the American rule that a party in a civil action is not entitled to attorney fees absent a specific contractual or statutory grant of those fees. There are exceptions to the American rule, one of which is the common fund doctrine authorizing the spread of fees among the individuals who benefit from the litigation that created the common fund. The three elements necessary to establish a common fund, as set out in Means v. Mont. Power Co., 191 M 395, 625 P2d 32 (1981), and Murer v. St. Comp. Mut. Ins. Fund, 283 M 210, 942 P2d 69 (1997), are: (1) one party, known as the active beneficiary, must create, reserve, or increase a common fund; (2) the active beneficiary must incur legal fees in establishing the common fund; and (3) the common fund must benefit ascertainable, nonparticipating beneficiaries. To the extent that there are inequities in the contributions of participating counsel, the court may then intervene to allocate fees accordingly. Because the common fund doctrine was not raised in Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Nichols, the Supreme Court held that that case did not preclude application of the doctrine in the present case. Thus, the District Court erred as a matter of law in relying on Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Nichols to grant the hospital's partial summary judgment. Although the Supreme Court declined to rule on the applicability of the common fund doctrine here because the parties did not present arguments in District Court as to whether Kilmer could satisfy the elements of the doctrine, the case was remanded to allow Kilmer to present arguments on the applicability of the common fund doctrine. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hall, 2001 MT 314, 308 M 29, 38 P3d 825 (2001).

Payment for Attorney Who Voluntarily Withdraws From Contingent Fee Case Before Occurrence of Contingency Based on Good Cause for Withdrawal — Modern Majority Rule: Sullivan retained plaintiff Bell & Marra, pllc, to represent him in an employment termination case, entering a contingent fee agreement for payment. Plaintiff represented Sullivan through two trials and settlement negotiations, after which it sent Sullivan a letter stating that it could not continue under the written 40% contingent arrangement and demanding that, in order to continue representation, Sullivan deposit $2,000 to cover costs of appeal transcripts and agree to pay plaintiff a percentage of all settlement proceeds, judgment damages, and other consideration recovered from the employer in the amount of 50% for appeal and subsequent trial for discrimination or wrongful discharge and an additional 5% for each appeal thereafter. Sullivan declined the ultimatum and hired new counsel. Upon settlement of Sullivan's employment claim, plaintiff filed: (1) a lien foreclosure action for payment of fees involving the employment claim, including advanced costs plus 40% of the recovery or the quantum meruit value of the legal services performed computed on an hourly basis; (2) a contract action related to fees incurred during representation of Sullivan's dissolution proceedings; and (3) a claim against Sullivan's employer requesting that settlement proceeds be held or paid to plaintiff according to the lien against Sullivan. Sullivan asserted affirmative defenses, including fraud, unavailability of quantum meruit damages because of plaintiff's repudiation of the fee agreement, and breach of fiduciary duty, as well as counterclaims for breach of contract, conversion, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and breach of fiduciary duty. The District Court concluded that whether plaintiff withdrew or was fired was irrelevant and that the parties simply terminated the attorney-client relationship. The court then denied Sullivan's motions and counterclaims and granted summary judgment to plaintiff on all issues, awarding plaintiff attorney fees for the employment-related litigation at the contract rate of 40% minus the amount in the fee arrangement with Sullivan's subsequent attorney; fees and costs incurred during Sullivan's dissolution action; outstanding costs for the employment litigation; prejudgment interest on the damage awards; and plaintiff's attorney fees and costs incurred in pursuing the foreclosure action. Sullivan appealed the summary judgment. In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court adopted the modern majority rule, which holds that an attorney who voluntarily withdraws from a contingency fee case without good cause forfeits recovery of compensation for services performed, but if withdrawal was for good cause or was justified, the attorney may recover based on quantum meruit. Whether good cause exists depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. Good cause exists when a client has engaged in culpable conduct, when continued representation would violate an attorney's ethical obligations, or when an attorney lacks the resources to pursue litigation. However, a client's refusal to accept a settlement offer does not constitute good cause, nor is it justifiable for an attorney to withdraw if the attorney does not believe that the negotiated contract is sufficiently compensatory. In the present case, plaintiff withdrew because continued representation had become a financial burden, which is a good cause for withdrawal under the Montana Rules of Professional Conduct, but not necessarily one entitling an attorney to compensation. Faced with being forced to enter into a new and unacceptable fee agreement when the time for pursuing an appeal was running, Sullivan's decision to reject plaintiff's ultimatum resulted in plaintiff's voluntary withdrawal. In light of the modern majority rule, plaintiff did not have good cause to withdraw that would justify compensation, so the District Court's summary judgment was reversed. Bell & Marra, pllc v. Sullivan, 2000 MT 206, 300 M 530, 6 P3d 965, 57 St. Rep. 810 (2000), following Ausler v. Ramsey, 868 P2d 877 (Wash. Ct. App. 1994). See also Augustson v. Linea Aerea Nacional-Chile S.A., 76 F3d 658 (5th Cir. 1996).

Attorney Fee Lien Applicable to Medical Benefits Received in Workers' Compensation Settlement: Lockhart moved for an order directing the insurer to pay attorney fees out of the medical benefits owing to Lockhart under his successful workers' compensation claim. The Workers' Compensation Court denied the attorney fees on grounds that medical benefits are not benefits, but rather an imposition of liability imposed on the insurer, and that because an award of medical benefits does not entitle a claimant to receipt of money, there is no property against which an attorney fee lien can attach. The court held that when a claim has been denied and later found compensable by the court without a separate award of attorney fees, a contingent attorney fee may be computed based on medical benefits, but the amount may not be deducted from the compensation payable to the medical providers. The Supreme Court disagreed. Medical benefits are not the property of the medical providers simply because the medical providers are the actual recipients of the money, nor are medical benefits simply an obligation of the insurer. Instead, medical benefits are the property of the individual claimant, and, as such, the claimant should be allowed to pay attorney fees out of medical benefits. In the context of workers' compensation cases, attorney fee liens attach as a matter of law to all compensation, including medical benefits, upon the filing of an attorney retainer agreement with the Department of Labor and Industry. To require a claimant to pay a disproportionate amount of attorney fees from the claimant's personal resources would be unfair and contrary to the fundamental purpose of workers' compensation laws. Lockhart v. N.H. Ins. Co., 1999 MT 205, 295 M 467, 984 P2d 744, 56 St. Rep. 800 (1999), following Carlson v. Cain, 216 M 129, 700 P2d 607, 42 St. Rep. 695 (1985).

Notice and Hearing Required: Plaintiff changed attorneys during a proceeding. The order substituting counsel provided for attorney fees to the original counsel. It was error for the District Court to award fees without notice to the plaintiff and without providing an opportunity for a hearing. Bink v. First Bank West, Great Falls, Inc., 246 M 414, 804 P2d 384, 48 St. Rep. 17 (1991).

No Verdict or Judgment in Favor of Client: District Court did not err in denying attorney's claimed lien against his client's cattle that District Court allowed to be sold at Sheriff's sale to satisfy judgment in favor of the other party. When there was no verdict or judgment in favor of the attorney's client, the claimed lien was properly denied. Hill v. Turley, 218 M 511, 710 P2d 50, 42 St. Rep. 1783 (1985).

Lien Protection Extended to Workers' Compensation Attorneys Who File Retainer Agreements: This section provides that an attorney's lien attaches to a client's cause of action or counterclaim from "commencement of an action or the service of an answer". Applying this statutory scheme to the present case, a judgment lien would not attach against the claimant's workers' compensation award because the claimant's attorney negotiated a settlement with the fund prior to the commencement of an action. However, the Supreme Court, "by judicial fiat", extends this same protection by providing that an attorney who has filed his retainer agreement with the Workers' Compensation Division has a lien upon the award. The lien attaches upon filing of the contingency fee agreement with the Division. The issue of whether the attorney's name shall be listed as a payee on the state warrant is an administrative detail to be determined by the Workers' Compensation Division. Kelleher Law Office v. St. Comp. Ins. Fund, 213 M 412, 691 P2d 823, 41 St. Rep. 2203 (1984), followed in Lockhart v. N.H. Ins. Co., 1999 MT 205, 295 M 467, 984 P2d 744, 56 St. Rep. 800 (1999), holding that workers' compensation benefits may be subject to a lien for payment of attorney fees.

Incidental Benefit to Third Parties: Fact that settlement of personal injury claim by attorneys for their client incidentally benefited hospital by creating fund from which its bill for treatment of client could be paid did not create an implied contract by hospital to pay attorneys for their services. Neither was hospital obligated to share settlement proceeds on a subrogation theory. Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Nichols, 157 M 106, 483 P2d 279 (1971).

Waiver of Lien: Failure of attorney to deduct expenses incurred in obtaining award in case and his expressed intention that he would collect expenses from future settlements constituted waiver of his lien for expenses. Gross v. Holzworth, 151 M 179, 440 P2d 765 (1968).

No Implied Amendment by Workmen's Compensation Laws: The fact that section 92-204, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), provides that where an injured employee prosecutes an action against a tortfeasor through whose action he was injured he shall bear all expense incident thereto does not mean that the Legislature thereby intended to or did modify or amend this section, giving attorneys a first lien on the proceeds of a settlement of a cause of action in the hands of whomsoever such proceeds may come, which lien cannot be affected by any settlement between the parties before or after judgment. Hardware Mut. Cas. Co. v. Butler, 116 M 73, 148 P2d 563 (1944).

Eminent Domain Proceedings — Withdrawal of Attorney Before Judgment: This statute is broad enough to include all civil actions, and an attorney's charging lien may be enforced upon application to court in the suit in which the services were rendered. Where counsel withdrew from condemnation suit by the United States at landowner's request, after rendering considerable services, under agreement to be paid specified fee out of proceeds of settlement, they were entitled to lien on the proceeds for such fee on ground that they contributed to the judgment or settlement made, since the lien may arise for services in procuring a judgment or award. U.S. v. Hudson, 39 F. Supp. 797 (D.C. Mont. 1941).

Attorney Not Party to Action: The assertion by counsel for plaintiff of a lien upon the cause of action, under this section, does not make the attorney a real party in interest so that defendant could demand that the complaint be amended by adding the attorney as a party plaintiff. Phelps v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 108 M 78, 88 P2d 58 (1939).

Execution Against Cause of Action — Restraint of Execution Sale: After reversal of Phelps' judgment against it with remand of the cause for a new trial, the railroad company obtained judgment for its costs on appeal and caused execution to be issued and levied upon Phelps' cause of action. Plaintiff, Phelps' attorney, claiming a lien on such cause of action for services rendered, brought suit to enjoin execution sale thereof. District Court did not abuse its discretion in restraining sale and maintaining the status quo pending retrial. Baker v. Tullock, 106 M 375, 77 P2d 1035 (1938).

Remedial Statute — Purpose: This section is a remedial statute that should be construed in advancement of the remedy and so as to secure and protect, and not to defeat, the rights and objects intended by its enactment. Baker v. Tullock, 106 M 375, 77 P2d 1035 (1938).

Doctrine of Champerty and Maintenance Abolished: The effect of this section and of 25-10-301 is to abolish the common-law doctrine of champerty and maintenance in this state, except insofar as it is retained in modified form in 37-61-408 and 37-61-409, and neither of those sections mentions a contract contingent upon the success of the litigant. In re Maury, 97 M 316, 34 P2d 380 (1934); Haley v. Hollenback, 53 M 494, 165 P 459 (1917).

Probate Proceedings — Fee Dependent Upon Existence of Contract: Generally speaking, the right of an attorney to collect payment for his services depends upon the fact of his employment. Where there was no contract of employment of an attorney in behalf of an estate, who on the contrary was employed by one of several devisees to defend a contest of the will under which he claimed, the devisee, and not the estate, was liable for the attorney's fee. In re Baxter's Estate, 94 M 257, 22 P2d 182 (1933), explained in In re Mickich's Estate, 114 M 258, 136 P2d 223 (1943).

Promissory Note Exclusive of Attorney's Fees — No Discharge: While the client controls the course of litigation, including compromises and settlements, if a settlement is made by the client, it is subject to the attorney's claim for fees, and the parties making the settlement are bound to take notice of such claim. While the obligation to pay attorney's fees in case enforced collection of a promissory note becomes necessary is imposed upon the maker in favor of the holder of the note and not in favor of the attorney, payment of the principal sum exclusive of the attorney's fee during the pendency of an action to enforce payment does not discharge the note in full. Nat'l Park Bank of New York v. Am. Brewing Co., 79 M 542, 257 P 436 (1927).

Contract to Retain Attorney — Allegations in Complaint: Under this section and 25-10-301, an attorney may contract with his client freely as to his compensation before the fiduciary relation commences; but with respect to such a contract made after the relation began, he has the burden of showing that the contract was fair and reasonable and entered into freely by the client and that the latter fully knew and understood its provisions. In the absence of such allegations the complaint is insufficient. Coleman v. Sisson, 71 M 435, 230 P 582 (1924).

Contingent Fee Agreement Not Prohibited: In this state attorneys are free, except insofar as they are prohibited by statute, to enter into such contracts with their clients for compensation as they choose. A contract for a contingent compensation is not prohibited and is valid, though such a contract may require the services of the attorney in finding the necessary witnesses. Haley v. Hollenback, 53 M 494, 165 P 459 (1917).

Assertion of Lien Prior to Judgment: An attorney may, independently of his client, assert his lien prior to judgment or settlement, since the statute declares that the lien attaches in favor of counsel for plaintiff from the commencement of the action. Walsh v. Hoskins, 53 M 198, 162 P 960 (1917), followed in Bekkedahl v. McKittrick, 2002 MT 250, 312 M 156, 58 P3d 175 (2002).

Intention of Client Immaterial: Since an attorney's lien cannot be affected by any settlement between the parties before or after judgment, a finding in an action by an attorney on such a lien, that defendants had no intention to defeat the lien by making final payment under a contract of sale in a bank other than the one fixed therein, was immaterial, as was also an allegation in the complaint that the defendants had such intention. Walsh v. Hoskins, 53 M 198, 162 P 960 (1917).

Amount of Fee — Method of Determination: It is not essential to the existence of the lien that the amount of the attorney fee should be definitely fixed. In an action brought for the enforcement of the lien, the amount due must be alleged in the complaint, either by stating a fixed sum or by averring the reasonable value of the services rendered. Coombe v. Knox, 28 M 202, 72 P 641 (1903).

Security in Client's Possession Subject to Lien: The lien granted by this section operates as an equitable assignment of so much of the judgment as will satisfy the lien and, for the purpose of securing payment, subrogates the attorney to the right of his client to that extent. Any security, therefore, which the client has for the payment of his judgment may be availed of for the benefit of the attorney. Coombe v. Knox, 28 M 202, 72 P 641 (1903).

PRIORITY OF LIENS

Attorneys' Fees Payable — Remainder of Proceeds Subject to Subordinate Lien: Where settlement in personal injury case was paid in three drafts, lien of attorneys representing injured party attached to all three drafts. Since amount of drafts was sufficient to satisfy attorneys' fees in full, previously subordinate hospital lien became the senior outstanding lien against the balance of the settlement proceeds, notwithstanding that attorneys did not actually collect their fees. Attorneys and injured party could not require payment of a pro rata share of attorneys' fees from that portion of settlement proceeds otherwise payable to hospital under its lien rights. Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Nichols, 157 M 106, 483 P2d 279 (1971).

Unemployment Compensation Cases: This section being in conflict with 39-51-3104 and 39-51-3105, relating to unemployment compensation claims, the latter sections, being more specific, should control over this section, which is more general, especially where, in light of the services rendered, the attorney's fees could be considered "necessaries" under 39-51-3105. McAlear v. Unemployment Comp. Comm'n, 145 M 458, 405 P2d 219 (1965), followed, with regard to attorney services provided to a wife to obtain orders of protection from an abusive spouse defined as a necessary article, thereby obligating the spouse to pay attorney fees so incurred, in Missoula YWCA v. Bard, 1999 MT 177, 295 M 260, 983 P2d 933, 56 St. Rep. 692 (1999).

Attorney's Fees Subordinate to Costs: An attorney's lien for unpaid compensation is not superior to the adverse party's claim for costs accruing as a part of the litigation on the cause of action. Galbreath v. Armstrong, 121 M 387, 193 P2d 630 (1948).

Attorney's Fees Subordinate to Offset Judgment: While an attorney's lien is subordinate to the rights of the adverse party to offset judgments in the same actions or in actions based on the same actions or in actions based on the same transactions, it is nevertheless superior to any right to offset judgments obtained in wholly independent actions. Galbreath v. Armstrong, 121 M 387, 193 P2d 630 (1948).

EXTENT OF LIEN

Judgment on Second Trial — Deduction of Expenses for First Trial: Where, in second trial of conversion action, plaintiff obtained judgment against defendant, the attorney's lien on the judgment covered only the amount which would be realized on the judgment after costs accruing to defendant on appeal from first trial were deducted. Galbreath v. Armstrong, 121 M 387, 193 P2d 630 (1948).

Lien on Both Cause of Action and Proceeds: The lien awarded by this section to an attorney for services performed does not merely attach to his client's cause of action but as well to the proceeds of such cause of action, i.e., the judgment, successfully enforced, unaffected by any settlement between the parties. Baker v. Tullock, 106 M 375, 77 P2d 1035 (1938).

Purchased Real Estate as "Proceeds" of Judgment: Under the common law, an attorney's lien on a judgment secured for his client is ended when, by the taking over of property or otherwise, the judgment is satisfied. But under this section the lien extends to "the proceeds" of the judgment in the hands of whomsoever they may come. The mere fact that the judgment debtor's property was bought under execution by plaintiff and thus became the proceeds of the judgment obtained by him for his client and took the place thereof did not constitute a waiver of the lien. English v. Jenks, 54 M 295, 169 P 727 (1917).

FORECLOSURE OF LIEN

Foreclosure Complaint — Mortgage Tender Unnecessary Allegation: The complaint in a suit to foreclose an attorneys' lien on property upon which a prior mortgage was outstanding need not allege that tender of payment of the mortgage lien had been made to the mortgagee, since such tender is not a condition precedent to the bringing of the suit. Gilchrist v. Hore, 34 M 443, 87 P 443 (1906).

Action Against Client: An attorney seeking to enforce his lien may bring an independent action against his client or the adverse party, or both. Coombe v. Knox, 28 M 202, 72 P 641 (1903).

Analogy to Mechanics' Lien or Mortgage: An action for the foreclosure of an attorneys' lien is in every sense analogous to the foreclosure of a mechanics' lien (now referred to as a construction lien) or mortgage. Coombe v. Knox, 28 M 202, 72 P 641 (1903).

Proper Parties to Action: An action brought to foreclose an attorneys' lien is an equitable proceeding, and every person interested in the subject matter of the controversy is a proper party thereto. Coombe v. Knox, 28 M 202, 72 P 641 (1903).

NOTICE OF LIEN

Commencement of Action as Notice: Under this section there is no need to file a notice of lien, the commencement of an action or the service of an answer containing a counterclaim being sufficient notice of the lien of the attorney. Galbreath v. Armstrong, 121 M 387, 193 P2d 630 (1948).

Attorney Not Required to Give Notice: This section is itself notice to the world of the lien, and hence the attorney is not required to give notice. Walsh v. Hoskins, 53 M 198, 162 P 960 (1917).

Control of Litigation — Notice of Lien: Though, as between attorney and client, the latter controls the course of litigation, including its settlement, the parties making the settlement, as well as their assignees, are chargeable with notice of the former's statutory lien. Walsh v. Hoskins, 53 M 198, 162 P 960 (1917).

37-61-421. Attorney's or litigant's liability for excess costs.Case Notes

Sanctions Appropriate in Easement Case When Aerial Photographs Established Long-Time Presence of Road: Aerial photographs clearly showed that a road existed in exactly the same location since 1979, yet defendant proceeded with an easement case, contending that the road did not exist in 1985. The District Court did not abuse its discretion when it assessed fees and costs against defendant because the contention was not well grounded in fact and defendant's arguments unreasonably and vexatiously multiplied the proceedings. Ponderosa Pines Ranch, Inc. v. Hevner, 2002 MT 184, 311 M 82, 53 P3d 381 (2002).

Award of Attorney Fees Based on Party's Deception, Contradiction, and Fraud and Party's Attorney's Needless Protraction of Litigation: The appellant in a probate and guardianship case was found to have employed deception, contradiction, and fraud, resulting in the expenditure of considerable time, effort, and expense in the attempt to arrive at a reasonable understanding of the condition of the guardianship estate and the ownership of estate property. The appellant's attorney was found to have taken every opportunity to obstruct and avoid a resolution of the issues by filing questionable motions for dismissal and sanctions, taking positions that were not supported by law or facts, and failing to mediate in good faith, thereby protracting the litigation at considerable expense to the respondents. The District Court ordered appellant to pay 80% of the respondents' attorney fees and costs and ordered appellant's attorney to pay the remaining 20%. There was substantial evidence in the record to support the award, which the Supreme Court affirmed. The court declined to address the reasonableness of the award because appellant did not object to the bill of expenses when given the opportunity to challenge the amount, instead challenging the reasonableness of the award for the first time on appeal. In re Estate of McDermott, 2002 MT 164, 310 M 435, 51 P3d 486 (2002).

Attorney Fees Not Awarded Absent Evidence of Multiplication of Proceedings: Kloss sought attorney fees in relation to a claim regarding the arbitration clause in a securities brokerage contract. The District Court examined the entire file, including prior transcripts and court orders, and concluded that further evidence of the fee issue was unnecessary and that attorney fees were not owing. Kloss appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court correctly concluded that defendant did not unreasonably or vexatiously multiply the proceedings, which is a necessary element of an award of attorney fees under this section. Kloss v. Edward D. Jones & Co., 2002 MT 129, 310 M 123, 54 P3d 1 (2002).

Unreasonable and Vexatious Multiplication of Court Proceedings — Sanctions Proper: First Interstate Bank was Bayers' court-appointed conservator. McGimpsey claimed to be Bayers' private attorney and began expressing an interest in matters involving Bayers' estate, at which point the conservator became concerned about the extent of McGimpsey's involvement in Bayers' affairs and requested in writing copies of any legal documents that McGimpsey had that may have been executed by Bayers. McGimpsey ignored the request. The conservator moved in District Court to compel production of the requested information and included a request for attorney fees necessitated by the motion. McGimpsey responded with a letter threatening the conservator's counsel with sanctions and listing complaints and criticisms of the conservator's handling of Bayers' estate. McGimpsey then moved to strike scandalous, immaterial, and irrelevant content in the conservator's motion and brief, but the motion was denied. The court instead granted the conservator's motion to compel and for attorney fees. McGimpsey filed another motion to alter or amend the order granting attorney fees. That motion was also denied, and the court ordered a hearing on the amount of sanctions to be awarded unless the parties agreed to the amount of attorney fees being assessed. The conservator agreed to the court's suggestion, but McGimpsey did not, so a hearing on the amount of fees was scheduled. McGimpsey filed another motion to vacate the hearing and to establish a discovery schedule regarding attorney fees. That motion was denied at the beginning of the hearing, and the conservator's counsel testified as to reasonable attorney fees incurred because of McGimpsey's conduct. The court issued an order requiring McGimpsey to pay Bayers' estate $1,500 in attorney fees pursuant to this section, but McGimpsey filed another motion to alter or amend the order. That motion was also denied, and McGimpsey appealed to the Supreme Court, arguing that in a civil action such as this, all discovery and discovery disputes, including sanctions, should be governed by the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure and not by this section. Rules 34 and 37, M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), anticipate the existence of a dispute between opposing parties, but the underlying conservatorship proceeding in this case was not an adversarial proceeding. Formal discovery proceedings were not required for the conservator to obtain documents considered relevant to Bayers' estate. McGimpsey could have provided a straightforward answer as to whether he had any of the requested documents, but instead he chose to force a needless multiplication of proceedings and the pointless involvement of the District Court in the dispute. The court's conclusion that McGimpsey unreasonably and vexatiously prolonged the litigation was not in error. Because McGimpsey continued to force the matter to the Supreme Court, he was also held responsible under 37-61-421 for the conservator's expenses and attorney fees incurred in the appeal. In re Estate of Bayers, 2001 MT 49, 304 M 296, 21 P3d 3 (2001).

Counsel's Statements Not Considered Blatant Disregard of Motion In Limine — No Sanctions Assessed: Prior to trial, the District Court granted Renville's motion in limine to exclude from evidence hearsay statements in Renville's medical records made by Renville's mother, as well as statements from the records regarding welfare. However, during opening statements and during closing arguments, defense counsel referenced both. Renville requested a new trial and sanctions for counsel's disregard of the pretrial order and comments, but the motion was denied. On appeal, the Supreme Court declined to impose sanctions, finding that although counsel's statements appeared to violate the order in limine, they did not demonstrate a blatant disregard of the order and that, in light of other evidence, they did not unreasonably and vexatiously multiply the proceedings. Renville v. Taylor, 2000 MT 217, 301 M 99, 7 P3d 400, 57 St. Rep. 864 (2000).

Failure of Litigant to Provide Discovery and to Appear at Trial: Because husband failed to appear on the first hearing date and because he failed to provide the court and his wife with requested discovery material, the court properly ordered him to pay his wife's attorney fees and costs for the trial. His conduct was unreasonable and vexatious and multiplied the litigation by necessitating a second hearing. In re Marriage of Rager, 263 M 361, 868 P2d 625, 51 St. Rep. 91 (1994).

Attempt to Amend Complaint to Reach Insurance Coverage — Sanctions Unwarranted: The District Court assessed costs and attorney fees against defendant's attorneys who had filed an amended complaint in an attempt to present a new theory of negligence that would be covered by insurance. Even though the amended complaint did not present new issues or circumvent the insurance policy exclusions, it was not unreasonable or vexatious to attempt to amend the complaint in a way that would reach insurance coverage. Therefore, in this case, the imposition of sanctions constituted reversible error. Sheffield Ins. Co. v. Lighthouse Properties, Inc., 252 M 321, 828 P2d 1369, 49 St. Rep. 274 (1992).

Contingent Attorney Fees Recoverable: Defendant contended that an award of attorney fees was improper under this section because plaintiffs were represented on a contingent fee basis. The Supreme Court disagreed, finding that the liability for attorney fees did not arise from a fee contract between plaintiffs and their attorneys but from the liability based on the unnecessary multiplication of proceedings imposed by this section. Tigart v. Thompson, 244 M 156, 796 P2d 582, 47 St. Rep. 1532 (1990), followed in Rocky Mtn. Enterprises, Inc. v. Pierce Flooring, 286 M 282, 951 P2d 1326, 54 St. Rep. 1410 (1997).

Insurance Company as "Party" — Liability for Costs: Defendant contended that an award of attorney fees and costs under this section was improper because an insurance company was not a party within the meaning of this section and therefore could not be held responsible for attorney fees and costs. The Supreme Court affirmed the award, stating that if an insurance company may be held liable for the action of its attorney, as in Safeco Ins. Co. v. Ellinghouse, 223 M 239, 725 P2d 217 (1986), it is axiomatic that the insurer may be held responsible for costs, expenses, and attorney fees when the insurer unreasonably and vexatiously multiplies the proceedings in any case. Tigart v. Thompson, 244 M 156, 796 P2d 582, 47 St. Rep. 1532 (1990).

Withholding of Major Evidence and Violation of Principle of Pretrial Discovery — Costs Properly Awarded: Defendant contended that an award of attorney fees and costs under this section was improper because no sanctions were imposed by the trial court. The Supreme Court affirmed the award, noting that defendant's withholding of a major item of evidence prevented plaintiffs from receiving a fair trial and created unfair surprise and that the insurance company's tactic of concealing defendant's statements was at odds with the letter and spirit of pretrial discovery. The withholding was held to be unreasonable and vexatious, and the award of fees and costs was within the trial court's discretion. Tigart v. Thompson, 244 M 156, 796 P2d 582, 47 St. Rep. 1532 (1990).

Issue of Fees and Costs Not in Form of Final Order — Duty of Parties to Move for Dismissal: The District Court awarded certain fees and costs to plaintiffs pursuant to this section. However, the issue was not in the form of a final order, and thus the appeal was premature. There must be a final judgment from which an appeal may be taken before the Supreme Court is vested with jurisdiction. It is the duty of the attorneys involved in an appeal to bring the issue to the attention of the court. Tigart v. Thompson, 237 M 468, 774 P2d 401, 46 St. Rep. 974 (1989).

Sanctions Against Attorney Appropriate: Where an attorney was responsible for a retrial, attempted to cause a second mistrial, and blatantly disregarded court rulings throughout trial, sanctions were appropriate under this section. Kuhnke v. Fisher, 227 M 62, 740 P2d 625, 44 St. Rep. 895 (1987).

Architects' Handbook as Standard of Duty — Violation Not Negligence Per Se: Standards set out in the Architects' Handbook of Professional Practice were considered as evidence of a duty on the part of architects; however, violation of the standards did not constitute negligence per se. Taylor, Thon, Thompson & Peterson v. Cannaday, 230 M 151, 749 P2d 63, 45 St. Rep. 102 (1988).

Retention of Building Materials by Architects Not Violative of Professional Conduct or Consumer Protection Act: Architects who retained property and building materials from a building site after defendant failed to make contractual payments did not violate standards of professional conduct or commit unfair practices under the Montana Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act of 1973. Taylor, Thon, Thompson & Peterson v. Cannaday, 230 M 151, 749 P2d 63, 45

Architect Liable for Inadequate Specifications: There was sufficient evidence presented to the District Court to support its findings that the architect's water system specifications for a new school building were inadequate. A contractor is not responsible for errors or defects in the plans and is not liable, absent negligence on his part, when the owner's plans and specifications prove defective. *Ace Plumbing & Heating, Inc. v. Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

37-65-204. Rulemaking.Compiler's Comments

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 490, L. 1983, which enacted this section, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants the Board of Architects the authority to adopt rules implementing Title 37, Chapter 65.

Currently, the chapter of state statutes governing the licensing of architects contains no general grant of rulemaking authority such as those available to most other state agencies and licensing boards. The Board of Architects must therefore rely on the grants of rulemaking authority applicable to all boards contained in 37-1-131 which allows only the adoption of rules "governing licensing, certification, registration, and conduct of" architects, upon 37-1-136 allowing the board to adopt rules relating to disciplinary action, and upon 2-4-201 requiring every agency to adopt procedural rules. Thus, the board has no authority to adopt rules unauthorized by those sections of law. HB 490 grants the board general rulemaking authority to adopt any rule "necessary" to implement all previously existing statutes contained in Title 37, Chapter 65. Any such rules must be adopted under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act."

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment — Composite Section: Chapter 483 in definition of department substituted reference to department of labor and industry for reference to department of commerce and substituted "part 17" for "part 18". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Chapter 492 inserted definition of engineering survey; in definition of practice of land surveying inserted (h) regarding property line or boundary; in definition of professional engineer near end after "who has been" deleted "registered and"; in definition of professional land surveyor in (a) near beginning after "has been" deleted "registered and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 108 substituted engineer intern for engineer-in-training as defined term; substituted land surveyor intern for land surveyor-in-training as defined term; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (4) in middle, substituted "technique, analysis, and application of measuring land, skilled and educated in the principles of mathematically related physical and applied sciences" for "technique of measuring land, educated in the basic principles of mathematics, related physical and applied sciences"; in (7) before "performance", deleted "adequate" and before "knowledge", inserted "special"; in (7)(c) at end, inserted "and coordinate systems"; in (9) after "direct", inserted "charge and"; and in (1), (4), and (9), before "land surveyor(s)", inserted "professional".

1981 Amendment: Substituted "department of commerce" for "department of professional and occupational licensing" in (2); changed internal references to the department and the board.

37-67-102. Representation as practitioner to be considered as practice.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1)(b) near end after "professional engineer or is" substituted "licensed" for "registered"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1985 Amendment: In (2) in two places inserted "professional" before "land surveyor".

Part of Section Not Codified: A portion of section 66-2350(3), R.C.M. 1947, specifying what persons shall be construed to practice engineering, has not been codified in the MCA, as the Code Commissioner determined it to be redundant with subsection (2) of this section. However, it has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 17, Ch. 366, L. 1975.

37-67-103. Exemptions.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 196 in (2) at beginning of first sentence before "fee" inserted "application" and at end deleted "and must include the cost of one examination"; in (3) at end of second sentence deleted "and one examination" and in third sentence substituted "licensure and passage of the required examination as a professional engineer, the department shall issue" for "licensure as a professional engineer, an additional fee equal to the existing renewal fee must be paid before the issuance of"; in (4) near beginning before "fee" inserted "application" and after "board" deleted "and payment of an additional fee equal to the appropriate renewal fee"; in first sentence in (5) near beginning before "fee" inserted "application" and at end deleted "and must include the cost of one examination"; in (6) in third sentence near middle after "surveyor" substituted "and passage of the required examination, the department shall issue" for "an additional fee equal to the existing renewal fee must be paid before the issuance of"; in (7) at end of fourth sentence substituted "and passage of the required examinations, the department shall issue a license" for "an additional fee equal to the existing renewal fee must be paid before the issuance of a license"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 throughout section substituted "licensure" for "registration" and substituted reference to license for reference to certificate or certificate of registration; in (3) in second sentence near end after "intern certification" inserted "or licensure"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 108 throughout section substituted "engineer intern" for "engineer-in-training" and substituted "surveyor intern" for "surveyor-in-training"; in (4) substituted "national council of examiners for engineering and surveying" for "national council of engineering examiners"; in second sentence of (7), after "from another", substituted "jurisdiction" for "state"; and made minor changes in style.

1987 Amendment: At end of (1) substituted "the required references" for "not less than five references, of whom three or more shall be professional engineers or professional land surveyors having personal knowledge of his engineering or land surveying experience".

Applicability: Section 6, Ch. 72, L. 1987, provided: "This act applies to applicants for initial licensure on or after October 1, 1987."

1985 Amendment: Near end of (1) inserted "professional" before "engineers" and before "land surveyors"; and in three places in (6) and two places in (7) before "land surveyor", inserted "professional".

1981 Amendments: Chapter 345 deleted "but may not exceed $30, which" and inserted "and" after "prescribed by the board" in the first sentence of (2); deleted "but may not exceed $40" after "as prescribed by the board" near the beginning of (3); deleted "but may not exceed $50," after "as prescribed by the board" in the middle of (3); deleted "but not to exceed $60," after "a fee as prescribed by the board" near the beginning of (4); deleted "but may not exceed $30" after "as prescribed by the board" near the beginning of (5); deleted "but may not exceed $40" after "as prescribed by the board" near the beginning of (6); deleted "but may not exceed $50," after "the application fee is as prescribed by the board" in the middle of (6); deleted "but may not exceed $60" after "as prescribed by the board" near the beginning of (7); and deleted "but may not exceed $100" after "the application fee is as prescribed by the board" in the middle of (7).

Chapter 489 changed "cost of transfer" to "cost of verification" near the middle of (3) and (6); inserted "approval of the" before "application" and "and payment of an additional fee equal to the appropriate renewal fee" near the beginning of (4); deleted "No additional fee is required for issuance of a certificate." near the middle of (6); and made minor change in grammar.

Fees Prescribed by Board — 1981 Statement of Intent and Preamble: Chapter 345, L. 1981 (SB 412), which amended this section relating to the Board prescribing fees, contained a statement of intent and a preamble. For the texts see compiler's comments at 37-1-134.

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 422 (Ch. 408, L. 1979) provided in part: "Section 6 gives the board the authority to adopt fees not to exceed the various amounts listed. It is intended that the fees will not exceed amounts necessary to meet administrative costs." SB 422 was amended so that section 6 became section 5.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 at beginning substituted "A license fee" for "A registration or license fee" and after "local government on a person" substituted "licensed" for "registered". Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 108 after "license fee" substituted "or examination" for "or tax", substituted "by a local government" for "by a municipality or by any other political subdivision of the state", and after "chapter" inserted "to practice engineering or land surveying"; and made minor changes in style.

Attorney General's Opinions

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 throughout section substituted reference to license for reference to certificate of registration or certificate and substituted reference to licensee for reference to registrant; in (3) in first sentence substituted "licensure" for "registration" and at beginning of third sentence inserted "After the expiration of a license" and after "unlawful for" substituted "the licensee whose license has lapsed" for "a registrant"; in (3)(b) substituted "projects for which the licensee" for "after the expiration of a certificate or for projects for which the registrant"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 108 in (1), in first sentence, substituted "authority to engage in the practice of engineering or the practice of land surveying" for "authority to practice his profession"; in (4), in first sentence, substituted "engineer intern" for "engineer-in-training" and substituted "land surveyor intern" for "land surveyor-in-training", in second sentence, after "name", inserted "and status", and in third sentence, before "enrollment card", deleted "engineer-in-training or land surveyor-in-training"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (3) after "the legend "professional engineer"", substituted language of remainder of subsection (see 1985 Session Law) for former text that read: "and/or "land surveyor". Plans, specifications, plats, and reports prepared by a registrant shall when issued be certified, signed, and stamped with the seal or facsimile thereof. It shall be unlawful for a registrant to affix or permit his seal and signature or facsimile thereof to be affixed to any plans, specifications, plats, or reports after the expiration of a certificate or for the purpose of aiding or abetting any other person to evade or attempt to evade any provision of this chapter"; and throughout section, before "land surveyor", inserted "professional".

2003 Amendment: Chapter 271 in (2) at beginning inserted "Subject to subsection (5)"; inserted (5) to provide that this section may not be interpreted to conflict with 37-1-138; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 throughout section substituted reference to license for reference to certificate of registration or certificate and substituted "licensee" for "registrant"; and in (1) in second sentence substituted "licensed" for "registered". Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 107, in (2)(b), after "board rule", inserted "such as continuing education, which may require up to 15 professional development hours as prescribed by board rule and is generally patterned after the model rules of the national council of examiners for engineering and surveying"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (1) in fourth and fifth sentences, before "land surveyor" inserted "professional"; and in (2) near beginning, before "statement", deleted "verified".

1983 Amendment: Near beginning of (1), after "expire" substituted "every second year on the date established by rule of the department" for "on December 31 of the appropriate year"; near end of (1), after "may be made" substituted "prior to the expiration date" for "during the month of December of the appropriate year"; near beginning of (3), after "biennially" substituted "prior to the expiration date" for "in the month of December of the appropriate year"; in (4), after "certificate" substituted "prior to the expiration date" for "by December 31 of the appropriate year".

1981 Amendments: Chapter 345 deleted " , not to exceed $60 biennially," after "by the payment of a fee" in the last sentence of (1).

Chapter 489 deleted " , or both" after "professional engineer or land surveyor" in the fourth sentence of (1); added last sentence in (1) requiring Board to set fee for renewal of dual license; changed "additional renewal period" to "additional year of the biennium" near the end of (3); added subsection (4) providing for late renewal fee and prohibiting renewal until all fees are paid.

Fees Prescribed by Board — Statement of Intent and Preamble: Chapter 345, L. 1981 (SB 412), which amended this section relating to the Board prescribing fees, contained a statement of intent and a preamble. For the texts see compiler's comments at 37-1-134.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 422 (Ch. 408, L. 1979) provided in part: "Section 7 gives the board the authority to adopt rules that define the maintenance of competency. The rules shall provide that competency may be evidenced by either continued active practice or other activities.

As regards the continued practice alternative the rules should prescribe the number of hours of practice required during the 2 year renewal period and should define the types of activities which constitute active practice.

As regards the "other activities" alternative the following areas should be addressed:

(a) types of activities that will fulfill the requirements, including but not limited to classroom instruction, seminars, examinations, intrafirm or intracompany group study programs, or home study;

(b) standards for determining programs to be approved for fulfillment of the requirements such as adequacy of facilities, qualifications of instructors, and course content;

(c) the basic content and the procedure and passing grade for examinations, if any, required; and

(d) methods of monitoring compliance." SB 422 was amended so that section 7 became section 6.

Section Not Codified: Section 66-2362, R.C.M. 1947, a temporary provision providing for the continuation of effectiveness of registration certificates of persons licensed at the time of passage of Ch. 150, L. 1957, has not been codified in the MCA. However, the section has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 18, Ch. 150, L. 1957, as amended by sec. 10, Ch. 366, L. 1975.

Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 108 substituted current text concerning firms, partnerships, and corporations for former text that read: "(1) The practice of or offer to practice engineering or land surveying by registered professional engineers or registered professional land surveyors organized as a partnership or incorporated as a professional corporation under the provisions of the professional corporations law of this state or under the provisions of a similar law of any other state is permitted in this state if all the partners of the partnership or each officer and shareholder of the professional corporation are registered under or exempt from this chapter.

(2) The practice of or offer to practice engineering or land surveying by a partnership other than one provided for in subsection (1) or by a corporation, other than a professional corporation, is permitted in this state if:

(a) all officers, employees, and agents of a partnership or corporation who will perform the practice of engineering or land surveying within this state for the partnership or corporation are registered under this chapter;

(b) each person in responsible charge of the activities of a partnership or corporation, which activities constitute the practice of engineering or land surveying, is a professional engineer or professional land surveyor registered in this state or a person authorized to practice engineering or land surveying as provided in this chapter;

(c) the partnership or corporation has been issued a certificate of authorization by the board as provided in subsection (3);

(d) the partnership or corporation is jointly and severally responsible with and for the conduct or acts of its agents, employees, or officers concerning any professional engineering or land surveying services performed or to be executed in this state; an individual practicing engineering or land surveying is not relieved of the responsibility for his conduct or acts performed by reason of his employment by or relationship with the partnership or corporation; and

(e) all final drawings, specifications, plans, reports, or other engineering or land surveying papers or documents involving the practice of engineering or land surveying, when issued, are dated and bear the seals and signatures of the professional engineers or professional land surveyors registered under this chapter by whom or under whose responsible charge they were prepared.

(3) A partnership or corporation desiring a certificate of authorization or the renewal thereof shall file a written application with the board listing the names and addresses of all partners of the partnership or officers and directors of the corporation and the names and addresses of all employees who are registered to practice engineering or land surveying in this state and who are or will be in responsible charge of any engineering or land surveying in this state by the partnership or corporation, together with any other information the board requires. Upon the receipt of an application and of a fee in an amount established by the board for the initial certificate or biennial renewal thereof, the board shall issue to the partnership or corporation a certificate of authorization or a renewal thereof, which certificate of authorization may not be transferred. If the board finds an error in an application or that facts exist which would entitle the board to suspend or revoke a certificate if issued to the applicant, the board shall deny the application. If a change occurs in the information submitted on the application of a partnership or corporation within the term of the authorization, the partnership or corporation shall file with the board a written report listing the change within 30 days after the change occurs. The provisions of this chapter concerning issuance, expiration, renewal, and reissuance of certificates of registration of individuals, except for 37-67-315(2), apply to certificates of authorization issued to partnerships and corporations under this subsection. Partnerships or corporations are subject to disciplinary proceedings and penalties and the board may reprimand them or revoke, suspend, or refuse to renew their certificates of authorization for cause in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in 37-67-331. "Registrant" and "certificate of registration" in 37-67-331 include any partnership or corporation holding a certificate of authorization issued under this subsection and to such certificate of authorization."

Chapter 429 at end of sixth sentence in (3) substituted "provided in Title 37, chapter 1" for "provided in 37-67-331" and in seventh sentence, after "'Registrant'", deleted "and 'certificate of registration'" in 37-67-331" and after "subsection" inserted "and 'certificate of registration' includes"; and made minor changes in style. Part Case Notes

Failure to Conform With Literal Language of Administrative Rule Not Illegal and Therefore Not Justification for Breach of Contract: Lewis subcontracted to do the electrical work on five units being built by Huyser. In the first four units, some of the rough-in wiring was covered, but the electrical inspector did not require that all the wiring be visible even though the literal language of the administrative rule indicated that it should be. On the fifth unit, shelving had been installed before the inspection. Lewis insisted that it all be taken down, claiming that he could lose his license if it was not. Huyser had some of the shelving removed, exposing some of the rough-in wiring. Lewis refused to complete the work, and Huyser hired another electrician to complete the job. Lewis sued for payment, and Huyser counterclaimed. The lower court found for Huyser on the basis that the inspector had informed Lewis that he would not lose his license and that the inspector would accept part of the rough-in wiring being exposed. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the administrative rule should be reasonably interpreted to allow for waiver by the inspector of the requirement that all rough-in wiring be exposed. The Supreme Court further held that violation of the rule was not a statutory ground for losing an electrical license. The rule having been waived, the contract was not contrary to the policy of express law so that Lewis had a good faith duty to perform the remainder of the contract. Lewis v. Huyser, 264 M 141, 870 P2d 95, 51 St. Rep. 192 (1994).

CHAPTER 69 PLUMBERS

Chapter Administrative Rules

Title 8, chapter 44, ARM Board of Plumbers.

Chapter Case Notes

Dual Regulation Constitutional: Prior to enactment of subsection (3) of 50-60-506, concurrent regulation of plumbers by the state under 50-60-505 and by certain municipalities under 50-60-301 did not deny the plumbers due process or the equal protection of the law. The state regulatory system was a valid exercise of police power over a lawful business. Billings Assoc. Plumbing, Heating & Cooling Contractors v. Bd. of Plumbers, 184 M 249, 602 P2d 597, 36 St. Rep. 1996 (1979).

1985 Amendment: In (7)(a), at beginning inserted "Except as provided in subsection (7)(b)", and near middle after "premises" inserted "up to 20 feet beyond the building foundation line"; and inserted (7)(b) stating which services plumbing system does not include.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "department of commerce" for "department of professional and occupational licensing" in (2); and changed internal references to the department and the board.

Attorney General's Opinions

Interpretation of Plumber Licensing Statutes by Board of Plumbers — Licensing Authority Restricted by Statute — Intention of Legislature — Penalty Statute Inapplicable: The Board of Plumbers has the legal authority to interpret this chapter, and the interpretation by the Board must be given deference unless it is incorrect. In interpreting the plumbing licensing statutes, the intent of the Legislature must be determined, and if that intent can be understood from a plain reading of the statutes, there is no need to look further. The statutes as well as the statutory history clearly indicated that a plumber's license is required only for a person who is: (1) working in the field of plumbing in an incorporated city or town; (2) working in the field of plumbing in an area served by a public water supply or sewer system; or (3) working in the field of plumbing and connects or disconnects plumbing to or from a public water supply or sewer system, unless an exemption is granted. There is no penalty applicable to an unlicensed person for whom a license is not required by statute. 47 A.G. Op. 21 (1998).

License Requirements for Factory Workers Installing Plumbing in Modular Homes: The licensing requirement for plumbing is codified in 37-69-301. The definition of "field of plumbing" in 37-69-101 covers the work done at the factory. If the modular home in question is to be finally located "in any incorporated city, town, or in any other area served by a public water supply or a public sewer system in this state", another licensing requirement factor is met. The third factor leading to the requirement of a plumbing license is work as either a master plumber or as a journeyman plumber, as defined in 37-69-101, which is interpreted as doing the tasks one would be authorized to perform if he were licensed. Therefore, Montana factory workers who install, at the factory, plumbing in modular homes which are to be located "in any incorporated city, town, or in any other area served by a public water supply or a public sewer system in this state" must be licensed as plumbers under Title 37, ch. 69. 38 A.G. Op. 60 (1980). See also 47 A.G. Op. 21 (1998).

37-69-102. Permanent and temporary exceptions.Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 361 in (1)(a) near middle after "mobile home dealer" substituted "or a manufactured housing dealer connects a mobile home or a manufactured house" for "makes such installation" and after "existing" inserted "sanitary and potable water supply"; in (1)(c) inserted second sentence defining farm or ranch; in (1)(d) after "extending" inserted "repairing, or replacing"; inserted (1)(h) exempting installation of the pump, waterline, or pressure tank in the case of a private water supply; inserted (3) allowing an unlicensed person to perform temporary plumbing work under certain conditions; inserted (4) requiring withdrawal of the temporary authorization when a licensed person is reasonably available; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1985 Amendment: In (1)(c) substituted "in a farm or ranch not connected to public water supply" for "in farms or ranches having their own private water supply"; in (1)(d) substituted "in cities, towns, water districts, and water user associations" for "in cities and towns", and after "own" deleted "city"; inserted (1)(g) referring to water meter installation; and in (2) near end after "farms," substituted "or ranches not connected to public water supply" for "having their own individual water supply".

Public Utility Contractor Not to Install Certain Service Lines in Billings Unless Licensed by State as Plumber — City Required to Check License Qualifications:

In clarifying 44 A.G. Op. 12, the Attorney General noted that work done on a public water supply or public sewer system that does not include work falling within the statutory distances for plumbing or drainage systems does not require a state-issued plumber's license. Therefore, the city of Billings may not allow public utility contractors to install water service lines that extend from the public water main to a point within the walls of the private property or within 20 feet from any foundation wall of the premises, whichever distance is shorter as measured from the foundation wall, or wastewater service lines that extend from the public sewer main to a point within 2 feet from any foundation wall of the premises, unless the contractor also has a plumber's license issued by the state. 44 A.G. Op. 39 (1992).

The city of Billings may not allow public utility contractors to install water and wastewater service lines that extend from the public water or sewer main to a point within the walls of the private property or within 20 feet from any foundation wall of the private residence unless the contractor also has a plumber's license issued by the state. The city is required to determine whether a person applying for a plumbing permit pursuant to the Uniform Plumbing Code is licensed by the state as a plumber if the type of work described in the permit requires licensure as a requisite to performance. 44 A.G. Op. 12 (1991).

License Requirements for Factory Workers Installing Plumbing in Modular Homes: The licensing requirement for plumbing is codified in 37-69-301. The definition of “field of plumbing” in 37-69-101 covers the work done at the factory. 2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 196 deleted former (1) that read: "(1) An applicant for a master plumber's license may not submit to the examinations prescribed by the board until the applicant has deposited with the department an examination fee prescribed by the board, and an applicant for a journeyman plumber's license may not submit to the examination prescribed by the board until the applicant has deposited with the department an examination fee as prescribed by the board"; at beginning of (1) after "license" deleted "when issued"; and deleted former (3) that read: "(3) Fees prescribed by the board pursuant to this section must be reasonably related to the costs incurred by the board in carrying out its respective functions." Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Chapter 271 in (1) at beginning of first sentence inserted "Subject to subsection (2)"; inserted (2) to provide that this section may not be interpreted to conflict with 37-1-138; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 63, Ch. 271, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences after December 31, 2002."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (2), in first sentence after "when issued expires", deleted "each year", in second sentence, after "may be renewed", deleted "annually", and in third sentence substituted "established by the department by rule" for "of 1 year"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1983 Amendment: In (2), after "issued expires" substituted "each year on the date established by rule of the department" for "1 year from the date of issuance".

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 458 (Ch. 549, L. 1979) provided: "Section 6 allows the board to prescribe examination and renewal fees. This must be done by rule. It is intended that an examination fee will not exceed the cost of administering the examination for which it is paid, and that a renewal fee will not exceed other administrative costs."

Attorney General's Opinions

Interpretation of Plumber Licensing Statutes by Board of Plumbers — Licensing Authority Restricted by Statute — Intention of Legislature — Penalty Statute Inapplicable: The Board of Plumbers has the legal authority to interpret this chapter, and the interpretation by the Board must be given deference unless it is incorrect. In interpreting the plumbing licensing statutes, the intent of the Legislature must be determined, and if that intent can be understood from a plain reading of the statutes, there is no need to look further. The statutes as well as the statutory history clearly indicated that a plumber's license is required only for a person who is: (1) working in the field of plumbing in an incorporated city or town; (2) working in the field of plumbing in an area served by a public water supply or sewer system; or (3) working in the field of plumbing and connects or disconnects plumbing to or from a public water supply or sewer system, unless an exemption is granted. There is no penalty applicable to an unlicensed person for whom a license is not required by statute. 47 A.G. Op. 21 (1998).

Malmstrom Air Force Base — Enforcement: By the authority granted the state by 2-1-202, the plumbers licensing law may be enforced on Malmstrom Air Force Base as to nonfederal entities so long as application of state law does not interfere with the U.S. government's use of the property for military purposes. 38 A.G. 2001 Amendment: Chapter 483 in definition of department after "department of" substituted "labor and industry" for "commerce"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 514 in (2)(c) substituted "commerce" for "labor and industry"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 83 in (2)(d) changed "50-38-101" to "61-1-506"; and deleted (2)(e) that read: "(e) 'magazine' has the meaning given in 50-38-101".

Chapter 613 in (1) changed "workers' compensation division" to "department"; inserted definition of Department; and deleted definition of Division. Amendment effective on the earlier of signing of executive order creating state compensation mutual insurance fund (now state compensation insurance fund) or January 1, 1990.

1987 Amendment: At end of (4) changed "82-4-231(3)(e)" to "82-4-231(10)(e)".

References to Repealed Section: The cite to 50-38-101 in (2)(d) and (2)(e) was bracketed by the Code Commissioner because 50-38-101 was repealed by Ch. 187, L. 1985. Chapter 187, L. 1985, gave the State Fire Marshal (now state fire prevention and investigation program of the Department of Justice) the authority to adopt rules relating to explosives in 50-3-102(3). For a definition of "explosives" amended to conform to the repeal and subsequent grant of rulemaking authority, see 45-8-332.

Name Change — Code Commissioner Instruction: Section 64, Ch. 613, L. 1989, provided that in the provisions of the Montana Code Annotated, the terms "division of workers' compensation", "division", and "workers' compensation division" are changed to "department of labor and industry" or "department", meaning the "department of labor and industry". Such change was made in this section.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 402, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it requires the adoption of rules by the workers' compensation division of the department of labor and industry."

The legislature intends that the division adopt only those rules required by sections 9 [37-72-201] and 10 [37-72-202] of this bill.

The rules adopted by the division to implement section 3 [37-72-302] should require the submission of all training information on an affidavit on which the applicant must either list the name, place, and dates of attendance of a training school approved by the division and published in its list of approved schools or give sufficient information to allow the division to judge the content and quality of the program.

Because of the highly dangerous nature of the business regulated by this legislation, the legislature intends that all persons, except those already holding licenses and qualifying under the provisions of section 13 [not codified], must comply with section 2(2)(a) through (2)(d) [37-72-301(2)(a) through (2)(d)], whether applying for an initial license by examination, reexamination under section 4(3) [37-72-303(3)], or licensure by other jurisdictions under section 6 [37-72-305]. Fees for reexamination within 2 years of the initial examination should be less than fees for the initial examination because no training and experience information need be reviewed and verified.

In developing rules on the use of explosives under sections 9 [37-72-201] and 10 [37-72-202], it is intended that the division pay particular attention to the publication entitled "Suggested Code of Regulations", published by the institute of makers of explosives (IME), in addition to any industry recommendations or publications by other states, and that the division accept in satisfaction of the provisions of section 3 [37-72-302] successful completion of training programs conducted by IME and explosives manufacturers such as Du Pont and Atlas and other companies that have developed comprehensive training programs for the handling and use of explosives.

Rules adopted under section 10(5) [37-72-202(5)] are intended to be only such procedural rules as the division needs to receive applications, act on variance requests, conduct revocation hearings, and so forth."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."
